The young folks throughout the county seem to be having a gay time at present.

The holidays have been no drag in Boone, if the information we have is in the least reliable.

Our Bellevue correspondent reports the death of Mrs. Polly Rice, probably the oldest lady in the county.

The other day we heard a man remark that this snow is a good "layer." We should like to see one of the eggs.

Our matrimonial editor has been on the bound all this week, and another column shows what he has collated.

We have taken an inventory of our Christmas and New Year's gifts, and find that they amount to 000,000.

The entertainments at Mr. Berkle's and Mr. Malory's, last week, were highly enjoyed by those who attended them.

The social gathering at Mr. Joe. O. Campbell's, last 3-star night, was one of the most enjoyable affairs of the week.

We are glad to see our young friend, Char Hughes on the street again. Charley came out in time to see the last agonies of the holidays.

Weddings and Christmas trees have been the rage for the past week. They are both very nice for those who have a fancy for such things.

He turned over a leaf—yes, two of them. They were laden with dimes and victuals, and he got an application that was warming to the extremity.

The wife of Judge Riddell is lying quite sick at her residence, near Hebron, but by the skillful treatment of Dr. J. C. Terrell, hopes soon to recover.

The jingle of sleigh bells has scarcely ceased for the past week. Every old slide and sleigh in the country has been brought into use by the ruralists.

Navigators have been utterly suspended in the Ohio River for several days. The unusual amount of water in the river, however, prevented its being entirely blocked.

The messenger who brought us a box of cake sent in by Mr. Parsons, says he got a "smell" of the contents as he plodded along. It is a wonder he did not plunder the package.

The school exhibition at the Florence X-Roads school-house, on Christmas eve, was well attended despite the severe weather. The Hebron Brass Band furnished music for the occasion.

The game of chess now in progress between Burlington and Florence will be reported each week while the game continues. Burlington plays with the white men, and made the first move.

The Christmas Festival

The Christmas tree at Florence was as attractive as the labor of nimble fingers and willing hands could make it.

The Christmas tree at Florence X-Roads was here pronounced as very handsome, and a credit to those who had control of the affair.

Belleuve enjoyed its first Christmas tree this year, and we hear it was a grand success in every particular. It contained an abundance of nice presents, which were distributed among the large crowd that jammed the room.

was opened. Belleuve is rapidly coming to the front, and we prophesy for her a bright future.

Although the temperature ranged extremely low, Christmas day, a large crowd assembled in the church at Hebron to witness the distribution of the numerous and beautiful presents with which the Christmas tree under the auspices of the Hebron Sabbath-school was laden. First on the programme were several pieces of sacred music, adapted to the occasion, and which were well rendered and invariably applauded by the audience. Before the conclusion of the musical exercises, Mr. Tanner, the Superintendent, made a few remarks in regard to the financial needs of the school, and concluded by introducing a Mr. Wilson, who declared a piece which treats upon the value of money when rightly applied. This declaration was followed by the contribution box, which, being passed among the congregation, reported at headquarters tolerably well replenished. Mr. Cleve Hanks was deputized by Santa Claus to pick the fruit from the tree. Cleve made a handsome and faithful representative, and performed the duties assigned him in a very graceful manner. Santa's comical appearance, and the traditions taught the children, rendered him a character of considerable admiration among the younger class, which was on tiptoe in anticipation of the presents. The afternoon was most pleasantly spent by all who had the courage to face the cold breeze that came rushing in from the north, and all agreed the tree was a success.

Personal Mention.

Miss Mary Lyon, of Covington, was a guest of Mrs. F. Riddell, Monday.

MAT CAMPBELL, who has been absent from the town of his youth for some time, has returned.

MR. EMMETT GULLION, of Liberty Station, Carroll County, spent a portion of the holidays in our town.

MISS SALLIE RICE, of Kenton County, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. W. F. McKim, for several days.

DR. B. F. STEPHENSON and his three daughters, Miss Julia, Miss Cora and Mrs. Kate Lewis, arrived at Mr. Cather nee Tuesday last Saturday. The Doctor returned to his home Monday, leaving his three daughters here.

On the 24th ult., a negro man and his son, of this place, were hauling in their supply of holiday fuel, when the sled they were using broke down. The father accused the son of breaking the sled by careless driving, and as a punishment for it, declared he should not go home to the fire till he repaired the sled sufficiently to bring the load of wood, when he went home and left the boy to the mercy of the weather. After some time the boy made his way home with crippled sled and in a semi-frozen condition himself, being hardly able to get to the fire.

His escort was in the store buying stock of pompons and candy kisses, when a little urchin came rushing up to the rear of the sleigh for the purpose of making fast his sled for a ride; but she called him a "little red-head," and ordered him not to come near the sleigh. The shaver halted, and dropping his head to one side and giving his dirty up-per lip a contemptible curl, snarled out: "It's not nothing but an old country sleigh, no how!" And, turning upon his heel, he pranced off to find something supporting more style than a country turn-out.

THE M. Pleasant Grange, at its last regular meeting, elected the following officers for the ensuing year, and will install them on the second Saturday in this month, at which time a full attendance is desired: J. A. Dunham, M.; John Stephens, O.; S. A. Mannin, S.; Ben Stephens, S.; A. C. Grady, L.; Oscar Gaines, Treas.; W. W. Watz, G. K.; Wm. Gaines, Secretary; E. J. Gaines, P. M.; Van Groves, Flora; Fannie Cropper, Cor.; Mrs. Mannin, L. A. S.

A NUMBER of the Burlingtonites chartered the "bus one night during Christmas, and enjoyed an excursion to the country, the residence of Dr. J. F. Smith being the terminus of the excursion, and where an oyster supper was one grand feature of the evening's enjoyment. The Doctor and lady entertain so handsomely that the young folks are always glad when they can plan a call on them.

THE weather for the past fortnight has been such as requires the farmer to give his stock more attention than usual, the animals being entirely dependent upon the ration the industrious farmer provided for them during the nice weather this fall, and a slight neglect at this season on the part of the feeder will have a bad effect on the condition of the stock.

LAST Sunday the appointments of Rev. J. W. Henley, Universalist, and Rev. E. D. Shaw, Methodist, collided, the two ministers meeting at the M. E. Church Sunday morning for the purpose of conducting services. The collision was pleasantly settled by Mr. Henley occupying the pulpit in the morning, and Mr. Shaw in the evening.

We are glad to see our young friend, Quddie Bradford, getting a liberal patronage from the farmers, and hope they will remember him when they want anything in the line of saddles and harness.

Married.

CARPENTER—WILHOIT—On the 20th ult., in Florence, Mr. Butler Carpenter and Miss Della Wilhoit.

May the sunshine of contentment and happiness illuminate their path through life.

GIBBS—RIDDLEL—On the 25th ult., at the residence of the bride's father, near Hebron, by Rev. W. B. Barrett, Mr. E. W. Gibbs, of Illinois, and Miss Lizzie Riddlel.

The bride and groom will return to Illinois, where they will make their future home. They have the best wishes of all the friends who they leave behind.

THOMPSON—HENRY—At the Hebron Church, on the 26th ult., by Rev. W. O. Barrett, Mr. Jas. K. Thompson, of Kenton County, Ky., and Miss Emma L. Henry.

A very large number of friends assembled to witness the ceremonies, which, being performed, the happy pair repaired to the residence of the groom's father, in Covington, where they were given a magnificent reception.

WILLIAMSON—HOPPER—On the 25th ult., at the residence of Elder H. J. Foster, Montgomery Williamson and Mrs. H. Hopper.

It seems that Mr. Williamson and lady had some difficulty in obtaining the services of a minister, they intending to be married in the church at Bellevue; but, on account of the ice being so heavy, the Rev. A. M. Yandiman could not put in an appearance, and as a last resort, hastened to Burlington, where they were united in the holy bond by the above named minister and went on their way rejoicing. We wish "Gum" much joy.

SANDFORD—BEENON—On the 25th ult., in Lawrenceburg, Ind., Mr. Timothy H. Sandford and Miss Mary Jane Beeson, all of Ohio.

The above marriage was accomplished under difficulties, the parents objecting and the weather, they intending to be married at all propriety for an engagement. The groom, accompanied by a witness, succeeded in stealing the bride from the residence of her father at an early hour in the night of the 24th, taking her to the residence of a neighbor, from whence they started very early in the morning for the city of Lawrenceburg. They were thoroughly chilled when they arrived at the ferry, having traveled some nine miles, and were surprised to find the river nearly blocked with ice, which it was feared would block the game they were playing on the parents. Captain Huff was aroused from his slumbers, and when informed of the mission of the party, consented to make an effort to cross them to the Hoosier shore, where they could be united in matrimony without any questions being asked. The skiff was soon launched, and the party of five or six commenced struggling to force their way through the immense field of ice that was at that time passing. After three hours' hard labor, Captain Huff landed them safely on the Indiana shore, where, in much less time than it took them to cross the Ohio, they were united in the holy bonds of wedlock. It seems that the dangerous condition of the river at the time the wedding party arrived at the ferry was only a test of the courage of the determined couple, for on their return they were not interrupted in the least by the ice. This is the most romantic wedding we have heard of for some time.

LAST Monday evening, the residence of Miss Julia Dinsmore, near Bellevue, was the scene of one of the gayest and most sociable collections of young folks that meet during the holidays. Various parlor games, and the merry dance were the amusements of the occasion, and the guests were so highly entertained that the parting hour was most an welcome comer.

On the 27th ult., Burlington Lodge No. 264, F. and A. M., elected the following officers for the ensuing year: W. T. German, W. M.; Fred Thomas, S. W.; Edgar Cropper, J. W.; L. H. Dille, Treasurer; W. F. Riddell, Sec.; J. M. Palmer, T. F. Riddell was appointed S. D., and Everett Wald, J. D.

We hear of a style of sleigh called "the straddler." It seems that the driver rides astride the seat, which travel and foremost, till the shafts break and the horse trots off leaving the driver sitting "a-straddler" of the seat, which is generally made of a log split in halves. The conveyance has a rustic appearance.

THE boys are rather reticent about the game of chess they played with the Florence boys on last Saturday, but they give us to understand that they intend to play him a game by mail, which, if not now in progress, will be in a few days. We have heard of no pools being sold on the result of the game.

THE School Commissioner, Mr. L. C. Yager, was in town last Saturday to pass upon applications for certificates to teach common schools in this county. There were no applications made. It seems that all the schools in the county are taken.

We will gamble on Burlington's not being able to have a mum social. It would be utterly impossible for some of the girls—and boys too—to keep from speaking. One social of that kind would bankrupt all who participated.

In another column will be found the advertisement of the Cincinnati Dining Rooms. One of the proprietors, Rev. J. W. Henley, is well known in this section, and would be glad to see you at dinner time when in the city.

We wish to return thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Oba. Parsons and Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Gibbs for the nice cake that, after having graced the tables at their nuptials, found its way to our tables.

It is publicly announced on the streets that our town is about to lose two or three of its most gallant young men. We console ourselves with the thought that what we lose Rising Sun will gain.

We don't want to startle anyone by proclaiming that Burlington has some amateur theatricals. They have given one or two performances, but only before select audiences.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Flickertown: That

will become a considerable business point, there is no town of much importance nearer than four or five miles, and as several public roads intersect the place near here.

The most notable event of the week was the marriage of Mr. Robert Nichols and Miss Katie Hendrix. The solemn rite was performed by Rev. James A. Kirtley, in the presence of a large number of guests. After the usual congratulations, all were invited to partake of the excellent supper which had been prepared for the occasion.

Bellevue: December 30.—Winter has come in upon us at last, and we are sensible of the fact by the icy touch of his frosty fingers about our ears and nostrils. Snow, Sleighs, sleds and all kinds of sliding vehicles have been put in use in the last few days. Our young folks are enjoying the good sleighing immensely, and unfortunately, indeed, on more than one occasion, have seen some one of our good citizens take a square set down and begin looking about as if trying to count the many stars that suddenly appeared before their eyes.

Last Tuesday was the coldest day we have had so far, the thermometer indicating 10° below 0. The river is full of floating ice, and on more than one occasion, has been present. For a several days crossing with a skiff has been difficult. The frozen ice in the river is nearly eight inches thick. We are not heartened of any of our citizens putting up and running a business with a skiff waiting for the ice to thaw before they haul an art store.

On Christmas day, the little folks belonging to the Hebron church were treated to a Christmas tree in the new church. Several of them received very beautiful presents, as did also the pastor of the church.

On Friday, the 27th ult., Bellevue Lodge No. 644, F. and A. Snyder, J. W.; R. L. Aylor, Treas.; John W. Rice, Sec.; John M. Henderson, S. and T.

Madam—Homer says that Mr. Billy Riggs has gone to Hebron for the "comforter" which she had to much to do about a few weeks since; while she says "St. Peter, the basket maker, has fled the country and left a void behind that no other can ever fill.

We have just heard that Mrs. Polly Rice died last night, at her home with Mr. J. P. Ryle. She was one of the oldest citizens in this part of the county, her age being about 85 years. We have not learned the particulars of her death.

The Grangers are engaged in invoicing the goods in their store here, preparatory to their January settlement.

On yesterday we saw two very large bald eagles flying about the landing. They were splendid specimens of the Bird of Liberty.

Personal.—Last Friday we met the able Professor of Ashby Park University on our street. Miss Fannie Henderson is home from her school spending the holidays with her relatives and friends.—Jennie Deck spent a few days at home.—Mrs. Mike Rice is still slowly improving from her long and severe spell of sickness.

PAYETTE HEWITT.

of Hardin County, is a Candidate for

AUDITOR OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.

It is now prophesied that next season will be a good crop year.

Snow is preferable to mud, and we are getting a majority of the next.

The brigade of snow shovelers was out in full force again Wednesday morning.

The Republican State Convention will be held in Louisville on the 10th of next May.

The Assessor has employed an assistant and will commence business on next Monday.

Resumption did not demolish every branch of business as was expected by many, but slid off like it was greased.

Congress will commence stirring up the nation again now, as the members are about over their holiday drunk.

The hostile parties in Breathitt have not met since the soldiers arrived in Jackson. This winter has been a very severe one for campaigning.

Gold dollars are not popular in Washington city. Their dimensions are too small for convenience, and the people prefer the white dollars.

This has been an unusually severe winter on the poorer class in the cities, and was the hand of charity lax, the most severe suffering would be the result.

The proposition to connect Cincinnati and Covington by means of a free bridge was defeated in last Saturday's election in Covington by a large majority.

SHERIDAN has got his back up about the bill which proposes to reorganize the army. Probably he don't want to see so many of the boys discard the shoulder-straps.

The Lexington Transcript says that Judge William Lindsay will not be a candidate for Governor, being satisfied with his law practice and determined to pursue it closely.

By the Moffit Liquor Law, the Treasury of Virginia has been increased one hundred and ten thousand dollars in the past twelve months. That's the way to punch the revenue out of the liquor.

One of the Vanderbilt heirs is taking steps to have the Executors of the Vanderbilt will removed. The petition charges William H. Vanderbilt with speculating in stocks on a gigantic scale, and using the assets of the estate as collaterals.

The Louisville Courier-Journal issued a mammoth sheet on New Year's morning. We have skirmished around on the outside of it, and shall tackle the inside as soon as the weather moderates sufficiently for us to go out into the country to unfold it.

The conduct of Major Reno, who commanded a force near the place of the Custer massacre and at that very time, is to be inquired into. The inquiry is to be made at the request of Reno, he being charged with cowardice, which charges he expects to refute.

The Sheriff of Kenton County, J. Frank Lowe, failed to execute his official bonds, last Monday, as required by law, and at midnight Monday night the County Judge declared the office vacant. Lowe could not give the surety required. His successor has not been appointed.

The members of the Indiana Legislature are all being interviewed on the Senatorial question, and some of the Voorhees men are beginning to feel shaky about the knees. There is no cause for immediate alarm, however, although the situation does appear to be rather mixed.

Business in the merchandise market has been only moderate, but somewhat increased. The receipts of cattle at the beginning of the week were rather light, but the market was steady and firm all around. There was a large increase in the receipts of hogs, but the quality was not an average, and the price for extra stuff ranged a shade higher.

The County Court has decided to give the proposition to sell the Poor-house property a rehearing, and appointed a committee, Monday, to take the matter under advisement. It will be remembered that a committee for the same purpose was appointed one or two years since, but failed to accomplish anything. There is evidently a desire to change the present mode of keeping the Poor-house, and, to some extent, have those lodged therein, to assist in sustaining themselves. There are often persons who seek admission to the Poor-house as a place of retirement and to avoid having to labor, while on the other hand many who go there are real objects of charity, and are the proper persons to be looked after. The first mentioned class, if made labor as much as they are able, will be greatly decreased, and the expenses of the county reduced to some extent. It is seldom that there is a male inmate of the Poor-house who is not able to do something in the way of light labor, and who would not be in a better condition physically. Should the Court determine to make the Poor-house self-supporting as possibly, and lease it out, it may have some difficulty in having the keeper to not overtax the strength of the inmates in his desire to make it a source of profit to him. For some time the County Court has been contemplating a change in the present mode of caring for the poor, and it is evident that a change of property is the first thing necessary, and what is now proposed to be investigated. If such a change is effected and the institution leased out, the lessor will find he has a very unreliable lot of laborers.

Our Petersburg correspondent this week chronicles the death of the last survivor of Perry's famous victory on Lake Erie, Mr. John Norris. Mr. Norris was 87 years old when he died, and had, until the past two years, enjoyed good health, being very fleshy, which rendered his traveling about very laborious to him. Our readers are familiar with the interview regarding the part he took in Perry's victory, and which we recently published. Mr. Norris was a brave soldier in the hour of his country's peril, and a good citizen in the time of peace. Some of the events of his life are indelibly written on the pages of time, and his memory will ever be cherished by those left behind.

It is but a short time till the Louisville Convention, and many of the counties have ordered their Conventions for instructing delegates to meet at an early day. Several have already instructed their delegations. Now is it not about time this county was taking steps looking to a disposition of that business? It may be that an early action in the matter will materially benefit those candidates for whom it shall instruct.

BECKNER, of the Clark County Democrat, and C. J. Bronston, candidate for Commonwealth's Attorney in the Tenth Judicial District, are wading into each other with printer's ink at a lively rate. Bronston, it seems, has forgotten that the pen is mightier than the sword, and intimates that he may resort to the code duello. The Governor should send troops over into Clark immediately.

DR. SCOTT was the only candidate for a State office that was in town last Monday. Boone has not been the resort of candidates this campaign. Some few of them have called upon the dear people, and their scarcity leads us to believe they know pretty well how Boone's vote will be cast in the May Convention. We believe her vote will be a unit for every office.

Quite a number of our friends called in Monday and renewed their subscriptions, while others came in and subscribed. Some of them remarked that before they commenced taking the paper that they were totally ignorant as to how the county affairs are administered, but now they say they see how and when their taxes are applied.

The Sheriff executed his bonds, Monday, as required by law, and increased his force of deputies by having B. K. Sleet sworn and installed. It seems the collections are unprecedently slow, but at the same time the Auditor expects the boys to pay over to the State Treasurer, promptly.

The matter of a Work-house, in which to confine persons found guilty of misdemeanors is a subject worthy the serious consideration of an intelligent community. The present mode of punishing misdemeanors is expensive and inefficient.

$30,000 of the money stolen by the defaulting Secretary, Angell, of the Pullman Palace Car Company has been recovered and Angell will be returned to this country for trial.

When you sent your boy out to the field to feed the stock, last week, he didn't anchor himself on top the fence and sing "Sweet By and By," and a dozen or two other of his Sunday-school songs, but dashed into the fodder "shock" and gave the hungry steer half rations, and then hurried back home to consult with cold water and a bottle of Chinese liniment.

On the morning of the 31st, Gen. Grant was given a rousing reception in Dublin. In his speech on that occasion he boasted that when he was in office he had the honor of representing the Irishmen than does the Queen of England. The citizens of Cork do not fancy the General's opinions of the Catholic religion, and, therefore, did not make any enthusiastic demonstrations when they were informed that he anticipated visiting them while near.

The Louisville Courier-Journal says Indiana's school fund amounts to $9,000,000, and $4,000,000 are given every year by the people to keep the schools, while the school property is valued at $12,000,000. This gratifying progress in educational matters has been brought about in twenty-six years. It would be a very excellent plan for Kentucky to make a start in public education this new year, which, twenty-six years from now, will result in such figures as Indiana can show.

SOME of the Democratic managers in Washington consider that Senator Thurman has made a fatal mistake in refusing to allow his name used in connection with the race for Governor of the State of Ohio. They are of the opinion he is the proper man to make the gubernatorial battle there, which if he succeeds in saving will be a feather in his Presidential plume. John Sherman, it is said, is particularly anxious to lead the host on the outside. Sherman and Thurman would make the Ohio welkin ring, and make the contest one of unusual warmth, as the fight would bear directly upon the Presidential campaign which would follow immediately in its wake.

It is seldom that anyone except an insane person commits murder in this country. So soon as a man kills one of his fellow creatures it is evident that he is not in his right mind, and his associates soon collect evidence enough to sustain the insanity plea upon which the friends of the accused rely. In these days of perjury and false swearing, the strongest minded man can be proven a perfect lunatic, for the sum of twenty dollars. This assumed lunacy could be very considerably reduced, and that too in a very short time, by hanging every lunatic who takes the life of a fellow man. The insanity plea is an acknowledgment of the guilt of the accused party, and a confession that an application of hemp is needed.

It is recently reported by the United States Consul at Barcelona that the first cargo of American wheat arrived there in November, and was pronounced on Exchange to be as good as that from the Black Sea, and farther, that charters were entered into by one firm for three cargoes more. The cargo above mentioned consisted of about 72,000 bushels, which sold for $1.85 per bushel. It was supposed that twenty-five cargoes, in all, would arrive from the United States during the season. This new market for wheat is an important one. Indeed, our products and manufactures are finding their way rapidly to all parts of the world, but are transported in vessels that are the property of other countries.

The severe cold weather through which we have just passed, it is said, is only equalled by that of 1819. The 1st day of January, 1864, it will be remembered was a stinging cold day, and more particularly noticeable because of the sudden descent in the temperature, the mercury falling about 74° in twenty-four hours. The day previous to the sudden change was rather warm, and when the mercury got down to its lowest it seemed that every body would freeze. That was but a single day, whereas the present has been a protracted spell and everything has been thoroughly chilled. In some parts of the United States the mercury has ranged as low as 28° degrees below zero, and in some instances persons have been frozen to death while out at work. Business in many places was suspended on account of the cold.

The committee appointed to examine the Poor-house and penitentiary reported, in substance, that the house consists of four rooms, all of which need repairs badly; that male and female, white and black, are compelled to occupy the same rooms; that the fencing on the farm is terribly out of repair, and that there is no timber of which to make rails to repair the fencing; that it will not be long before the farm will be entirely shut out from the public road. LAST Monday, Thomas Bruce, who lives on Middle creek, came to town, and during the day got on the outside of such a quantity of sugar juice as to render his ambulatory movements exceedingly doubtful, as well as difficult. It was very late in the afternoon when Tom concluded he would cross and left town in a top-hat condition. About dark someone told Mr. J. F. Blythe that Bruce was lying in the snow near the first bridge on the Bellevue pike. Jerry started after him but met a negro who told him Bruce had got on again and gone on home, so he retraced his steps. Timothy Howe, one of the doctors at the hotel, was not satisfied as to Bruce's safety, and started out on the road in the direction he had gone, to see what had become of him. He had gone but little beyond where it was first reported Bruce was lying, when he discovered the object of his search prostrated in the snow, apparently dead. Timothy lost no time in summoning Mr. Hoffman and Mr. Hogen who lived near to his assistance, and brought the apparently frozen man back to town in a helpless condition. It was some two hours after being brought in, before it could be cold whether he would live or die. Some time elapsed before medical aid and advice arrived. During this interval instructions and willing hands were trying to inflate the feeble spark of life which had been discovered. Dr. Grant made his appearance and took charge of the patient, who, in an hour or so, was again launched upon the sea of life. Tom is again all right again.

John Finn, the reader on Walpole, got around his much coveted feline, which he started home with, but got lost in a snow-drift near the residence of Dr. Smith. Fortunately for John he was discovered before chilled to death, and taken to Dr. Smith's, and thawed out. The cold extracted all the starch in Finn's anatomy, and after coming to the house he had no use of himself, and could stand on end about like a string.

Those two young men narrowly escaped an untimely death, and it is to be hoped they will profit by their recent experience, and henceforth shun the intoxicating cup.

OUR Rabbit Hash corresponds says that Mr. Joe Riggs, while crossing the river in the ice, froze his foot so that amputation will be necessary.

HENRY HOFFMAN's shirt sleeves were frozen off last Friday night. Fortunately for Henry he didn't have the shirt on. It was hanging on a line out doors.

For some time Mr. Miles J. Rouse had been missing money, which he had put in a drawer in his room, and suspicion pointed to the above mentioned boy as the guilty party; and on the day aforesaid Noah was discovered in the house and in the room where the money was kept. He left the room by way of a window looking out on a porch, from the top of which he jumped to the ground and commenced his flight, but was hotly pursued by Mr. Rouse, who captured him after about a mile's chase and having shot him in the calf of the leg with a revolver. The prisoner was brought to town and tried, and lodged in jail in default of bail.

BURLINGTON, KY., JANUARY 9.

The Difference in Wheat.
Until quite recently fall wheat has always been preferred for grinding into flour for bread. It grows the slowest and is longest on the ground, and the proportion of gluten is much greater than in wheat sown in the spring. It is altogether preferable in southern climates, and the flour from it brings a much higher price, while it is said to keep sweet and free from weevil much the longest.

Now some of the Michigan millers and flourmen are weighing 196 pounds of the starchy winter wheat flour of Minnesota and the North will make 270 to 280 pounds of bread, while the winter wheat flour of Michigan will not make more than 240 pounds. Is this credible? If so, is the bread from both equally nutritious and "filling" as food? We would like to know what the experienced and able managers of the Prairie Farmer say to this, which is certainly news to most of us.

Can this be true? If so, it ought to be more generally known. It is quite probable that Michigan winter wheat flour makes less bread than Southern Illinois winter wheat flour when the climate is drier. While this is a novel way of testing flour, it is certainly a correct one. These millers state that flour made from choice Lancaster wheat yielded 331 pounds of bread. Flour made from Wabash River wheat yielded 308 1/2 pounds of bread for "straight," and 310 1/2 pounds for "patent" processes— "lowa" in Prairie Farmer.

The largest and best farm in the United States was probably that of Mr. M. L. Sulivant, of Champaign County, Illinois. He had forty thousand acres. It was all rich and productive soil of the very best class, and was all in cultivation, and the papers of the United States have teemed with description and praises of its productions. Mr. Sulivant was no novice in the business. He had learned farming thoroughly and well on the Scioto bottoms, near Columbus, Ohio. Not satisfied with a reasonable prosperity there, he ventured his already accumulated thousands in this large enterprise in Illinois. For a season his vanity was satisfied, for he got largely noticed in the papers. But he failed badly and hopelessly. His real estate had to be surrendered to the mortgagees, and the assignee of the personal property had an immense sale on the 31st of October and the 1st of November. The estate failed to meet the liabilities by over $100,000. Everything was sold, and the greatest corn king of the world is homeless and homeless for himself and family. His farming has been on the most colossal scale, but it would not pay expenses, and it is not likely commencing on so extensive a scale will be tried again soon. The estate will probably be divided up into small farms of 100 or 250 acres each. This is one of the saddest lessons of ambitious farming, and one which should have its beneficial effects in warning others who might be tempted to follow in the footsteps.—Iowa State Register.

Beauties and Attractions of Farm Life.
It is a common complaint that the farm and farm life are not appreciated by our people. We long for the more elegant pursuits, or the ways and the fashions of the town. But the farmer has the most sane and natural occupation, and ought to find life sweeter, if less highly seasoned than any other. He alone, strictly speaking, has a home. How can a man take root and thrive without land? He writes his history upon the field. How many ties; how many resources he has; his friendship with his team, his cattle, his dog, his crops, the satisfaction in his growing trees, in his improved fields, his intimacy with nature, with bird and beast, and with the quickening elemental forces, his co-operation with the cloud, the sun, the season, the heat, wind, rain, frost. Nothing will take the various social distempers which the city and artificial life breed, out of a man like farming—like direct and loving contact with the soil. It draws out the poison. It humbles him, teaches him patience and reverence, and restores the proper tone to his system.

Owing to the farm; make much of it, bestow your heart and your mind upon it, so that it shall savor of you and radiate your virtues after your day's work is done.—John Burroughs in Scribner.

Persons about to marry, who wish to know the proper age, are referred to the following precedents: Adam and Eve, 0; Shakspeare, 18; Ben Johnson, 21; Walker, 22; Franklin, 21; Mozart, 25; Kenner, Fuller, Johnson, Burke, Scott, 26; Tycho, Byron, Washington, Wellington, Bonaparte, 27; Penna, Sterne, 28; Nelson, 29; Burns, 30; Chaucer, Hogarth, Peel, 32; Davy, 33; Aristotle, 36; Sir William Jones, 37; Wilberforce, 38; Luther, 42; Old Parr, last time, 120. If Adam and Eve got married before they were a year old, and the veteran Parr buckled on his wisdom at 120, why should not aspirants wed as young as they like, and find shelter under great names for either early or late marriage.

In the next Senate, South Carolina almost she has two Senators, will stand upon two legs. Both of her Senators, Hampton and Butler, have lost weight and will go upon wooden substitutes.

Hints for House Owners.

We give below a few hints, which may prove useful to housekeepers:
Paints splashed upon window glass can be easily removed by a hot solution of soda.

Use kerosene and bath brick or lime to scour sinks, tin or copper; wash in hot suds and polish with dry whitening.

A little spirits of turpentine, added to the water with which floors are washed, will prevent the ravages of moths.

Spirits of ammonia diluted with water, if applied with a sponge or flannel cloth to discolored carpets, will often restore the color.

One pound of coppers dissolved in one quart of water will destroy foul smells. Powdered borax scattered in their haunts will disperse cockroaches.

Soot falling on the carpet from open chimneys, or from carelessly handled stove-pipes, if covered thickly with salt can be brushed up without damage to the carpet.

When carpets are cleaned, sprinkle with salt and fold; when laid, strew with slightly moistened bran before sweeping. This, with the salt, will freshen them wonderfully.

To give glass great brilliancy, wash with a damp sponge dipped in spirits, then dust with powdered blue or whiting (tied in a thin muslin bag) and polish with a chamois cloth.

A paste made of whiting and benzine will clean marble, and one made of whiting and chloride of soda, spread and left to dry (in the sun if possible) on the marble, will remove spots.

Fuller's earth, mixed to a stiff paste with cold water, spread on the carpet and covered with brown paper, will, in a day or two, remove grease spots. A second application may be necessary.

A flannel cloth dipped in warm soapsuds, then into whiting, and applied to paint, will instantly remove all grease and dirt. Wash with clean water, then dry. The most delicate paint will not be injured, and will look like new.

Plaster of Paris mixed with gum arabic water makes an excellent white cement, but must be used immediately, as it hardens quickly. A mixture of five parts gelatin to one of acid chromate of lime, applied to broken edges, which should be pressed together and exposed to the sunlight, makes an insoluble cement.

Rules for Home Education.

The following rules are worthy of being printed in letters of gold and placed in a conspicuous place in every household:

1. From your children's earliest infancy, inculcate the necessity of instant obedience.
2. Unite firmness with gentleness. Let your children always understand that you mean what you say.
3. Never promise them anything unless you are quite sure you can give what you say.
4. If you tell a little child to do something, show him how to do it and see that it is done.
5. Always punish your children for wilfully disobeying you, but never punish them in anger.
6. Never let them perceive that they vex you, or make you lose your self-command.
7. If you give way to petulance or ill temper, wait till you are calm, and then gently reason with them on the propriety of their conduct.
8. Remember that a little present punishment, when the occasion arises, is much more effectual than the threatening of a greater punishment should the fault be renewed.
9. Never give your children anything because they cry for it.
10. On no account allow them to do at one time what you have forbidden under the same circumstances at another.
11. Teach them that the only sure and easy way to appear good is to be good.
12. Accustom them to make their little requests with perfect truth.
13. Never allow of tale-bearing.
14. Teach them self-denial, not self-indulgence of an angry and resentful spirit.—Home Illustrated.

Importance of Corn.

The New York Shipping List says: "The importance of the country's corn crop is hardly understood by the general run of readers, since they don't know what a wide basis of prosperity it constitutes. It is the basis of an annual pork crop comprising at least ten million head of hogs; its consumption as human food is very large and increasing in both hemispheres; it is more universally fed to stock of all kinds than any other cereal, and is, in a word, one of the most valuable of our agricultural products."

"The acreage in corn reaches 50,369,000, and the yield probably not less than 1,500,000,000 bushels. The exportation of corn has increased from a little over 7,000,000 bushels per annum ten years ago, to nearly 90,000,000 at the present time. At this rate of increase corn promises to become the king of commerce. In this connection, it is interesting to know that the production of grain of all kinds in the United States is 40 bushels per capita, against only 16 bushels for all Europe."

SUEAN fell in love with a bookkeeper, and when Aunt Mary asked about his position in life, Suean said demurely, "He's a count, aunt," which proved satisfactory to both parties.

A MASQUERADE BALL.

DEAR LILL: We are to have a masquerade ball in Stockton next Wednesday. Do come and trip on the fantastic and wear your gowns and masks. It will be a grand affair. A mask ball—such larks! Yours forever, SUE AMORY.

Lill folded the note and sighed. What was a ball without Roger Roanoke? And what was Roger to her, or she to Roger, that she should sigh, but a lover who had amused himself with her for a long summer at the university, and then left her stranded together, and then left her without a word? Why had he preferred her society to that of all the other and fairer women in the neighborhood? Why had he given up a trip to the Adirondacks, if not to linger by her side? Why had he spent hours of leisure reading Drowning and Tennyson to her, looking into her eyes as often as upon the printed page, when he might have joined the shooting expeditions or the trout parties? Why had he brought her bouquets and bouquets? Why had he been jealous when she danced with another at the hops? When Conrad Amory sent her a perfumed note with the last word at it.

Why those words a thought too tender For the commonplace spoken, If the love was never meant?

Above all, why had he kissed her hand at parting, and told her that she would keep an obstinate silence ever since? These were questions which Lill asked herself over and over, till there seemed but one answer possible—he had been playing with her; only, it had seemed so very like earnest that she was slow to believe it. He had even been in town, even passed the house where Lill moved and had her being, without knocking at the door. What more did she need to convince her? If he had written the letter and it had gone astray, would he not have received it again from the dead letter office, and would he not have hastened to explain? Perhaps it was quite as well that the flames which devoured the Silver Creek House, only three days after Roger's departure from the mountains, had swept away all the mementos of their sentimental acquaintance. How well she remembered that dreadful night, when she had gone to bed with a letter, requesting Aunt Delia, if any letter arrived for her in the evening mail, to tuck it under her door! How she had waked in the "dead middle of the night" with the flames licking her bed hangings, and had only time to slip into a wrapper and run for her life, half suffocated with the smoke! But the loss of her summer wardrobe, which she could ill afford was half forgotten in the happy anticipation of Roger's letter, which never came.

What should she do at a ball with a broken heart? Yet why should she deny herself the pleasures Providence sent her because one had been withheld? She ought to forget Roger. Why not make a beginning now? She could never believe in any one as she had believed in Roger, perhaps; but would it not be pleasant to show him that others appreciated the one he had spurned?

But, the question of sentiment aside, that dreadful riddle which perplexed the women in the world presented itself to her: what should she wear? Nothing less than a toilette a hundred years old at least would answer; and, though most of Lill's clothes were old enough, yet they hardly reached that figure. There had been splendid brocades, that would stand alone, in the family wardrobe, but previous generations had worn them thrice before Lill was ashamed. Now that there was a lion in the way, she began to feel eager to go; she heard the twanging of the violins in her mind's ear, and her heart felt beating to the measure.

Up in the attic, in the camphor-wood trunk which her ever-so-great-grandfather had brought from India, ages nearer the beginning, there was an old-fashioned gown, to be sure, carefully folded away from the light and the moth. And such a gown! A marvel of glistering white brocade satin, with generous garniture of old lace and white ribbons, so perfect and so perfect that one might fancy they had but just been plucked from the bush growing in the sun-dance.

Lill gazed at the gown with a yearning that had never before been bridled by her. "What a gown! A year out, in the antique chest, with its carved brass clasps, folded in tissue paper. Not one of all the gay and giddy girls among the first owner's descendants had dared to lift it from its hiding place and deck herself in its glories again. Lill remembered to have seen it once, when Aunt Delia was in the spirit to exhibit relics, and she had seen it.

"Who I really am? I don't believe you would be any wiser if I told you."

"No, not that; I was wondering how you happened with that name, because—"

"Excuse me, here is my partner," and she was flashing through space like a meteor.

"And now I am wondering why my appropriation of St. Regis should startle you," he resumed, when they encountered each other the second time.

"St. Regis is a family name of ours; this very costume in which I am tripping on the fantastic toe, regardless of the woes of my ancestors, comprises the wedding garments of my revered great-grandfather, St. Regis Raymond—" or, rather, the garments in which he was to have married his first love, but for some lovers' quarrel. "To tell the truth, I am the first person who ever wore them. My great-grandfather was a somewhat sentimental youth. I suppose, since he refused to marry his second love in this suit; perhaps he considered it unlucky; but was it not a pity to let such fine clothes out to the moths? Romantic, is it not? You are surely shivering; let me fetch you a wrap."

"No, thank you. I am clothed and in my right mind, I believe. And St. Regis Raymond's first love was one Elizabeth Langdon, was she not?"

"So the gossips say. But how happened you to know so much of my family affairs, may I ask? Are you Elizabeth Langdon revisiting the glimpses of the moon?"

"She was my great-grandmother," and I am eapring here in the very gown in which she was to have married your great-grandfather but for that sentimental quarrel."

"Bless me, what a coincidence! We are some sort of relation, are we not? Allow me to say that I feel proud of my great-grandfather's first love's wedding gown."

"And I feel almost wicked in it. Aunt Delia could never forgive if she knew."

"Aunt Delia?" repeated St. Regis.

"Oh! I forgot we were masquerading, and I must not give you a clue. But you will not wiser. You may read the Stockton Directory through without discovering Aunt Delia."

"She would object to this appropriation."

"She would call it sacrilege. But I am Elizabeth Langdon's only great-grandchild, and her namesake, and all this splendor is my own—only it has never seen daylight before, so to speak. I can't say but Aunt Delia had it insured with the silver last summer when we went to the mountains and left it behind me. It was lucky, however, that we didn't take it with us to the Silver Creek House, because it was burned to a cinder, and all our dry-goods with it, and had this been among them, I should have been here to-night."

"For which we may thank our stars. May I ask among what mountains you encamped?"

"The Franconia. Don't you love mountains?"

"Absolutely dote upon them," said St. Regis, laughing. "And so you were at the Silver Creek House when it burned down? I remember reading in the Times that the guests barely escaped with their lives. And Aunt Delia was with you, eh? Isn't she a kind of aunt of mine? Did you have a pleasant summer?"

"Yes and no," answered Lill. "One must take the bitter with the sweet, you know."

"Spiced with flirtations and conquests, I dare say."

"No, with neither."

"I was thinking to-day how few seasons there were in our lives which we would willingly live over."

"Oh, I would like to live over last summer, above all things," cried Lill, impulsively.

"I wonder in what its peculiar charm consisted? Perhaps you had an affair, if I may guess."

"That depends upon what you call an affair."

"Why, somebody fell in love with you and you loved him, is that so?"

"That would be a very good guess, but I don't think so."

"And what did you guess, Sir Impudence?"

"That somebody fell in love with you."

"I never heard of it before."

"Then why, pray tell me, would you care to live over that summer?"

"Perhaps to break a country heart. For instance, are you bent on town?"

laughed Lill.

"Don't you think this is old conversation for the descendants of our ancestors?"

"Rather," said Lill. "I wonder what they quarreled about?" meditatively.

Mr. St. Regis himself, returned it quietly, impenetrable as the Sphinx.

"Are you cold?" he asked. "Perhaps we are in a draught."

"No; only there is something uncanny about all this. Of course you are not really Mr. St. Regis and—" was wondering—

"Who I really am? I don't believe you would be any wiser if I told you."

"No, not that; I was wondering how you happened with that name, because—"

"Excuse me, here is my partner," and she was flashing through space like a meteor.

WHEREAS the Democratic State Executive Committee has called a State Convention of the Democratic party to meet in the city of Louisville, on 1st day of May, 1879, for the purpose of nominating candidates for the various State offices to be voted for at the ensuing August election,

Now, therefore, in order that Boone County may be represented in the said Convention, the Democratic Executive Committee of Boone County hereby calls upon the Democrats of said county to meet in mass convention, at the Court-house in Burlington, at 1 o'clock p. m., February 23, 1879, to select delegates to represent the county in the said 1st of May Convention.

B. K. SLEET,

Chairman Co. Dem. Ex. Com.

This mighty Blackburn, candidate for Governor of this State, makes some very slight remarks about Judge William Lindsay who has retired from the gubernatorial race course. He calls Lindsay a Tennessee carpet-bagger, and attempts to ridicule him in many other ways. The Doctor should bear in mind that ridiculing a man who has as many admirers in the State as Lindsay has, will result in severely crippling his chances for the office to which he aspires. Blackburn can not convince the people of Kentucky that Lindsay is a man of as limited information as he attempts to represent him, for they have seen too much of him of recent years. No man of a small mental caliber would ascend as high and as rapidly in the State as Judge Lindsay has, the opinion of Dr. Blackburn to the contrary notwithstanding.

How some breasts throb with patriotism—with a doubled and twisted desire to see the feet of their erring brothers lifted from the quicksands of moral destruction and planted upon the solid ground when the cost of the good work comes out of the pockets of other people. The cost of reformation is what keeps many philanthropists in obscurity; they are willing to furnish the windwork, but beyond this they will not assist in anything, no matter how laudable they think the cause.

We have talked to several old citizens in regard to the unusual amount of snow we have had this winter, and they unanimously agree that there is more snow on the ground now than has remained longer than any snow they can remember, while the weather, for the first few days of the year, was the coldest that they ever experienced. The winter of 1878 and 1879 will be recorded in history as one of the coldest known in this latitude.

The result of the merchandising business conducted by the Bellvue Co-operative Association the past year must be very gratifying to the stock holders, if the figures of our Bellvue correspondent are to be relied on, and we believe they are correct to a dot. 103 per cent. is a very handsome profit to make on an investment in a stock of merchandise at a time when every family in the country is trying to curtail its expenses.

This Resumption feat is bidding fair to be a success which will do more to inspire confidence in the Republican party than any other measure it might have adopted. Had Resumption failed the party would have been irreparably injured, but under the present smooth running of Resumption there is no way of estimating the advantage it will be to the party in power.

The British have had a thorough cooling off as well as the people on this side of the pond. The weather over there has been unprecedentedly severe, and heavy snow storms have prevailed.

The European markets are becoming very popular places for the sale of American horses, which are being shipped thither in large numbers.

The break up in the river destroyed many barges laden with coal.

The tops of the thermometers are getting from under the bottom again.

SEVERAL of the leaders in the late Breathitt County troubles have been indicted.

Up to the first of this month 1,430,000 more hogs were packed than at the corresponding time last year.

DEERING wants the people to know that the Transcript is a Democratic newspaper, and so declares six days out of seven.

THE ground, it is said, is frozen but two or three inches below the surface, and the small grain is in an excellent state of preservation.

NEXT week we will publish the official exhibit of the claims paid by the county during the past twelve months, as well as those to be paid out of the levy for this year.

THE recent severe cold weather froze vegetables in many cellars heretofore considered frost proof. Potatoes that were stored away for the spring market have suffered severely.

THE hog market has advanced some within the past week. Which is entitled to the credit for this advance, Resumption or the general freeze up? We are inclined to give it to the General.

It seems that Tilden has not been entirely abandoned, and his name is occasionally mentioned in connection with the next Presidential race. They even have recollections of him in Indianapolis.

UNLESS the snow disappears in time for the ground to get thoroughly frozen before spring, the farmers will have to battle with cloudy ground again next spring. That is an amusement for which farmers have no particular fancy.

On the morning of the eighth, Julian Hartridge, Representative from the State of Georgia, died at his rooms in Washington City. His makes the eighth death that has occurred in the ranks of the national lawmakers within the last eighteen months.

WE are now ready to enjoy the good times which it was said would follow successful Resumption. If these good times about which there has been so much writing these later years don't come to time this year, Resumption will not be half as big a thing as expected by many.

THE experience the Democrats had with the Nationals in organizing the Indiana Legislature illustrates the fact that the Democrats can not rely on them where the emergency is very great. They are liable to desert at any stage of the contest, and break for the camp of the enemy.

THERE has been very little said, as yet, about the approaching race for the next County Representative in the General Assembly. This office is to be elected at the next August election, but at present the office is apparently seeking the man. The race will commence booming along in a few weeks.

A PLAN has been put on foot in the State of Tennessee to defraud the Odd-Fellows Lodge of insurance money the fraternity has to pay at the death of such members of the craft as hold policies in the Odd-Fellows Insurance Company. Some of the prominent members are implicated in the rascally business.

THE Courier-Journal says it has been calculated, they say, that in order to produce a single pound of honey a bee would have to make 2,500,000 voyages abroad in search of material. And yet, for that one pound of honey he probably won't get more than ten or fifteen cents! Poor misguided and over-worked little devil; some benevolent somebody ought to point out the absurdity of the thing to him and persuade him to quit the business.

THE Chairman of the County Democratic Executive Committee this week publishes a call for a County Convention to meet in Burlington, on the first Monday in next month, for the purpose of appointing delegates to the State Convention which meets in the city of Louisville on the first day of next May. There are several offices for which to choose candidates, and as the campaign has been exceedingly quiet thus far, it may be well for the people to begin giving the matter some consideration that they may be ready to make known their preference among the several candidates.

ONE of the parties bidding for the position of Superintendent of the Poor-house, we have from good authority, put his figures at $25. We do not know who said bidder is, but it seems that he was determined to have the office if low figures would secure it.

SHOULD this snow be taken off by a rain, all the low lands along the water-courses will be overflowed and a heavy destruction of property the result.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

St. Louis, Mo., January 10, 1879.

As an item of news it is eminently pertinent, that our city was visited by an old fashioned snow storm which tarried with us until about 10 o'clock of the same evening, leaving with us about twelve inches of snow on a dead level. The next morning thereafter, streets, sidewalks, street railways and all other ways for traveling humanity were completely blocked, and pedestrians were slow about getting from place to place. It was the heaviest fall of snow in so short a space of time known to the oldest inhabitant of this part of the moral vineyard.

Seeing Cupid has been doing such an extensive work in your vicinity, leads us to say that we had a marriage here on Tuesday evening last. On that evening the Hon. Erastus Wells, one of our wealthiest citizens, as well as a Congressman-elect of the Second District, was united to the holy bonds with Mrs. D. W. Bell, probably the handsomest and wealthiest widow in the city. The wedding was a very quiet affair as there were not more than a dozen or so of the most intimate friends knew of it until after it was over. If you will allow this court to pass sentence, it will say the contracting parties manifested more good sense than many rich people do when they get married. They are both of age, the man being about 60 and the lady between 40 and 50 (we should judge), so there was no good reason for making a fuss about it. Long may they wave and have a great many "Wells" to cheer them along life's weary waste.

Wednesday last was our annual election day for officers for our Chamber of Commerce for the ensuing year, and, by the way, we may say it was the most exciting election we have had for many years. The regular Caucus ticket was headed by Craig Alexander, a merchant of some 25 years, and the Independent ticket was headed by John Whal, a merchant of more than 30 years, both being in independent circumstances, ambitious and desirous of being President of the largest and most influential Chamber of Commerce this side of New York. Our election for Congressman did not create half the excitement among the merchants that election did, and though there are no fees attached to the office, we do not know but what there is fully as much honor in being the Executive head of an organization of some 2,000 intelligent merchants, as there is in being Congressman-elect of humblers and exgrinders. The Independent ticket was elected by an average majority of 225. So our officers for the year 1879 will be John Whal, President; Michael McEnnis and Wm. J. Lemp, Vice-Presidents, all good men.

Our State Legislature organized on Wednesday, and as we have two United States Senators to elect, you may know hotel keepers in Jefferson City are reaping a rich harvest about this time, and it would not be very far from the truth to say saloon keepers of that little burg are doing a big business these cold days. One of the Senators is for the short term or unexpired term of Senator Boggy who died last fall a year, and to which David H. Armstrong was appointed until the meeting of the Legislature, and as there is only one year more in said term, it is likely Armstrong will be elected for the remainder. But for the long term the names most prominent are Geo. C. Vest, of Sedalia; Thos. Allen and H. T. Glover, of St. Louis; A. W. Dornham, of Clay County, and Governor Phelps. The contest, however, seems to be narrowed down to Vest, Allen and Glover. The election comes off next week, and from now until then, the eyes of the whole nation will be turned toward the little insignificant burg of Jefferson City.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to the Recorder.

WASHINGTON, January 9, 1879.

Congress reassembled on the 7th, but has not yet settled down to business. In the Senate yesterday, Mr. Edmunds offered a resolution providing that during the last three days of a session no bills which had not previously passed one House should be sent to the other conference, and that on the last day no bill should be sent to the President for his approval. The intention of the Senator was, no doubt, good, but the most effectual way of reaching the end he desired, is to attend early in each session to the legitimate business of the country so as to avoid confusion when the session draws to a close. It is in that time of confusion that the country is robbed and disgraced.

Hon. Julian Hartridge, of Georgia, died here yesterday. Mr. H. had already taken a high position in Congress, and made many friends among its members.

It is almost certain that Justice Ward Hunt, of the United States Supreme Court, even if he survives his present illness, will not resume his place on the bench. The uneasy Attorney-General Stevens, may, in the event of Justice Hunt's retiring, find means to secure the vacancy.

Professor Granger, of London, says he can freeze all the yellow fever germs out of a vessel, a dwelling or other confined space in a few minutes and prevent the return next summer of this fearful pestilence to the South. His system meets with favor from even those holding the most opposite theories concerning the disease. He will receive such material aid as the Department can legally give in his efforts, and will be strongly supported by officials for such Congressional aid as will enable him to fully test his system. It is probable that some small steam vessel will be furnished with refrigerating machinery and stationed at exposed ports to intercept and disinfect incoming vessels. In a commercial as well as a sanitary view it would be desirable, as it would prevent delay of passengers and cargoes after arriving.

The Republican papers are charging the Democratic House with a disposition to get through the necessary legislation of the country by the early preparation and passage of the annual appropriation bills, as if such activity were a crime. Being so accustomed to jobs and to legislation for the benefit of the party in preference to that for the good of the country, they are sneering at the present House because it is putting forth its efforts for the completion of the business that called it here. The inconsistency of their position does not seem to deter them in the least. Last year it was said that the time of Congress was frittered away in pursuing investigations. Now it is complained that the legitimate work of the House is permitted to take the precedence. But the people of all the parties are awake, and they are carefully noting the conduct of their servants here, and are gratified that the House is earning this reputation for legitimate work.

THE LOUISVILLE COMMERCIAL,
LEADING REPUBLICAN PAPER
IN THE SOUTH.

The Louisville Commercial is now about to enter upon its tenth year. It will advance in future, as it has in the past, the cardinal Republican principles, equal rights under the law in all men; devotion to the Union of the States; the honorable discharge of national obligations; the growth of friendly feelings among the people of all sections. While staunchly attached to the Republican party, it will aim to be fair and just in its criticisms on public men and measures, not withholding blame from its own party when deserved, or praising its opponents when they are entitled to it.

The Louisville Commercial has the full telegraphic dispatches of the Associated Press, and gives a complete record of all the news of the day. The Louisville Commercial is a large, well-edited paper, with few advertisements, especially edited to make it acceptable as a family newspaper. The terms given below for the Commercial to be in the hands of its readers.

"It is worth $100.00 a year to farmers, but costs only $1.15."
"The best in the cheapest."
"It always has the news in advance of all others."
"There is none better."
"Its political teachings are honest, honorable, beneficial and correct."
"It is the original Greenbacker."
"It is the best political friend the PEOPLE have, advocating its Democracy upon the principles of justice and equity to all."

Such are a few of the many compliments paid the CINCINNATI ENQUIRER by the Press throughout the country. The merits of its Editorial, Agricultural, Political, Correspondence, Literary, Telegraphic, News and Commercial departments combine to make it all that is required in an A. N. 1, first-class family journal. We respectfully solicit your subscription, and ask as a special favor to the Enquirer and the advancement of great moral and political truths that you obtain the description of your neighbor for a year's trial. ABOUT WOMEN.
"The enemy that sows tares while men sleep—their wives."
"I suffer Kate," remarked a small husband when embraced by 250 lbs of wife.
"Pulling a husband's hair and leaving him unprotected at the polls is known to jurists as wigamy."
"A Syracuse man calls his wife 'Poor Rule,' because she won't work more than one way, and usually not that."
"Have you ever read 'The Tale of the Bumble Bee?'" asked George of Sarah Jane. "No," said she, as she turned the color of red paint; "but I have felt 'em."
Snodgrass says that two young ladies kissing each other is like an emblem of Christianity, because they are doing to each other as they would men should do unto them.
"Speaking of razors," said the obsequious barber, as he tendered change for a quarter, "I believe Adam and Eve were the first razors, were they not?" The customer replied, "Apparently."

Among what you might call the bridegroom presents at the recent marriage of a widow of sixty and a young man of twenty-five, in Iowa, were several great-grandchildren, the gift of the bride.
"Remember, now we have separated and been married four times, and once more will convince me that we can never live together happily," said, at the altar, an Indiana woman to her husband when she married him for the fifth time.
A quaint writer says: "I have seen women so delicate that they were afraid to ride for fear of the horse running away; afraid to sail, for fear the boat would upset; afraid to walk, for fear they might trip; but they saw one afraid to get married, which is a far greater risk than all the others put together."

"Darn a fool," said Harkins who was vexed to his wife. "So mote it be," said Mrs. H., flourishing a darning-needle, "whereabout are you worn out?" Harkins said some people were too smart to live long, and he was too awful mad when his wife congratulated him on his prospects for a long life. Oh, the tongues of those women.
"I want to find out who is master of this house," said a man with a book under his arm to the vinegar-looking woman with a pointed nose and a very small top-not who opened the door for him. "Well, sir," said she, with arms akimbo, "you just walk around into the back-yard and ask a little spindled-shanked deacon you will find there fixin' up the grape arbor, and he will tell you if I don't boss this ranch he don't know who does. Now, what do you want with me?"

MARRIAGES.
The following is a translation from a German paper. The sentiment is good, and we give it for the benefit of our young English readers:
"Marriages are usually contracted to gratify one of the three desires, viz: love, fortune or position.
"The man who marries for love, takes a wife; who marries for fortune, takes a mistress; who marries for position, takes a lady. He is loved by his wife; regarded by his mistress; tolerated by his lady. He has a wife for himself; a mistress for his household; a lady for the world and society.
"His wife will take care of his household; his mistress of his house; his lady of his appearance. If he is sick his wife will visit him; his mistress will inquire about his health. He takes a walk with his wife; a ride with his mistress; goes to a party with his lady. His wife will share his griefs; his mistress his money; his lady his debts. If he dies, his wife will weep; his mistress lament; his lady wear mourning.
"Jokes on matrimony are the delight of crusty old bachelors. They will appreciate the reported opinion of a husband who said: 'Five or six years of married life will refine a man to such an angelic disposition that he could not be trusted with a pair of wings.'"

A FELLOW WHO had been working a dog churn in Wetzel County, for a living, was in town the other day and had got so pigeon-toed at the business that the calves of his legs were holes in the knees of his pants.

TEN YEARS AFTER.
Ten years ago, when she was ten,
I like to leave and could her;
I liked her, and she loved me then,
A boy of five years older.
I liked her—she would fetch my book,
Bring lunch to stream or thicket;
Would hold my gun, or bait my hook,
And feed for hours at cricket.
She'd mend my cap, or find my whip—
Ah! but boy's hearts are stony!
I liked her rather less than "Gyp,"
And far less than my pony.

She loved me then, though heaven knows why;
Small wonder had the reason,
For scores of dolls she'd had to cry
Whom I despatched.
I tore her frock, I pulled her hair,
Called "red" the sheen upon it;
Out fishing, I would even dare
Catch tad-poles in her bonnet.
Well, now I expiate my crime;
The Necessity of today Old Time
Gave in after years—today Old Time
On me has turned the tables.

I'm twenty-five, she's twenty now,
Dark-eyed, pink-cheeked and bonny;
The curls are golden round her brow;
She smiles and calls me "Johnny."
Of yore I used him Christmas eve,
When she was five, my lips can't frame
Five letters to make "Alice."

I, who would joke with her and tease,
Stand silent now before her;
Dumb, through the very wish to please,
I babble common places.
Or, if she turns to me to speak,
I'm dazzled by her graces;
The hot blood rushes to my cheek,
I babble common places.

She's kind and cool—ah! heaven knows how
I wish she blushed and feltered;
She likes me, and I love her now,
Dear, dear! how things have altered.

Heading Off a Lawyer.
Rufus Choate, in an important marine assault-and-battery-at-sea case, had Dick Barton, chief mate of the clipper ship Challenge, on the stand, and badgered him so for about an hour, that at last Dick got his salt water sea, and, hauled by the wind to bring the keen Boston lawyer under his batteries.

At the beginning of his testimony, Dick had said that the night was as dark as the devil, and raining like seven bells.
Suddenly Mr. Choate asked him: "Was there a moon that night?"
"Yes, sir."
"Ah, yes! A moon!"
"Yes, a full moon."
"Did you see it?"
"Not a mite."
"Then how do you know there was a moon?"
"Nautical almanac said so, and I'll believe that sooner'n any lawyer in this world."
"What was the principal luminary that night, sir?"
"Binnacle lamp on board the Challenge."

"Ah! you are growing sharp, Mr. Barton."
"What in blazes have you been grinding me this hour for—to make me dull?"
"Be civil, sir. And now tell me in what latitude and longitude you crossed the equator."
"Sho! you're joking."
"No, sir; I am in earnest, and I desire you to answer me."
"I shan't."
"Yes! I can't."
"Indeed! You are chief mate of a clipper ship, and unable to answer so simple a question?"
"Yes; it is the simplest question I ever was asked in my life. Why, I thought every fool of a lawyer knew there ain't no latitude on the equator."
That shot scored Rufus Choate.

A Temperance Orator's Story.
From December 18th to January 1st—
Been on a terrible farewell drunk.
Don't know this from the middle of next week. Snakes! see 'em. Blue and green devils. Green fire and blue devils, hoofs, horns and tails, dancing and yehing all around me. Small corner devils in my hair. Fleas, goats and crows all over the house! Who-o-o-o-o!

January 1st—Have reformed. Better touch another drop. How glorious I feel! Joy! How sad that people drink. Oh, drunkards, to come all and be reformed!

January 15th—Go to the temperance meeting every night. Such glorious times. I am one of the choir.

February 1st—I am becoming a temperance lecturer and orator. I think I can move an audience almost as well as brother Murphy.

March 1st—Have found it necessary to reform again. But it is all on the sly. Nobody knows it.

April 1st—I am fairly started in the temperance lecture field. My own experience as a drunkard is ahead of any thing in Murphy's line.

May 1st—The Anti-Bear and Cider Association have employed me as a special agent for the conviction of liquor dealers. I entered on my duties to-day.

May 15th—It was too much for me. One glass of beer started me. I spent all the funds given me by the society. Drank and treated, treated and drank all in one saloon and came to in the morning in a back-yard minus coat, hat, vest, money and shoes. Somebody gave me an awful wallop; one eye closed up; nose flat; two teeth out.

June 1st—Presented myself to the New England Anti-Cider Society for reformation. They said, 'Go West, old man, go West.' I went; joined the Indian Whisky Belchers and Beer Crusaders. Reformed as usual. Made a rousing speech. The Whisky Belchers gave me new clothes and some money and started me out again as a crusader.

July 1st—I am very successful. My strong point lies in pitching into moderate drinkers—men who tipple once or twice a day all their lives without getting drunk. I never did this. Such men are great foes to the temperance cause. They make temperance respectable. They tempt the young to drink and imitate their pernicious example.

August 1st—Have fallen again. We crusaded in a small Ohio town. By my oratory we worked 100 women up to the bling point. Started them out on the streets and saloons; they knocked fifty barrels of whisky in one head; I ran down the gutters ankle deep; I kept in the rear 'exhorting; the whisky ran past me; it smelt good, like old times; I got down to tie my shoestring; it smelt stronger and better; I took a closer look; I tasted it; tasted it again and again and again, and when the women came back they found me drunk in the gutter.

September 1st—The Ohio Crusaders advised me to reform and go farther West. I have done so and am back East. One Ohio—Am on my way back to California, whisky was too much for me. There are four of us. I shall reform again immediately on arriving in New York.

December 28 (New York)—My name here is James Delirium O. Spree. Have fully reformed. Am lecturing now to the T. A. B. Catholic Society. What an awful year. So many falls. Yet there is a providence which tempers the wind to the shorn lamb, isn't there? Why, during the last year I have twice found myself walking up the gutter without hat, coat or breeches, and without a cent in my pocket, a chew of tobacco, nor credit for a glass of beer. But I never despaired. My watchword has been, 'Patience, Perseverance and Reform.' Never mind if you are down-to-day. Reform and you may be up to-morrow. Reform! Reform all the time. Don't do it once or twice and then knock off discouraged. You'll never get along that way. But reform persistently at this time—every month, every week, every day, every hour. Be a consistent reformer.—New York Graphic.

"How dare you say I never open my mouth without putting my foot in it?" demanded Brown of Jones. "If I hope you will forgive me," said the latter, "for when I said that I had never seen the size of your foot."

"It is estimated that every man who lives to be sixty years old, has spent seven months of his life buttoning his shirt collar."

FAYETTE HEWITT,

AUDITOR OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.

A CALL FOR A COUNTY CONVENTION.

WHEREAS the Democratic State Executive Committee has called a State Convention of the Democratic party to meet in the city of Louisville, on 1st day of May, 1879, for the purpose of nominating candidates for the various State offices to be voted for at the ensuing August election,

Now, therefore, in order that Boone County may be represented in the said Convention, the Democratic Executive Committee of Boone County hereby calls upon the Democrats of said county to meet in mass convention, at the Court-house in Burlington, at 1 o'clock p.m., February 23, 1879, to select delegates to represent the county in the said 1st of May Convention.

B. K. SLEET,

Chairman Co. Dem. Ex. Com.

We've heard of no new candidate for Register of the Land Office since yesterday.

The Kentucky Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will meet in Somerset, Wednesday, March 12th.

LEWIS CASON, one of Grant County's wealthiest citizens, died last Tuesday. Mr. Cason was well known by those who have visited that part of the State either from far or near.

INDIANA is to have a bump pulling on the 24th of this month, unless the Supreme Court interferes. Three men in Marion County are to be dropped through the gallows into eternity on that day.

The Cincinnati Commercial takes no stock in Logan whom the Illinois Legislature re-elected to the United States Senate, this week. The Commercial marks him as a trickster and a demagogue of the worst stripe.

HENDRICKS is reported as having said that the South and West will combine in the selection of the next Democratic candidate for the Presidency, and that they will not allow another Eastern man forced upon them.

The Hoosier Legislature hath decreed that Voceholders shall be continued as one of the State's Senators in the United States Senate. Only two Nationals were opposed to him when the matter was settled in caucus.

The Trimble County delegation will go to the Louisville Convention with instructions to vote for Blackburn as first choice of that county for Governor. This is a break in Col. Jones' Congressional District, but nevertheless, it is nothing about which to become alarmed, as there is no doubt but Trimble will eventually vote for Jones.

On the first page, this week, will be found the list of claims allowed by the Court of Claims at its October term, 1878 and January term 1879. There is nothing unusual in these allowances which are about the same in amount as those of the past years, but at the same time they show that the county is yet going on credit for the public sisters to the tune of $149.

GATI, in a letter to the Cincinnati Enquirer, and in which he writes up the bumper argument in Washington City, sums up by saying, "There are but few from Ohio; Indiana has got quite a number; Missouri is well represented, and Kentucky is strong." The scarcity of Ohio bummers can be accounted for on the ground that the most of them have been provided with offices.

The candidates for the various State offices are on the move now, and will continue to be till the epidemic of county conventions subsides. These conventions are now being held daily, and, by the way, this is a very good time for holding county conventions, because the farmers can attend them, whereas, later in the season their time will be devoted to the preparation of their crops, when they are not likely to turn out in very great numbers to take part in conventions.

The Louisville Commercial has found a haunted house in that city. The sportive spirit tears up things generally, throwing the bedding down stairs, turning the furniture around in the various rooms and making the ordinary utensils dance jig. A Commercial reporter visited the premises and heard the spirit speak in response to the questions propounded by a little girl who thinks it is the disembodied spirit of her mother. The family, at last accounts, held the fort, though considerably excited.

One day last week, the prisoners in the Ohio County Jail made a desperate effort to escape. They called the Deputy Jailor, pretending they were in need of something, and when he entered the jail one of the prisoners knocked him down, and then all scampered for the lower story from which they expected to escape by way of a window, but their attempt was foiled by the officer who recovered in time to draw his revolver and send a ball whizzing through the head of the first one that attempted to poke himself through the window. The other prisoners then went peacefully back to the second story where they belonged. The man who was shot lived only an hour or so.

The live stock market is some better than it has been for some time, and especially the hog market.

STATE NEWS.

The city of Owensboro has a Soup-house for the poor.

GREAT suffering among the poor of both colors is reported throughout the State.

A LARGE number of mules are being shipped South from Washington County.

JEFF JONES, of Bath County, gouged Jim Gudgeon's eye out, and Gudgeon sues for $20,000.

Two negroes killed 217 rabbits in two days near Wilmore Station, Jessamine County, last week.

The Yeoman says the absence of the boys in Breathitt has diminished the attendance upon the churches, especially at night.

The snow was so deep in Fleming County that a local candidate lost his way, and was found soliciting votes in Nicholas County.

The Owensboro Examiner says Westley Windsor, who killed his brother, has become a violent maniac and imagines himself in hell. He has been sent to the asylum.

The Mayfield Monitor says, Solomon was one of the best paragraphers of his day; but if paragraphers' pay was no better at that time than now, he never could have supported seven hundred wives from his salary.

The Shelby Sentinel says complaints reach us from all parts of the county of poultry freezing to death during the cold snap. A number of sheep, hogs and valuable dogs were also lost by the same means. We also hear of a number of young calves being frozen to death.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

St. Louis, Mo., January 16, 1879.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The Senatorial contest waxed hot and heavy, and is the topic on Chicago, on the street, in the counting-room, in the social circle and on the railways. If we meet a friend, the first question is, "Who is going to be our next Senator?" The short term was disposed of last night, by the nomination of Gen. Shields by an overwhelming majority. Believing will probably commence to-night for the long term, which is attended with more than usual interest, but who the successful bidder will be, of course no one as yet can speak with any degree of accuracy. But, as yet, the fight seems to be between Glover and Vest, with a dozen or more aspirants lying around loose, waiting for lightning to strike them, fostering the hope all the while that they may be called on as the compromise man. One of the strangest things of the whole affair, to the mind of your correspondent, is that Samuel T. Glover should covet the position, or even accept of it if tendered him unanimously. Professionally, he stands at the head of the bar, with a practice, in a pecuniary point of view, worth two or three times as much as the Senatorship can possibly yield. Personally, he is modest and retiring in disposition; fond of books, and has always manifested a preference for the intelligent horse-creeper. In fact, from the very dawn of youthful manhood, he has been a companion of books, and is, at this day, in law and history, considered a authority above any other man West of the Mississippi; and there is no doubt but what he will be a greater man in the estimation of the people, not only of this State, but throughout the Union, than any man in the State, should he even fail in securing the nomination and election. He has a national reputation as a lawyer, and I may say he is no less respected throughout the West for his literary attainments. Yet, notwithstanding all this, he has, of late, willfully and eagerly quit the pleasures of the domestic circle, a lucrative practice and books, to become the companion of cricketers, bummers and political bucksters, for political fame, and that, too, without positive assurance of success. His principal competitor may be set down as an out-and-out politician, with rather a brilliant mind naturally, but, personally, with but little to lose and everything to gain. He butters his watermelon heavily, and when it comes to telling smutty jokes, he can make any country tavern keeper, or backwood Magistrate, hang his head in shame. He is a success in that particular. Should he receive the nomination, and be sent to the United States Senate, he will make a suitable companion for Washington society. However, the battle is not won yet, and you and your readers may remember that I remarked last summer that there is a fly old upon in the Executive Chair that has had his eye on the afforsaid position, and it would not surprise me in the least if he should come out one ahead on the home stretch." But, before I quit this subject, I must say that the city of St. Louis has another formidable bidder for the position in the person of Thos. Allen, President of the Iron Mountain Railroad, and having more money at his command, which he is spending very freely, and as the Good Book says, "Money answereth all things," he may yet win. It is marvelous to see the juggling, tugging and autoholing that is going on in Jefferson City at this time. Each of the aspirants whose names we have mentioned have their parlor at Jefferson City, and their delegation headed by a particular friend to do up the agreeable, and money flows as freely as water.

I made mention in my last letter of the burning of the Second Baptist Church, probably the finest church edifice in the city. There was something like $100,000 insured in the building, and the congregation has already made preparation for rebuilding on a larger and more magnificent scale than the first. But one of the strangest incidents connected with the late calamity is, the next week, or a few days thereafter, the Rabbi of the beautiful Jewish Temple at 17th and Pine streets, tendered the Second Baptist Congregation free use of their Temple on Lord's days until they rebuild and are ready to enter their new building, which was accepted, and on Sunday last, the Second Baptist Congregation met in said Temple, and will continue to meet there as aforesaid. It is said by knowing ones that it is the first instance of the kind within the history of the Christian religion. Truly the world moves.

The Provident Association held a regular meeting on Monday evening last, and President Partridge stated their collections up to that evening fell short $7,000 of what they were at same date last year. He stated further, that if citizens did not respond more liberally, the Association would close doors on the 25th of this month. Superintendent Lack made his report, showing the total number of families supported in whole or in part by the Association, and also the amount of supplies distributed in a single day. It is as follows: Number of families, 2,072; number of persons in said families, 7,252; families receiving provisions, 893; the number of families supplied with coal, 162.

The St. Vincent de Paul Society, a Catholic institution, is caring for an immense number of distressed families. I must not leave this part of my subject without alluding to another interesting family that is entitled to the sympathy of every family in the city, and it is said there are more than 20,000 members in that family. They are entirely destitute, and your present correspondent, out of the abundance of his sympathetic heart, has agreed and entered upon the task of caring for two dozen of them the balance of the winter, be it long or short.

I allude to the birds of the parks about the city. By oversight of the city council, or Park Commission, there was no appropriation made for the poor little creatures this fall as is usually the case, and the little creatures are wandering about the city during the cold weather, in a half starved condition, and to walk through the parks and see the little things is enough to cause the hardest heart to feel. I walked through one of the parks the other morning, and I could hardly keep from stepping on them, as they would get in my path and almost under my feet. And most of these birds are of rare plumage, having been imported from foreign countries, specially for the parks, at great cost. The daily papers called upon the humane to send in feed daily, and some are responding. But there are just 24 of this interesting family that get their breakfast and supper on the writer's back porch, and I am doing the best I can for them with the assistance of my better half. Why this matter of appropriation was overlooked, is a matter of surprise to every body; but it was, and the city has many thousand dollars in worth of rare birds, and there is no estimating the value of them to the city in protecting the trees and shrubbery of parks. But my letter is long enough.

BON A. LONG.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to the Recorder.

WASHINGTON, January 19, 1879.

Representative Hood, yesterday, succeeded in passing his bill providing for the issue, by the Treasury, of certificates of deposits of $10 and multiples thereof, bearing 3 per cent. interest convertible into 4 per cent. bonds, such bonds to be used only for the redemption of 6 per cent. bonds. The bill in its passage was decisive, and it is believed the bill will pass the Senate. Hood also, by a vote of 151 to 43 passed a bill making United States notes receivable for duties on imports. The bill excited great opposition, Mr. Garfield denouncing it as a blow at resumption. In event of any hitch in the process of resumption, the Government will, if this bill passes, have to purchase any gold needed by it.

On Tuesday, the bill granting pensions to the soldiers of the Mexican War came up in the House, but so much opposition was manifested that the friends of the measure no longer hope for its passage at this session.

Close attention should be given the next Democratic Senatorial caucus which will soon be held. At the last one held a few evenings since, no definite action was taken on any subject, but a committee was appointed, consisting of Senators Thurman, Eaton, Gordon, Saulsbury, Morgan, McDonald and Harvier. Senators should debate the Edmunds resolution affirming the proper adoption and validity of the last three amendments of the constitution. On this particular point I have nothing to say now, but it is evident the Democratic Senators have exhibited so far, at this session, in their caucus and in the Senate far less boldness and earnestness, and far less union and coherency of purpose than was expected. The next caucusing may result in a better state of things.

The New York Custom-house nominations caused a little excitement in the Senate yesterday. Apparently anticipating opposition from Conkling to the confirmation of his appointments, Mr. Hayes, through Secretary Sherman, sent to the Senate charges against the suspended officers. This was a commencement of a warfare, and rather an undignified commencement, too, as both Democratic and Republican Senators seemed to think Senator Conkling was equal to the occasion. He defended his friends, and judiciously abstained from attacking the nominees of Mr. Hayes. The unprecedented communication of the Administration was sent to the Committee on Commerce, of which Senator Conkling is Chairman. It is not by any means certain that Democratic Senators will vote against confirmation when a vote is finally taken, but it is certain that Conkling was strengthened by the surprising act of Mr. Hayes.

Argument is now being heard by the House Committee on private land claims on the celebrated McCurtain land quicksilver mine case. If the Committee should decide against McCurtain, it is difficult to see what he will next do, as the courts and the Interior Department are against him. The decision will soon be made. The value of the land involved is enormous, being far greater than was ever before disposed of by courts or Department in this country.

Chief Joseph, now here, creates a very favorable impression. His appearance and manners seem to confirm the good reports of him made at and before the war in which he distinguished himself. He will have an interview with the distinguished Secretary of the Interior to-day or to-morrow.

BURLINGTON, KY., JANUARY 23.

Value of Sheep as Manure Makers.

Pasture alone is not sufficient to maintain sheep in a profitable thrif, especially in the approaching breeding season; in addition a daily ration of grain is needed. When the pasture is poor, the quantity of grain should be liberal. With good pastures, a pint of meal and oats, or rye and buckwheat is little enough; with poor pastures, half as much again would be required to keep fullgrown sheep or growing lambs in proper condition. In some sections cotton-seed meal is coming in to great favor for feeding sheep on poor pastures, a half-pint being fed to each one daily. It is a nutritious food and makes an unexceptionally rich manure; and the quality of the dung of animals as a manure always depends on the quality of their food, for the process of digestion, less the portion taken into the system as nutriment. There is a mistaken idea which has been fostered by writers who know but little about sheep, that these animals have the capacity of living upon weeds, briars, bushes and other coarse herbage, and not only getting fat thereon, but greatly adding to the fertility of the poor soil. A sheep, however, has no power to make something out of nothing. By reason of its fine mastication, it can, perhaps, exhaust from its food more nutriment than any other animal, except a fowl, and its manure, by reason of its finely comminuted condition rapidly decomposes, and is at once effective as a fertilizer. To make our flock thrifty, to secure strong lambs, heavy fleeces and good mutton, we need to feed the sheep, and we must do this if we would turn our flock into vehicles for spreading manure and enriching the soil. It is a fact that sheep supplied with a regularly given ration of one pint of grain per day, besides pasture, made in eight days twenty pounds each more weight than a flock on as good pasture without grain, and the value of the extra flesh more than paid for the grain. In addition, the fleece made growth, a large proportion of the ewes conceived twins, and the lambs came strong, and were better supplied with milk; and, as a matter of course, the droppings of the sheep must have been richer in fertilizing value than those of poorly fed sheep. The good shepherd cares for his sheep, and he has his reward in the richest return that can be made of any of our farm animals for the food and care given them. Instances to the successful use of sheep as fertilizers of the soil are given so frequently, but without any reference to the methods of their use, that it has become a general belief that nothing else is needed to make a poor farm rich. But if any novice is led to try it for himself, both he and his flock will come to grief.—American Agriculturist.

Take Care of the Horses.

The Illinois Humane Society, through an appeal issued by their committee, makes the following suggestions, which owners of horses will serve their own interests by attending to.

1. Shoes—If horses are sharp shod in icy weather, they will pull larger loads to greater advantage. It is poor economy to neglect the proper shoeing of horses, which may be thus seriously injured.

2. Blankets, etc.—Horses should be protected by blankets or water-proof covers from rain or snow, while standing. The cost of a blanket is very small, and its use would repay the outlay many times. Any woolen or other protection placed under the pad or saddle, and extending back over the hips, will be found very useful, as protecting a weak part of the animal.

3. Clipping—The clipping of horses at this season is considered to be at least imprudent, and by this society inhumane. Owners are respectfully urged to allow the animals to retain the covering which Nature has provided.

4. Check reins—Work horses, if at all, should be checked very low. They can thus pull to a greater advantage, protect their eyes from rain or snow, and are less liable to stumble or injure themselves. It will be noticed that the city railway companies have largely abandoned the check reins.

5. Bits—It is prudent to warm with the hands, or otherwise, bits before placing them in the horses' mouths.

Facts in Science and Art.

A correspondent of the Scientific American is sadly worried for fear the boring of oil wells and deep mining in Pennsylvania and Ohio will result in introducing volcanoes into these regions. He thinks the oil and gas are forerunners of volcanic fires, which will be brought to the surface by the "regulation" incident to well-digging and mining. The Scientific American kindly undertakes to relieve his anxiety by informing him that his fears arise apparently from a mistaken theory of volcanic heat and activity—namely, that it is due to combustion. Recent investigation, it explains, makes it altogether more probable that those phenomena are due to the pressure in and the fracture of the earth's comparatively rigid exterior, owing to the cooling and shrinkage of its molten core, as well as to a theory—only "more probable" than the other—don't see what special comfort the correspondent is to derive from it.

The Paris True Kentuckian says that John L. Jones, living near Hutchinson Station, Bourbon County, is a firm believer in foreordination, although not a church member. In 1864 his faith was severely tested. Two negroes were killed and thrown into a pond near Mr. Jones', and he, being a known Southern sympathizer, became alarmed lest Gen. Burbridge, who was stationed at Lexington ready to vigorously put into execution the law, should charge him with complicity in the murder and bring him before the Federal authorities. He therefore hurried off to implore some of his Union friends to intercede, in case of his arrest. Among others, he met Smith Kenney, who was then on his way to Lexington to try and pacify Gen. Burbridge, and to him he made known his fears and desire for assistance should the worst come. Kenney, knowing Jones' views on foreordination, replied: "Well, Mr. Jones, we are willing to do all we can for you, but if it has been foreordained that Gen. Burbridge is to have you shot, it is useless for us to interpose." Mr. C. greatly agitated, exclaimed, "Look here, I don't want any foolishness about this matter; I'm in dead earnest." Whether the doctrine he held was true or false, he was willing and anxious for human interposition that time. He got off without molestation, still holds to his doctrine, and is positive that it was not foreordained that Gen. Burbridge should have him shot for a murder in which he was neither principal nor accessory.

London Fashions.

In view of the belief that short dresses will ultimately be worn, manufacturers have produced marvels in the shape of stockings. Indeed, many are quite works of art. But the embroidery on some of them is far more elaborate than beautiful, while others just as tasteful and pretty. In fact, stockings now form a most important article in the toilet. The old design of a spear-head is considered too simple looking for the present style. Hose of black silk or lisle thread, embroidered with white or colored floss silk, are always in good taste. The newer kinds are embroidered up the front, and not at the ankles as before. Very small flowers, such as for-get-me-nots, look far prettier for the instep and leg of the stocking than roses almost as big as sunflowers, which are not at all uncommon. Span silk and cashmere silk hose can now be bought in every new and delicate shade, to match the costumes with which they are to be worn. Pale pink, blue, beige and caroubier are the most popular colors.

Fashion, like history, repeats itself, and as regards the wearing of colored stockings, the author of "Elia," written in 1819 says: "A fashion of pink colored hose for ladies came up at this juncture. Oh! the conceits which we varied upon red in all its prismatic differences. And the collateral topic of ankles. What an occasion for truly chaste virtue, like herself, of touching that nice brink, and yet not tumble over it." "I pronounce," says Charles Lamb, in reference to these stockings, "that modesty, taking her final leave of mortals, was visible in her ascent to the heavens by the track of her glowing instep; but the fashion is transient, and so is the mode which has favored us. The ankles of our fair friends in a few weeks began to reassume their pristine whiteness."

That is not the least likely in our time, 1879, for white stockings are rarely ever seen indoors, far less in the streets; and the fashion of wearing shoes which display so much of the stockings, makes it almost certain that the taste for colored hose will be more enduring than that Charles Lamb calls "the transient mode of a few weeks."

Then what dainty shoes there are. Almost extravagant, and quite indescribable in their elegance. They are made in every possible color, with gold or silver heels, and embroidered in all styles with gold or silver thread, or beads and pearls—like-wise trimmed with ribbons of lace, silk and what not. Cardinal silk stockings look very well worn under a pair of black velvet or satin slippers trimmed with white lace, and clasped with buckles to imitate diamonds.

The instep is held in place by embroidered bands of gold and silver clasps, or by ornamental knots of bright ribbons, made up in imitation of gay birds; lizards, butterflies and flowers are used to decorate the toes.

To the long gloves now worn on dress occasions fashion has added two new buttons making the almost incredible number of twenty-six, and hanging in the window in length they look far more like stockings than gloves. Sleeves to evening dresses there are none worth mentioning, and these gloves certainly cover one part of the arm, though it is at the wrong extremity. The "Olivia" is the favorite model also for bonnets made of soft material as well as caps. The latter are of Indian muslin and Breton lace. The head-dress is copied in exact imitation of the one worn by Miss Helen Terry in her clever representation of Dr. Primrose's eldest daughter, and is more becoming to most faces than the universal turban shape. The crown of the "Olivia" is loose and large, trimmed with two rows of frater white lace, which is caught back by a knot of ribbons just above the center of the forehead.—Cardiff Mail.

Memory.

There are many highly educated people who confess to having an unfortunate weakness of memory. It is a faculty which can be cultivated as well as any other mental capacity, and in the cultivation and improvement of the various capacities of the mind, the memory should be regarded as the most important, and receive its proportionate amount of attention, the same as any other branch of study. It is not the mechanical memorizing which makes one's memory strong and active, but careful regard for what are termed the "laws of association," in which are combined the principles of suggestion. If we associate the same thing with something which is familiar to us, how much more readily memory will recall the whole subject. This is illustrated by the familiar custom of tying a piece of string on one's finger, which also exists among the Chinese, who tie a piece of string or ribbon to the beard; while in Italy they assist memory by placing a ring in the palm of the hand which is often done among us by changing the ring to another finger. It was the habit of Demosthenes to thoroughly drill his memory so as to have every thought and word of his speech impressed on his mind before delivery; and many of the great authors memorized their thoughts long before they would be put in writing. Phenologists tell us that by exercising the memory it can be strengthened so as to remember things quite easily, showing that while it exists primarily as an innate talent with only a certain number, it can be acquired by exercise, and capacity by those who are deficient, and may ultimately be by creative assistance.

BURLINGTON, KY., JANUARY 30.

PAYETTE HEWITT,
of Hardin County, is a Candidate for

AUDITOR OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.

A CALL FOR A COUNTY CONVENTION.

WHEREAS the Democratic State Executive Committee has called a State Convention of the Democratic Party to meet in the city of Louisville, on 1st day of May, 1879, for the purpose of nominating candidates for the various State offices to be voted for at the ensuing August election,

Now, therefore, in order that Boone County may be represented in the said Convention, the Democratic Executive Committee of Boone County hereby calls upon the Democrats of said county to meet in mass convention, at the Court-house in Burlington, at 1 o'clock p. m., February 3d, 1879, to select delegates to represent the county in the said 1st of May Convention.

B. K. SLEET,
Chairman Co. Dem. Ex. Com.

The preamble of an act of the Legislature approved January 19th, 1878, is as follows: "Whereas it is represented that many of the good citizens of this Commonwealth do really believe that experience has pointed out the necessity of calling a convention with a view of amending the constitution of this State." Then follows an act requiring a vote to be taken throughout the State at the August election, 1879; on the question of calling such a convention. Each voter, at the polls, will have put to him the question, "Do you vote for calling a convention or not?" Now, those good citizens of the Commonwealth who verily believe that experience has shown the necessity of amending our State constitution, will answer the question propounded so as to express their ideas. It is time the voters were turning their attention to this subject and posting themselves in regard to the existing constitution in order to determine the manner of their votes. We all desire in this country, or should, that the election be free, and that the voters be intelligent, and that they cast their votes as to them seems best upon the most intelligent view they can obtain of the subject uninfluenced by landlords, shop-owners, manufacturers, bar-rooms, money or anything save a fair and just presentation of the issues that may be involved. The more important the question to be voted upon is to the people, the more they should labor to become acquainted with it in all its bearings. The dog law, the stock law, and the road law subjects in this county, of late, have caused much discussion among the people and in some quarters considerable feeling and bitterness, yet where is the man at all posted who will not say that even now an unaccountable mass of ignorance on these very laws exists. Go through any neighborhood and ask every man you meet the duties of the county Assessor, or those of the Sheriff in regard to the dog law, or the duty of a district Constable in regard to the stock law; ask them what were the leading provisions in the late proposed amendment to the stock law, and would fifty per cent. of those questioned be able to give a definite understanding on any of those subjects? We do not refer to this matter to show that people are unmindful of their interests, for upon the contrary, they are not, but frequently fail to see their interest in public matters where they are deeply concerned, and especially if a little law and politics be involved. The people generally, have become accustomed to regarding the laws of the land as a great mysterious system of great things and incomprehensible to the ordinary man without his spending a lifetime in their study, and therefore they ignore the whole subject, and leave it to others in all its parts, the plain as well as the difficult; and even many curse the whole fabric and damn its votaries. The constitution of the State is no dog law or stock law, but it is the fundamental law of the land. All other laws must come within its principles and provisions. The general departments of the Government have their boundary lines run by it, and the extent of their powers meted and bounded as by survey. When we are told that the State Government lies only in the constitution; that all its departments are created only by the constitution; that it holds each within such limits as its founders believed best for the people; that any movement of either department outside of the lines fixed for its boundaries by this organic law is void; that without a constitution society could not exist as an organization where personal liberty and rights would be respected, how important does a move to interfere with such a work appear? That there are many defects in our present constitution, and some of the gravest nature, is no longer disputed. Some of the officials might be dispensed with. Eligibility to office in some cases, it is thought, should be changed. The system of courts, it is thought by some, to be far too expensive, and far behind the times. The manner of amending the constitution appears needlessly slow and expensive. At present we simply desire to call attention to this matter.

NEXT Monday the Democracy of this county holds a mass convention for the selection of delegates to represent and cast the vote of the county in the State Convention which meets in Louisville in May. Every Democrat in the county is interested in the business that will be before the meeting, and every one that possibly can should attend and exercise his privilege as a member of the party.

An exchange says if Alexander H. Stephens were to step into one side of a large pair of scales, and all the medicine he has swallowed the past 15 years was to be suddenly dumped into the other side, the shabby statesman would shoot up like a balloon. He has taken eight hundred and seventy-nine kinds of medicine.

THE result so far in the county conventions in the race for Auditor is as follows: Ballard, Bell, Breathitt, Crittenden, Larue, Lee, Trimble and Webster instructed for Hewitt; Caldwell, Union and Simpson instructed for Smith; Nicholas, for Boyd. Jefferson and Edmondson did not instruct, but Hewitt's friends claim them.

BLAINE's resolution to investigate election frauds is rather more comprehensive, with Thurman's amendment attached, than he desired. The business managers of the Democratic party now intend testing the Congressional election lately held in Cincinnati, under the Blaine order, and have the fraud hunters at work.

LAST week, J. Frank Lowe, who failed to execute his official bond as Sheriff of Kenton County, on the first Monday in this month, as required by law, tendered the Kenton County Court an official bond which Judge Phelps would not accept, whereupon Lowe appealed to the Circuit Court.

THE Somerset Reporter says, since our Common School system has gotten into such a bad fix, it seems that the best thing at present is to change Superintendents, and as the matter rests with the Democratic party, it is their duty to nominate a new man for the position.

Who does not know the Hon. Thos. L. Jones, of Covington? Louisville Cor. for the Cincinnati Sun.

No one up here knows him, but we are all pretty well acquainted with a gentleman by that name, and who will be the next Governor, and now a resident of Newport.

THE Blackburn papers talk like the Doctor will be nominated by the "spontaneous uprising" of the people of the State. The State has not been heard from yet, and the Blackburn people may hear something "drap" yet.

JAMES W. GAFF, one of the most wealthy and energetic business men of this country, and with whom many of the Boone County people were acquainted, died at his residence in Cincinnati on last Thursday.

THE Commissioner of Pensions estimates the amount that the recently passed pension bill will take from the Treasury at from fifty to seventy-five million dollars.

THE Representative pot commences to simmer, and we prophesy that on next Monday there will be some developments in that direction.

THE wide awake farmer now sharpens his plow, and repairs his gear, for the season for plowing draws nigh!

THE candidates for County Representatives are begin to trot out in some of the counties.

DON't forget that Monday is the day delegates to the Louisville convention will be chosen.

IT is said business is on the upward again.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

St. Louis, Mo. January 24, 1879.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

I do not feel prepared, to-day, to write a letter that would be of much interest to you or your readers. There are times in the life of the strongest and the lightest hearted, when the heart will grow sad, and the feelings of our better nature drop. Such is the case with the writer to-day. The wires bring us, this morning, the sad intelligence of the death of James W. Gaff, of Cincinnati. We have known this estimable man for more than the third of a century, and we have not only known him for more than three decades, but we have had close and intimate business relations with him for more than a quarter of a century, and a more honorable, high-toned gentleman it was never our good fortune to meet. He was my friend, and he was not only the friend of myself in the time of need, but he was the friend of all around him. He was a man of large means as well as of a large heart, and he did good with his means. Many a young man has received help from his liberal hand; the community in which he lived, moved and had his being will miss him in counsel and in ministrations of love to the poor and needy. There was nothing selfish in his nature, but his heart, land and purse were ever open to the cries of the needy. I don't know what more to say, and I may be hardening your readers with too much of an obituary, but as my pen glides along these lines, I am caught upon memory's golden pinions, and transported back to more than thirty years ago, and I see him the very personification of prime manhood, and then I see him enter the sear and yellow leaf of life—then overtaken with disease, racked with pain and sorrow, and now I am called upon to say, farewell, dear friend.

"Our love would fain have called you back
When your sails were set for the other shore
But death's dark billows rolled between,
And onward still your frail bark bore.

May bright angels meet you over there,
With crowns of radiant gold,
And bear you up with loving hands
To the peaceful mansions above.

Our own citizens are called upon to-day, to mourn the loss of two of their most highly respected citizens. Edward Brooks, a public spirited citizen for more than fifty years, died last night at the age of 70 years.

And now I am called upon to chronicle the death of another friend, whom I have, for several years, viewed as one of the rising young men of this city. It is a no less personage than Horace L. Hyde, brother of Wm. Hyde, managing editor of the Republican, and he himself one of its former editors. He was on a visit to Jefferson City on Wednesday last, and at 10 o'clock a. m., on that day he visited the Tribune office, and remained there for half an hour or more reading exchanges. It is said that he was in an unusually cheery humor, and when he left the office, took a number of papers with him, probably intending to read them on his return trip to this city. Yielding to a whim, he did not wait for the train, but walked beside the track, intending of course, to board the train at some station east of the starting point. He was passed by quite a number of freight trains, but was finally overtaken by a passenger train between four and five o'clock in the afternoon as he was rounding a curve, and attempted to board same while under way, but losing his footing, he fell and was run over by a portion of the train and killed. His remains were brought to this city yesterday, and then taken to Bellville for interment. I might write more about this noble specimen of manhood, but my nerves are too weak, having already given away under such a sad and doleful report of the doings of the dreaded king of terror. He is dead. We shall never again behold his manly form and stately step on earth. We tender his weeping friends our heartfelt condolence in this hour of their sad affliction.

John Bonnet, the big-hearted restaurateur, whom everybody out here knows, and whom everybody liked, died at an early hour yesterday morning. He was a Frenchman by birth and education, but had been a citizen of this city for many years. He was recognized as the most enterprising man that ever lived in this city. The writer knew him well, and never in his life knew a man of better impulses. You will now excuse me for feeling sad, but I have probably written enough of sad news for one letter.

The weather, with us, for the past three days has been perfectly delightful, and many are of the opinion that the backbone of winter is broken. The river is swelling somewhat, and it would not surprise us in the least, if we have navigation from here to New Orleans fairly resumed by the time this is in print.

As an item of news, doubtless, to some of your readers, I may state that the First and Central Christian Churches, of this city, have had a union in contemplation for some time, and last night, through appropriate committees, it was resolved that the First Congregation close its doors about the first of next month, and unite with the Central. In said union all the officers, as well as pastors of the two congregations as they now exist, resign, and immediately after the union the congregation proceeds to elect new officers. It is supposed that Elder T. P. Halsey will be chosen pastor, and that the officers will be selected from the congregation according to their rank under the former state of affairs. —DOR A. LONG.

STATE NEWS.

MAYESVILLE has a bonded debt of $80,000.

THE Sheriff of Pulaski County returned 700 delinquents.

THE amount collected by the revenue officials in the 10th District the past year was $39,282 88.

IT is estimated that $500,000 worth of property was destroyed by the break up of the ice in the Kentucky river.

THREE million four hundred and seventy-one thousand and ten cigars were manufactured in Mayesville last year.

THE Governor has offered $500 reward for Charley Campbell who killed Jim Hawkins, in Jessamine County, some time since.

FOUR generations of the family of the venerable Isaac Reynolds assembled under his roof, near Minerva, New Year's day.

THE loss of one hundred thousand bushels of coal and many logs in the South Fork of the Kentucky River has produced great destitution in Lee County.

THE Somerset Reporter says but few people have any conception of the vast coal and timber wealth of Pulaski County—especially along the Cumberland, on both sides.

J. M. PROCTOR has carried the mail between Cynthia and Georgetown for twenty-five years, and ridden over forty thousand miles. For ten years he has ridden the same old gray.

THE Common Carriers' Company has paid over to the Trustees of the Cincinnati Southern Railroad $36,982 03 as the net earnings of the road for the quarter ending December 31, 1878.

IN this county the wheat crop is reported in very promising condition, though there is danger that the wet weather, followed by a hard freeze, may tear up the roots and impair the stand.—YEOMAN.

WILL STONE, of Somerset, has a good stomach and a sweet tooth. He ate, according to the Citizen, one pound of cake, one pound of cheese, and fifty sticks of candy at a meal. He would probably be able to hide thirty partridges in thirty minutes.

RATHER a singular accident happened to one of the stock belonging to Mr. W. L. Caldwell, of this county, on the night of the 7th inst. They were feeding under a straw-rack, when it tipped over and smothered to death four mules, one horse and a Jersey heifer valued at $225 to $250.—Danville Advocate.

THE Owen News says Wm. Rankin informs it that he has eight or ten shoats, averaging fifty pounds each, which he has been compelled to remove from his barn lot and cow pasture on account of their sucking his cows. He says he has seen four of them sucking a calf at one time, and as he is a reliable gentleman, the News vouches for the truthfulness of the assertion.

THE Live Stock Record says Ten Broeck has grown and thickened since his retirement from the turf last July, and he is now a giant in size, and perfectly magnificent in form and quality. Indeed, such a grand looking horse can not be found. Besides his breeding, size, and form, he retired at six years old, perfectly sound in his limbs, and made a record on the turf unequalled by any horse ever foaled in America.

OUR tobacco raisers may take courage from the following, which we copy from the New York Express: "American smokers have long since been accustomed to Havana cigars made of American tobacco. And now Spaniards as the Minister of Spain has telegraphed to Captain General Campos that the Madrid Government will, in March next, contract for 15,000,000 kilograms of Virginia and Kentucky tobacco."—Paducah News.

WM. STILES, says the Falmouth Independent, who lives one mile west of Falmouth, was thrown from his horse, and dragged through the bushes a short distance, last October. He was rendered insensible for a few moments, and, upon reviving, felt a strangling sensation in his throat. From the time of the accident until last Sunday, when he coughed up a large huckleberry, he suffered considerably, and could not speak above a whisper. He is now rapidly regaining his voice, and says the burr had been lodged in his windpipe 93 days.

THE Paris True Kentuckian says that John Morris who died at Petersburg, Ky., is erroneously supposed to have been the last survivor of the band of veterans who participated in Perry's victory on Lake Erie in 1813. According to the True Kentuckian, he took part in that engagement and aided in firing the first gun. Mr. Thompson, although he is now in the eighty-eighth year, retains his faculties and remembers distinctly the exciting events he is entitled at Meadville, Pa., as a private in Capt. Cochran's company, and when Perry called for volunteers to man his fleet, he was the third to volunteer his services. If his life permits, he expects to attend the annual reunion of the veterans of 1812, at Paris, this summer, says the Mayville Bulletin. We will be glad to welcome the old veteran here.

Died.

DELPHI.—On the 22d inst., at his residence near Burlington, Samuel Delphi, in the 95th year of his age.

MR. DELPHI, who was born in Madison County, Virginia, and emigrated to this State in 1809, at which time it was comparatively a wilderness. His first settling here was merely temporary, and after staying three years, he returned to his native State. At that time the country was greatly excited, the war of 1812 then being in progress, and he enlisted in the army and was on duty at the battle of Antioch. Although not in the midst of the fight, at the close of the battle, he was the first man to volunteer for the arduous and then dangerous task of conveying British prisoners to Richmond. After a three years' sojourn in Virginia, he returned to Kentucky and took up his permanent residence, and for thirty-one or thirty-two years preceding his death resided just beyond the town limits, where he reared a family of nine children, four of whom long since passed from this vale of tears. Mr. Delphi, it seems, commenced his career here as a day laborer, splitting shingles for 25 cents per hundred, and underwent the privations of all early settlers. For some time he had expressed a desire to die, and when Death laid his chilling hand on him, he only liberated a spirit which was anxious to return to the land of the living. He was buried in the cemetery near his home, and the remains were interred in the burying ground at Hiram House, and, in compliance with the request of the Committee, will be re-interred some time next summer by some Lutheran minister, he being a member of that denomination.

When the two men who were assisting to start the log bridge, which was being made for his railroad gate, out of which he intends to make a fortune. We should be glad if Mr. Rouse's gate is a success, but still there are some lurking doubts.

Quillerville.

Quillerville is situated in Squaw Bottom, about two miles west of Walton and three east of Beaver Kick. It contains one dwelling house (tenanted), one blacksmith shop (minus blacksmith), and one carpenter shop (no roof on it). It has one portable steam saw mill, situated about one mile west of Quillerville, and one corn mill. The proprietors (Senior Rouse), who broke down in their efforts to convey it from Walton to Quillerville. This mill runs finely—when placed on two good log skids, with a good team of horses attached to it. It is supposed to be six horse power, as they had six horses hitched to it when they broke down. The chief occupation of the inhabitants of this place is making sleds, sleighs and jumpers of all descriptions, which they contemplate taking to the Ohio River on a raft in the spring, when the ice breaks up, and from thence to Cincinnati, where they can have an opportunity of getting them out into the country. It is said of Great Britain that the sun never sets on the Queen's dominions; but at Quillerville the sun never rises. One can get an occasional glimpse of the sky at noon on a clear day, however, by looking straight upward. Mr. Editor, if you or any of your friends wish to visit this town, you may do so when you get within a half mile of the town, you will find many roads leading down the hills; but there is no difference which one you take, you will be certain to find another on hand, and before you go very far, you will wish you had went another.

HARD times works wonders. Hotels managed on business principles are a rarity these hard times. The Galt House, corner Sixth and Main streets, Cincinnati, O., managed by W. E. Marshall, son of the former well known proprietor, has a first-class business management at $1 and $1 1/2 per day, just one-half the usual hotel charges for similar accommodations elsewhere. The Galt House meets the issue presented by the present small profits in general business, keeping a most excellent house in every particular at the lowest possible rates, and we heartily advise all to give it an early trial.

COMMISSIONER'S NOTICE.

Boone Circuit Court.

W. L. RIDDELL,
Editor and Proprietor.
BURLINGTON, KY., FEBRUARY 6.

The price of hogs is slightly down.
There are several telephones in operation in Covington.
The cities of Cincinnati and Indianapolis have a telephone connection.
Navigation is fully resumed, all up river gorges having passed down.
Tur instructions for Governor, at present, gives Blackburn 154 votes; Underwood, 103; Jones, 47; Lindsay, 9.

DR. BLACKBURN was not in Burlington Monday, but was represented by Gen. Basil W. Duke—quite a formidable proxy.

The Louisville Convention, if well attended by the delegates appointed throughout the State, will be rather an unwieldy assemblage.

The plague which is raging in Russia is creating much excitement, and several villages have been burned to prevent the spread of the epidemic.

The Owen County Court-house is demanding the attention of the Justices. The present building is considered unsafe and liable to fall at any time.

MONEY, of the Cincinnati News, estimates that the Democratic majority in 1880 will be over a million votes. Guess Money has returns from all the back counties.

ONE night last week, a Moscow, Kentucky, merchant's safe was blown open and four thousand dollars extracted. That amount of money is a very heavy strain on a safe anyhow.

BILL BARNES, a Monflee murderer, has been sentenced to the Penitentiary for life, but he and his friends swear he shall never go. Barnes declares he will commit suicide rather than go to prison.

THE two divines, candidates for Superintendent of Public Instruction, have displayed less charity toward each other than any other two candidates in the field. They should read the Ten Commandments about fifteen times each day of their canvass.

THE ordinary county candidate is nothing to compare with one of those in pursuit of a State office. One of these fellows can shake hands with two men at once, bow to the third and smile at a ten acre field full of voters without the least inconvenience.

The mass meeting, a portion of the time Monday, was immensely noisy, to say nothing about the temper displayed; but then it was a family muss and the boys are in a good humor again, and should now resolve to be a little more harmonious when they meet again.

THE homeopathic physicians, who have been investigating the cause of the yellow fever, consider the city of New Orleans as the point from which the disease starts in this country, and that by keeping this city in a proper condition they are of the opinion that the disease will be eradicated in the Mississippi Valley.

THE Alms-house at Louisville was destroyed by fire one day last week. There were over three hundred inmates when the fire appeared, some five or six of whom were burned to death, while several others were seriously injured in making their escape. The building was erected in 1874 at a cost of $169,457, and was insured for $70,000.

Two of the happiest candidates that have gone from Burlington for many a day were Gov. J. C. Underwood and G. M. Edgar, last Monday. Boone did a good part by these gentlemen. Governor Underwood has received the endorsement of Boone twice, and we are certain that the county has never indorsed a man that is more of a gentleman.

THE notorious Frank Turner who murdered one Judd in Grant County not long since, and who was taken to Covington and lodged in jail for safe keeping, made his escape last Sunday night. Turner obtained a key with which he unlocked his cell door, after which the door to the jail entrance was forced off the hinges and the prisoner escaped.

It is generally supposed that in a State as far north as Iowa the atmosphere is too pure for the propagation of the blue-gang, but recent events prove quite the contrary, and one night last week a gang took possession of a Dallas County man, whom, had it not been for the timely appearance of his friends, they would in all probability have put to death.

The trial of those accused of the murder of Judge Burnett, in Breathitt County, was called at Jackson, last week, when Fred Gamble, one of the indicted parties, swore Judge Randall off the bench. The Clerk then proceeded to hold an election for a Special Judge, but it resulted in no choice. The Governor was immediately informed of the facts, whereupon he commissioned Judge Jackson, of Louisville, as a Special Judge to try the accused parties. The indications are these culprits will be brought to the bar of justice without any very great delay.

It strikes us that under no circumstances should the delegates appointed by the various counties be left uninstructed. When they go to the State Convention they are expected to reflect the will of the county, which they may fail to do if left untrammelled except so far as they may inform themselves as to the wishes of the people they represent. Instructions lift the responsibilities from the shoulders of the delegates and rest them where they belong, besides being a protection to the delegates against the overtures of the several candidates from now until the first of May. There are several other good reasons for instructing delegates that might be advanced.

MONDAY, Campbell instructed for Jones for Governor, and quit.

Carroll instructed for Blackburn for Governor; Cantrell, Lieutenant Gov.; Hardin, Attorney-General; Hewitt, Auditor; Smith, Superintendent of Public Instruction; Vories, Register of the Land Office and Tate for Treasurer.

Pike instructed for Lindsay for Governor; Davidson, Lieutenant Governor; Cooper, Attorney-General; J. W. Boyd, Auditor; Tate, Treasurer; Williams, Register; Henderson, Superintendent.

Lincoln instructed for Blackburn for Governor; Bowen, Lieutenant Governor; Smith, Auditor; Hardin, Attorney-General; Tate, Treasurer; D. N. Williams, Register; Allen, Superintendent.

Meade instructed for Blackburn for Governor; Tyler, Lieutenant Governor; Hewitt, Auditor; Hardin, Attorney-General; Tate, Treasurer; Henderson, Superintendent; Brown, Register of the Land Office.

Marshall instructed for Blackburn for Governor; Tyler, Lieutenant Governor; Hewitt, Auditor; Moss, Attorney-General; Tate, Treasurer; Henderson, Superintendent; Boyd, Register of the Land Office.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.
St. Louis, Mo., January 31, 1879.
To the Editor of the Recorder:

There is nothing strange, striking or comical in this part of the moral vineyard this week. The weather has been more like April weather than anything else to which we can compare it. We have had rain and sunshine every day in the week, so far, and it is almost warm enough to start vegetation. It has been a good week sleeping. No United States Senator for to elect, no excitement in the religious world, and everybody seems to be waiting for something to turn up.

Her Majesty's Opera Company, J. H. Mapleson, Director, is at the Olympic, this week, but as tickets of admission are placed at three dollars, which is a little more money than your correspondent has to pay for Italian music, we can not say whether it is good or not. The fact is, we are not much on foreign music anyhow. We paid, once upon a time, two dollars to hear Jenny Lind sing, and sat next to a gentleman and his wife who paid seventy-five dollars for their tickets, and we thought then that we did not get the worth of our money; and from that day to this we have been very cautious about how we spent money for foreign music. It always seemed to the writer that there was a great deal of science and very little soul in Operatic Music. However, you will not understand me as setting myself up as a critic.

The ice in front of the city commenced moving Tuesday, and navigation southward may be considered as about resumed, as boats are receiving freight for southern ports, and some will, doubtless, depart for the Ohio and the Southern shores Saturday evening. Business, however, is not yet good, and will not be until the Father of Waters is open to Keokuk and points above, which will be 30 days yet.

Messrs Dadd, Brown & Co., the large drygoods firm that made an assignment some few months since, effected a compromise with their creditors yesterday, at forty cents on the dollar, paying in 3, 6, 9 and 12 months, and resumed business to day. This firm did the largest business in their line of any house west of the Mississippi.

The writer would suppose, if the weather is as warm and springlike with you as it is with us to-day, and for the past few days, that your farmers are taking their plows to the blacksmith shop for repairs, and brushing up, generally, preparatory to putting in their spring crops. Speaking of crops reminds me that it is an admitted fact—your men harvested the largest crop in their specialty, this winter, ever known before, and if the price, the coming summer, is to be regulated by the supply, we suppose the poorest will be able to have cool water this summer, for it does really seem that every old, vacant house, shed and open lot about the city is now full of ice, and that of the very best quality.

WASHINGTON LETTER.
Special Correspondence to the Recorder.
WASHINGTON, January 30, 1879.

All Congress are agreed—Democrats, Republicans, Greenbackers and David Davis—that the next census shall be the best ever taken, giving more, and more accurate reports of population, production and resources than any other has. Nothing could be better as a document to circulate abroad than a full and reliable statement on all these points. It would not only bring to us a good class of emigrants, but would make known to the people all over the world the extent and variety of the things we have to sell. But there is a question that may cause delay in passing through Congress the necessary measures, and that is the political one. If Mr. Hayes or the Secretary of the Interior has the appointment of the army of officers required for the service, the census taking would be turned into a radical invasion of the several States. Mr. Hayes can not be relied upon to see that a fair selection is made, and as an evidence of this, reference may be made to the numberless men now in office under him, and who assisted in the frauds that made him President, or to the fact that he has just sent Senator Christianity out of the country to make room in the Senate for Zack Chandler. Some plan must be devised by which this enormous patronage will be distributed without regard to the coming Presidential nomination and election.

The House, yesterday, as on the day before, and on numerous other occasions voted to accept Senate amendment increasing appropriations. It is likely the Postoffice Bill will be $2,000,000 greater when passed, than when reported by the House Committee, and that the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Bill will receive similar treatment. How much will be agreed to as additional to the Sundry Civil Bill, or what proportions the Deficiency Bill will assume, no one can tell. Thus the House is doing its best to compel the 46th Congress, which will be Democratic, to impose new and unpopular taxes, and so make the party unpopular.

There has been shown a highly interesting telegraphic correspondence between Postmaster-General Tyner, and Secretary of the Interior, Chandler. It shows on the face that two men were to be appointed Indian Agents, and were to pay five thousand dollars for the appointments, the money to be used in Indiana. The explanation given by Mr. Tyner, yesterday, is that the "Indian Agents" were "clerks," for money to be used in the Indiana campaign, and that no appointment to office was contemplated.

NOTICE.

At a meeting of Mt. Pleasant Grange on Saturday last, it was decided unanimously that all members who were behind in dues more than six months should be invited to come forward, and upon the payment of thirty cents all dues against them would be canceled to January 1st, 1879. This invitation is extended to the first Saturday in April next.

A MORNING SUNBEAM.

A nestling in the little crib,
A soft hand laid upon my head,
A gentle whisper in my ear,
"Mamma, I'm tumbling into bed!"
"O no," I said, "I will never do;
Now, but those little peepers light,
And sleep and dream till morning light,
Then you may come when comes the light."
Again a nestling in the crib,
As down to rest my birdie lay,
I listened, for I thought she spoke—
"Huddy up, light!" I heard her say.
Then all was still. We slept again
Till dawn lit up the eastern sky;
Then sang my birdie, sweet and clear,
"Now light has tumbled, and so has I!"

Why Women Marry.

Vanity Fair in a recent issue says: The question which we considered last week, "Why Men Marry," is an interesting one; but it must be inferior in interest to the question "Why Women Marry" in the degree in which men are in all respects less interesting than women. The willingness of women to marry is greater and more potent than that of men; and we will add, that it is a great deal more wonderful. That women have to all through life, we entertain no doubt, and that the matrimonial state as understood by experience, has, as a rule, fewer attractions for them than for men, we also believe to be true. Yet there are many men who from choice abstain from marrying, and still more who put off marrying till the last practical moment, we doubt if there are any women who do the same. The man who refuses the married state from option, and not many marry, and not many marry to a late period of life from the repugnance to having a husband. That women refuse individual men, and sometimes go on refusing man after man, is true enough; but then their objection is to the man and not to the condition of life the man proposes; or, not frequently, their refusal arises from mere skittishness, from a feeling they may do better, or from a cheerful conviction that there is plenty of time to "think about it." As a rule, however, women who have the chance of marrying, marry, and they would marry yet more promptly than they do were it not that they are frequently held back from taking a foolish step by wise parents or dissuading friends. How is this apparent paradox to be explained? There is less to induce a woman to marry than to induce men; but men hesitate to marry and women jump at marriage. Some will answer that man is a rational and woman an irrational animal; but over and above the distinction being too complimentary to be true, it is one of those plausible explanations that explain nothing. Again, it is sometimes affirmed that, in marrying, men sacrifice liberty, whereas, women, in marrying, acquire it. But this is an argument easily disposed of. When men sacrifice what is called their liberty by marrying, they are already tired of their liberty, or that particular form of it which bachelorhood enjoys, and were the point thoroughly examined, we suspect it would be found that they abandoned a form of liberty of which they are weary for another form they have not possessed.

The Poor Girls.

The poorest girls in the world are those who have never been taught to work. There are thousands of them. They have been taught to despise labor and depend on others for a living, and are perfectly helpless. If misfortune comes upon their friends, as it often does, their cases are hopeless. The most forlorn and miserable set of women upon earth belong to this class. It belongs to parents to protect their daughters from this deplorable condition. They do them great wrong if they neglect it. Every daughter ought to be taught to earn her own living. The rich as well as the poor require this training. The wheel of fortune rolls swiftly on—the rich are very likely to become poor and the poor rich—and is indispensable to the poor. Well-to-do parents must educate their children to work. No reform is more imperative than this.

Coal Ashes on Sand.

A correspondent of the American Cultivator says that three years ago he commenced putting on coal ashes, and has put them on every spring since. The result is surprising. This spot, which three years ago was as barren as the highway, is now covered with white clover, which has been cut this year, and is now, under a July sun, as fresh and green as in the spring. No other fertilizer has been used on this land, and the effect must be due to the use of the ashes. In some spots the ashes were two inches thick, while there the effect is most marked. He has also used coal ashes in a compost with stable manure, and applied them to the potatoes in the hill. He found on digging them, the smoothest potatoes were where there were the most ashes.

A BAD wife is a shackle on her husband's feet, a burden on his shoulders, a palsy to his hands, smoke to his eyes, vinegar to his teeth, a thorn to his side, a dagger to his heart.

A BRIDGEPOR three year-old accomplished a feat the other day by tipping, and joyfully exclaimed: "I did it, mamma, but I had to stand on my hind legs."

Chinese Dentistry.

It is well known that the Chinese attribute the toothache to the gnawing of worms, and that their dentists profess to take these worms from the decayed tooth. But how they perform this trick, and so artfully conceal it in the hurry of daily business, was a secret only recently ascertained by a European inquiry. After some difficulty and delicate negotiation, an intelligent looking native practitioner was induced to hand over the implements of his trade, together with a number of the worms, and to give instructions in the method of procedure. When a patient with the toothache applies for relief, if the tooth is solidly fixed in the socket, the gum is separated from it with sharp instruments and muffled to bleed. During this operation the cheek is held on one side by a bamboo spatula, both ends of which are alike, and on the end held in the hand some minute worms are concealed under the paper pasted to the spatula. When all is ready, this is adroitly turned and inserted in the mouth, and the paper becoming moistened is very easily torn with the sharp instrument used for cutting the gums; the worms mix with the saliva, and the dentist, of course, picks them out with a pair of forceps. The patient having ocular demonstration that the cause of the disease has been removed, his good reason to expect relief, which in many cases would naturally follow the bleeding of the gum. When the pain returns the same operation is performed over again, and a fresh supply of worms fully accounts for the recurring trouble. These worms are manufactured in quantities to suit the trade, and they are very cleverly done; still, to carry out the delusion fully, the dentist is obliged to keep on hand a few live worms to show their patients, explaining that the most of those taken from the tooth are killed either by a powder which is often applied, or the process of removing them with the forceps. The practice just described, it may be added, is only resorted to when the tooth is firmly set in the head.

Women in China.

The condition of women in China is most pitiable; suffering, privation, contempt, all kinds of misery and degradation seize on her in her cradle and accompany her pitilessly to her tomb. Her very birth is commonly regarded as a humiliation and disgrace to the family—an evident sign of the male-dilection of heaven. If she is not immediately suffocated, she is looked upon and treated as a creature intrinsically despicable, and scarcely belonging to the human race. This appears so uncontested a fact that Pan-houan, celebrated, though a woman, among Chinese writers, endeavors in her works to humiliate her own sex by reminding them constantly of the inferior rank they occupy in the creation. "When a son is born," she says, "he sleeps on a bed, he is clothed with silk and plays with pearls; everyone attends to his princely cries. But when a girl is born she sleeps upon the ground, is merely wrapped up in a cloth, plays with a tile and is incapable of acting either virtuously or viciously. She has nothing to think of but preparing food, making wine and not vexing her parents." Even after marriage her case is not improved. According to expressions of an old Chinese writer, "the newly-married wife should be but a shadow and an echo in the princely cries." She has no right to take her meals with her husband; nay, not even with her male children; her duty is to serve them at table, to stand by them in silence, help them to drink, and light their pipes. She must eat alone, and after they have done, and in a corner; her food is scanty and coarse, and she would not dare to touch even what is left by her own sons. It may be thought that this does not well agree with the much-talked-of principle of filial piety; but it must not be forgotten that in China woman counts for nothing; the law ignores her existence, or notices her merely to load her with fetters, to complete her servitude and to confirm her legal inequality. Polygamy is allowed, and the heart-rendering jealousy and quarrels that thence ensue lead to numerous suicides.

Speculative—In His Mind.

They shovelled along on a window-sill in the Post-office to give Wicked Jack room to sit down, and then resumed their conversation about Santa Claus' gifts. One boy got a knife, another a pair of skates, and the third stammered a little as he stated that he received a diamond pin.
"And ver' tinned it for a dog?" inquired one.
"Well, no; I giv it to the baby to play with, and he swallowed it."
"Diamonds is good 'nuff for common butelacks," observed Jack, while he cleaned his nails with a toothpick, "but you orter seen the gold watch I got! I telly you the fourteen diamonds and twenty-one pearls in the cases made me scream right out when I hauled it from the stocking! I was so weak in the knees I could hardly get down town!"
"And is it up home?" inquired a boy with a frost-bitten ear.
"Up home! Do you think I'm 'lasses candy!" scornfully replied Jack, as he got down. "Not much. I rented it to a member of the Legislature at $2 a day—Free Press."

WHEN a man and a woman are made one the question is, "Which one?" Sometimes there is a long struggle between them before the matter is settled.

Words of Wisdom.

A little girl was asked, "What is faith?" She replied, "Doing God's will and asking no questions."
Many a sweetly fashioned mouth has been disfigured and made hideous by the fiery tongue within it.
Piety ought to be lovely, because it ought to be virtuous adorned, and there is nothing so lovely as virtue.
As the body can not live without food, so the soul can not preserve the grace of God, its life, without prayer.
Wherever you can find a man who stands by God, God will stand by him.
"You honor Him, He will honor you."
It is little troubles that wear the heart out. It is easier to throw a bomb-shell a mile than a feather—even with artillery.
The rude man is contented if he sees but something going on; the man of more refinement must be made to feel; the man entirely refined desires to reflect.

Have enough regard for yourself to treat your greatest enemy with quiet politeness. All petty spite is mere meanness, and hurt yourself more than anyone else.
When the tongue is silent and dares not speak, there may be a look, a gesture, an innuendo that stabs like the pistol, and is more fatal than the stiletto, and is more fatal than the stiletto, and is more fatal than the stiletto.

Let us carefully observe those good qualities wherein our enemies excel us, and endeavor to excel them by avoiding what is faulty and imitating what is excellent in them.
Leisure is time for doing something useful. This leisure the diligent man will obtain, but the lazy man never; so that, as Poor Richard says, a life of leisure and a life of laziness are two different things.
Heat and animosity, contest and conflict, may sharpen the wits, although they rarely do; they never strengthen the understanding, clear the perspicacity, guide the judgment or improve the heart.

Love, like the opening of the heavens to the saints, shows for a moment, even to the dullest man, the possibilities of the human race. He has faith, hope and charity for another being, perhaps but a creation of his imagination; still it is a great advantage for a man to be profoundly loving even in his imaginations.

Men unfold their natures gradually, and their traits and peculiarities are called out by a variety of circumstances. As a feather may show which way the wind blows, and a floating twig the current of a stream, so may a little matter enable you to determine the true character of a man, and to know how you can trust him and what are his capabilities.

The Great Army.

"Tramp, tramp, tramp, the boys are marching," how many of them? Sixty full regiments, every man of which before twelve months shall have completed their course, will lie down in the grave of the drunkard! Every year, during the past decade, witnessed the same sacrifice; and sixty regiments stand behind the army and ready to take its place. "Tramp, tramp, tramp," to the sound comes to us in the echoes of footsteps of the army just expired; tramp, tramp, tramp, comes to us from the army of recruits.

A gre t tide of life flows restlessly to its death. What in God's name are they fighting for? The privilege of satisfying an appetite, of conforming to a social usage, of filling sixty thousand homes with shame and sorrow, of loading the public with the burden of pauperism, of crowding our prisons with felons, of detracting from the productive industries of the country, of ruining fortunes and breaking hope, of breeding disease and wretchedness, of destroying both body and soul. There is no question before the American people to-day that begins to match in importance, the temperance question.

The question of American slavery was never anything but a baby by the side of this; and the prophecy that within ten years, if not within five years, the whole country is awakened to it, and divided upon it. Temperance laws are being passed by the various Legislatures, which they must sustain or go over, soul and body, to the liquor interest and influence. Steps are being taken on behalf of the public health, morals and prosperity, which they must approve by voice or act, or they must consent to be left behind and left to the mercy of no conscience, and no compromise on the part of the temperance men and no quarter to the foe. The great curse of our country and of our race must be destroyed.

It has been noticed so often that the subject is trite, how often a vein of comedy is found in the deepest tragedies of life. This is exemplified in a remark of George to his dying wife, the characteristic of that un sentimental materialist to be passed over. In one of Mary Wooltoncraft's last hours, when she was suffering acute agony, Mr. Basil Montague ran to Dr. Carlisle, and returned before the physician with an antidote which he administered himself, raising her to administer it. The medicine had an immediate effect, and she turned to her husband and said, "Oh, Godwin, I am in heaven!" But even at that moment Godwin declined to be entrapped into the admission that heaven existed, and he calmly replied, "You mean my dear, that your physical sensations are somewhat easier."

THE LOUISVILLE COMMERCIAL is now about to enter upon its tenth year. While staunchly adhering to the republican party, it will aim to be fair and just in its criticisms on public men and measures, and without holding back its own party when deserved, or praising its opponents when they are entitled to it.

THE DAILY COMMERCIAL has the full telegraphic dispatches of the Associated Press, and gives a complete record of current events. The WEEKLY COMMERCIAL is a large nine-column paper, with few advertisements, especially edited to make it acceptable as a family newspaper. A VALENTINE.
BY FAITH WALTON.

While looking over letters old and yellow I came across an old Valentine
Quite covered o'er with Cupids and with roses
Sent to me years ago, when youth was warm
Ahl well I mind the day that I received it—
It seemed at least a century ago;

I opened it with trembling hands and breathless glow
With sweet expectancy my cheeks did glow
How bright and beautiful looked then the rose—Through all the years they've kept their changeless hue!

I read and read again the tender verses,
And treasured them as youth and love can do.

The Cupids now look very faint and staid,
Yet there on top a golden hair astride;
The verses, too, no sound a trifle sly;
Yet their racy spirit I've laid aside.

But, as I sit and hold the gaudy triad,
My lost youth rises up before my view—
The precious years when seasons were all summer.

What a path lay 'neath skies bright and blue,
How gladly would I give the mile of wisdom
I have gained, to go back once more
And feel again the thrill of expectation
As when the postman left this at my door.

This foolish little piece of ink and paper
Is faded, while my youth is dead and gone;
The hand that wrote the verses, cold and pale;

And yet unchanged, unaltered in the song,
Why keep reminders of the bright days vanish'd?

So, Valentine, I bid you now good-bye;
I watch the flames swirl up and blight your rose.

And from my heart come long, wistful sighs.

Information Wanted.
FLORENCE, KY., Feb. 3, 1879.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

In glancing through your County Court news, I noticed the report of Commissioners' settlement with the Sheriff, and that he had funds in his hands belonging to the various districts, and that our district was entitled to $359.70. I understand this belongs to the road fund; if I am not correct, I wish to be enlightened in your next issue. I think it would not be a bad idea, and would be very interesting reading, if from time to time you would publish the detailed reports of the various Supervisors, how many and who are delinquent. Noticing the above large sum, to our district's credit, I am inquisitive enough to ask for what purpose it is to be applied, and to whom it is paid. If the money has been spent, we do not see what it does us to show for it. Our roads are none of the best, and if the farmers only knew with what little labor, and in how short a time, with determined energy and all working together, they could have good roads, they would not long be without them.

No doubt, the proper distribution of funds in each district would create a great deal of jealousy, and the method would be subject to a great deal of discussion. We notice in Fayette County they have adopted a very good plan; though, from being a law in a part, it should become a law—that is, allowing only those who have paid their poll tax, and hold receipt for same, to vote. This is one of the steps in the right direction. In the good old days of our fathers, it was considered an honor and a privilege to exercise the right of suffrage, and the time was looked forward to with great pleasure, and as one of the events of our lives, when the first ballot was cast; but now, when every Tom, Dick and Harry marches up to the polls, all the above greatness has departed. We would not be so exclusive in the ballot as to debar everyone, but some qualification would procure a better, purer and more sensible ballot. On great questions, where large sums of money are about to be expended, how often do we see those who have no interest at stake, or who do not pay taxes, outvoting those who have everything at stake.

That surely will be the millennium of politics when the great requisite for office shall be merit and qualification, and not the one who can be the most liberal in the use of money at elections. We are glad to know that our State has a stringent law on the subject, and hope it will be enforced.

Crawling your indulgence for these few desultory remarks, I hope at some future time to use your columns again.

THERE are two periods in a woman's life when she does not like to talk. When one is a never knew, and the other we have forgotten.

A New Book of Chronicles.

In the fourth year of the reign of King James, he spoke alone in his chamber, saying:

My days are numbered, and the hours thereof are waxing short. My locks are becoming as silver and as the spray on the rivers.

Weak and totter; yea, even my fingers have lost their grip upon the purses-trings. The mine hath departed from my tongue, mine eyes are dim, and my hand hath lost its cunning.

But of the evils that have come upon me in the closing of my days, the most grievous appeareth in that my prophets and servants hath placed their hands and their feet against the throne, and have set their shoulders against it, and have braced their bodies and pushed against it with the strength of the wild lion, until now, behold the legs thereof have waxed weak and uncertain, and the throne hath become unstable and shaky, inasmuch that in truth I can no longer sit upon it in safety;

but I will speak, by the mouth of Luke, one of my prophets, the slayer of yaller jack in a place called jungles in the alligator land; and by my servant John the Jovial, of the tobacco land, where aforetime one Ethiopian was of more value than gold or silver or diamonds or precious stones and three whites—that same John who playeth the harp and the lute, and hath an ear for the violin, and fiddle in the hills and by the rivers and on the mountain tops, and crieth in the streets of the city, "Who is he that faileth to shake the hand of the plowman, the ass driver, the inn of rent garments and the rag-muffin? yea, who is he that turneth up his nose when night the unwashed babe and kisseth it not? yea, verily, not I," saith John; and by the mouth of Thomas, of the far north country, who dwelleth and abideth within the shade of the city of Porphopolis, on the banks of a large river, whose waters are dried up with the heat of summer and frozen with the cold of winter, inasmuch that there is no other river like unto that river. (This is that same Thomas, once a fast friend of Samuel, who lived in the darkness, and had much love for his home; verily, Samuel walked only in darkness, and his ways were past finding out; and he saith in the pride of his strength, "I am he who will come and am come, a high churchman of the sect called Protestant; and now neither Nero nor Caligula nor anything else from Rome shall abide in the high places set apart by the holy scriptures for the American eagle to hover her brood. Get ye out where the owl hooteth her lowly hootings and where the stork buildeth on the ruins and the chipmunk fleeth from the sight of man. And Samuel I will chase and many other things, the enormities wherewith I did sicken his disciples, and they departed from him that he died for want of food and raiment, and is buried in the Old Dominion. And his disciples betrayed him, and now swear in their hearts they never knew the man.)

And Thomas and John and Luke went out from the king's palace and sought their feet from against the throne and journeyed abroad through the whole land, proclaiming as they went to the people, saying, "King James is old and his flesh is drying upon his bones; his knees stand apart as the ox-bow with weakness; his eyes refuse to see the light, his teeth chatter, his hair droppeth from his head. Yea, weakness and old age hath come upon him inasmuch that he can no longer sit squarely upon the throne and judge righteously between the people."

And then John said, "I want to be your King, yea, that James is shortly to be no more forever. The people of this land know me; I beseech them to hearken not to Luke nor to Thomas; for I am I not weightier than they?"

And Luke saith unto the people: "For the especial purpose of ruling over the people was I born and raised in the man's estate; and now, why should John or Thomas seek to provoke me to surrender my birthright, that perchance they might gobble it? I have not the wisdom to see that so great a favor bestowed upon them might perchance destroy their equilibrium and send them to the mad-house as if possessed of a devil? Now, wherefore will they run so great a risk? Verily, they are beside themselves. Have ye not seen the level of yeller jack and how I led him, and how he slew his thousands and tens of thousands, and how the whole land of the sun was sorely afflicted by him, and how I fought him till he gave up the ghost?"

But Thomas saith unto the people: "Hearken unto neither John nor Luke. For doth not the least one among you know of a truth that neither physician nor fat hath a place in the constitution, were it by our fathers for the guidance of their children in the paths of righteousness? Howbeit then, in choosing a king to take James' seat when he hath been called to his fathers, that you are to look upon Luke and John and pass me by as a throw-up of garbage? Is it not known to the multitude that I have been a deacon-ant of the most strict sect; that I was raised at the feet of Gamaliel; that I have at no time departed from the teachings of the fathers to a hair's breadth; to the right nor to the left; that I have kept the faith? But Luke saith that in time past he conquered yeller jack till he died. And now I beseech ye people to say unto Luke, keep on your breast-plate and helmet, and keep well filled, even to the brim, your many pill boxes, for yeller jack is not dead but only asleep; and hamper not yourself with much authority, and be not king, for yeller jack will again challenge thee to single combat, and there canst thou outshine all the stars in glory."

And Benjamin, the high priest of the land of Boone, hearing these sayings of Luke and John and Thomas, went up into the temple, and the multitude followed him.

And Benjamin arose in the Judges' seat, and spake, saying: "Men and brethren, I call on you, as your chief in this matter, this day to say whom ye will have to be your king when James has given up the ghost, and who shall keep your accounts, and to whom shall the little children and the babies look for instruction. Speak ye out this day, or forever hold your peace."

And Benjamin closed his mouth for a season.

And Robert, a teacher of the sect called Baptists, betook himself to the Judges' seat, and, turning his face to people, commanded them to work while it was day, for when the night cometh no man can work.

Thereupon one called Luke spake before the multitude, and to his words hearkened the people, much pleased. But the old Democratic patriarch called Boyd plied him with questions, and spake in turn in a loud voice, so that he was heard afar off, and his voice was as of thunder. And Luke waxed warm, and again essayed to speak to the multitude; and his voice was as the thunder clap and his words as the sizzing of the thunderbolt.

And William the Truthful arose and spake, saying: "I am, my brethren, the oldest Democrat now living. I was born erst the floods came; ages before Cain killed Abel was I a living, moving Democrat of the Andrew Jackson tribe." These and many other truths spake he to the multitude, and in his heart saith, "Doth not Andrew rule in the world of spirits?"

And Jerry, a Democrat of the centurion hand, essayed to speak, but his legs smote the one against the other, and his ears refused to hear, and his body seemeth not to stand erect. And Jerry ceased to strive and gave up the ghost, and the mourners go about the streets.

And after much speaking, Robert from the Judges' seat in a loud voice commanded those who would that Thomas should be their king to arise and be numbered.

Whereupon all, as with one voice, cried out, "Give us Thomas to rule over us!"

And Robert saith, "Then Thomas it shall be."

And then the multitude chose one Hewitt to keep the books of their accounts, and one Tate to stand guard both day and night near their money bags. And many other things did the people, all of which, are they not written in the Recorder for reproof and instruction of them that believe and abide in the resolutions of the year seventeen ninety and eight.

Some Things Worth Knowing.

That fish may be sealed much easier by first dipping in boiling water about a minute.

That milk which has turned or changed may be sweetened or rendered fit for use again by stirring in a little soda.

That salt will curdle new milk; hence, in preparing milk porridge, gravies, etc., the salt should not be added until the dish is prepared.

That fresh meat beginning to sour will sweeten if placed out doors in the cool air over night.

That clear boiling water will remove tea stains and many fruit stains. Pour the water through the stain, and thus prevent it spreading over the fabric.

That tablespoonful of turpentine boiled with your white clothes will greatly aid the whitening process.

That boiling starch is much improved by the addition of sperm, or salt, or both, or a little gum arabic dissolved.

That beacwax and salt will make your rusty flat-irons as clean and smooth as glass. Tie a lump of salt in a rag and rub iron with that purpose.

When the irons are hot, rub them first with the wax, and scour with a paper or a cloth sprinkled with salt.

That blue ointment and kerosene mixed in equal proportions, and applied to bedsteads, is an unailing bug remedy, and that a coat of whitewash is ditto for the walls of a log house.

That kerosene will soften boots and shoes which have been hardened by water, and will render them as pliable as new.

That you should subscribe for the Recorder without further delay.

The hair of the buffalo is now largely employed in making overcoats, which are all wool.

In Memoriam.

To the Worshipful Master, Wardens and Brethren of Boone Union Lodge No. 304, your committee to whom was referred the obituary notice of Capt. J. M. Stanifer beg leave to make the following report:

IN MEMORIAM.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL,
Editor and Proprietor.

BURLINGTON, KY., FEBRUARY 13.

The Greenbackers hold a convention in Frankfort, on the 20th of next March, to nominate candidates for State offices.

The English are having trouble about their beer. They do not relish the adulterated article with which their market is stocked.

BLACKBURN, for Governor; Cantrell, for Lieutenant Governor; Hewitt, for Auditor; Henderson, for Superintendent and Harlin for Attorney-General are marching along with a considerable advantage in instructions.

This old gentleman of Gramercy Park says: "I declare before God and my country that the votes of Louisiana and Florida were bought. I would scorn and condemn my righteous title if the Democratic party had secured my seat by fraud."

Now that the county has disposed of the candidates for State offices, the voters will have time to investigate the propriety in calling a convention for revising the constitution. Provide yourselves with a copy of the document and be prepared to meet the issue when you go to the polls.

Summ and Henderson, candidates for Superintendent of Public Instruction are both ministers, but, no doubt, either thinks it just as impossible for the other to enter the remainder of this is the passage of Scripture where in the rich man, the camel and the eye of a needle are the principal characters.

SEVERAL of the papers in the State are giving some of the candidates for State offices a genuine blistering about their plan of conducting the present canvass. We believe in giving a candidate (as well as the devil) his dues, and do not hesitate to say that the department of the candidates who visited Boone was not such as to subject them to the slightest criticism.

THERE is something particularly strange about the manner in which the people of Boone became politically infatuated with Colonel Elzer, candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction. The Colonel came to the county but three or four days previous to the convention, a total stranger, commenced work against Smith and Henderson, both of whom were acquainted and had several warm friends, and achieved a complete triumph over both these gentlemen, greatly to the surprise of the friends of the aforesaid gentlemen.

SOME of the counties, through fear of injuring their favorite candidates, refuse to instruct for more than one office. That is a very loose way of doing business, and liable to be followed by bad results, such as trading votes in the convention, or selling out previous to the meeting of the convention. If a county has no choice in candidates let it so indicate by declaring its vote shall not be cast for any candidate for that particular office, and, on the contrary, instruct for all the candidates between whom it desires making a choice.

THERE is nothing discouraging in the gradual ascent in the price of hogs since the first of the year. As the figures gradually approach five cents the farmer cultivates a better feeling toward his swine crop, which in the latter part of 1878 caused him much sorrowing and many restless nights. All signs of business men should be rejoiced at the prospect of better times with farmers, for they are the foundation upon which stand all classes of business. Make the farmer flourish and the entire commercial world will prosper accordingly.

DORS Luke Norman held the Boone Democratic Union under his thumb last night. It would seem from the result of the convention at Burlington last Monday—Grant County Herald.

In justice to both the Democracy of the county and Mr. Norman we say NO. It is true that the convention instructed for Fayette Hewitt, Captain Norman's friend, and it is equally true that the same convention instructed for gentlemen to whom Mr. Norman was opposed. On the same day, Marshall, Carroll and Meade Counties instructed for Hewitt, giving him an advantage to that date, in instructed votes, of about fifty. Under whose thumb nail were those counties? The Herald's conclusion lacks foundation.

THE Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Masons of Kentucky has issued a circular in which he says there has been a large falling off in the membership of the subordinate Lodges in the State. This decrease he attributes to the hard times, and urges the various lodges not to act too hastily in expelling members who are in arrears for dues, but bear with them so long as possible, and induce those who have defaulted to return to the fold. Some of our contemporaries intimate that the Masons have about run their course and the age now demands something more practical than Masonry. The Masonic organization, as all like organizations, has its mission in this world, and it will be one of the leading charitable societies when time comes to be.

Pelton, Tilden's nephew, has on to his statement that Mr. Tilden would have nothing to do with his effort to buy any of the Returning Boards. He says the old man was out of humor with him because he was engaged in the attempt. Pelton charges that both the Florida and South Carolina Returning Boards were for sale, one demanding $75,000 and the other $200,000.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

St. Louis, Mo., February 7, 1879.
To the Editor of the Recorder:

It is said by knowing ones that the groundhog came out last Saturday, looked around, gritted his teeth, and shot back into his winter quarters, there to remain for the next six weeks. I did not see his hogship, but write what I saw by the action and a number of individuals who always knew where he speaks. I suppose they reckon correctly as winter seems to have set in again, for we had quite a heavy snow Monday night, and a repetition of some on Wednesday night, and it would really seem that winter, to say the least of it, is not over yet. Well we will see what we will see, if we shall live long enough. There is complaining on all sides, and among all shades and grades of business men, this week, as the change in the weather has put a complete check to the business, while business men generally, this time last week, were in high expectations of a large trade by this time.

We noticed in a late issue of the RECORDER that the rabbit crop was good with you this winter, which reminds us that this is the season of the year when there is a lively trade in furs, and we suppose there are but few of your readers who have any clear conception of the magnitude of that trade. It is really a big trade at this season of the year, and we may say it is about the only trade in which there is any life just at this time. At this season of the year all of our merchants handle many furs, and you must not be surprised when I tell you that one dealer in the city bought as many as 20,000 coon skins, last week, and at the same time there are several of our acquaintances that bought from 3,000 to 10,000 coon skins to say nothing about the multiplicity of mink skins, polecat, opossum, otter, beaver, etc. And right here your correspondent will say that he is so ignorant that he was of the opinion, until within the past few weeks, that the skunk and the polecat were one and the same thing, but they are not. There is a vast difference when it comes to the sale of the fur. For instance, the skin of a medium sized skunk will sell quickly in this market for $1.25, while polecat hides are sold for 10 cents each. Russia bays more coon skins than all the markets of the world, and the late advances from there concerning the plague have caused a decline of 15 to 25 per cent. in the coon skin market, and some of our friends are $2,000 to $3,000 poorer to-day than they were this day a week ago, owing to the decline in coon skins alone. A merchantable coon skin, this day last week, was worth 80 cents, while it takes a choice hide to bring 60 cents to-day, and some of the dealers say if the news concerning the plague is not more favorable within the next ten days, the coon skin market will be thoroughly demoralized. Some dealers are, to-day, not willing to pay over 50 cents for choice. It may not be amiss for me to quote our market which is to-day as follows: Otters, No. 1, $3.50, No. 2, $2.50 to $2.50, No. 3, 75 cents to $1; mink, $5 to $5.50; raccoon, 40 to 60 cents; skunk, 75 cents to $1.25; polecat, 10 to 15 cents; wildcats, 10 to 20 cents; wolf, $1 to $2; muskrat, 5 to 10 cents; opossum, 3 to 5 cents; bear, $1 to $1.50; beaver, $1.75; badger, 20 to 50 cents. Having remarked that Russia furnishes the principal market of the world for coon skins, it would be but fair for us to state that she in return, furnishes the markets of the world the finest wolf skins known to the trade, and she also produces a lamb's wool that is superior to anything of the kind in the world; so fine, indeed, that it is said to be equal to the heavier in softness and durability.

Our Criminal Court has been all the week trying one W. K. Heath, an ex-Auditor, for embezzlement of some $200,000 of the peoples money, $143,000 of which belonged to the School Fund, and late this evening the jury brought in a verdict of guilty, and assessed his punishment at ten years in the Penitentiary. He spent this money in gambling. Now, if you will pardon a little digression, I will remind you that within the past 12 months, a great many of the little scribbles, and some few big scribbles, the writer being the smallest of all, dipped their pens into a discussion of the nature and reality of a place called hell. The learned world for centuries have been greatly excited over this little word, and will most likely have fears and forebodings concerning same for centuries to come. But the object of this letter is not to revive a discussion of that inexhaustible subject, but if you will allow the writer, he will take the liberty of stating that he heard a very learned man say the other day that there is actually a necessity for such a place to punish defaulting public functionaries. The party speaking thus is a preacher and a lawyer, and the remark struck the writer with force. It does really seem, to an imbecile, that it is almost the next thing to an impossibility to find a man who will remain honest or true to the trust confided to him in the handling of much money. Only think for a moment, of the numberless defalcations throughout the land, and most of them with men of high standing in church and communities in which they live. This man Heath robbed the county and city of more than $200,000. One Susiskey, the year before, stole some half a million from the State and city, and only here the other day our State Treasurer came out short over half a million dollars, by loaning the peoples money to rotten banks; and there has been right here in the city alone, not less than half a dozen failures among Life Insurance Companies, where the widow and the orphan have been swindled out of millions upon millions, and in every case that has come under the immediate observation of the writer, the officers of the aforesaid institutions live in marble floors, wear broadcloths, and their wives and daughters dress in silks and satins, and ride in carriages. These things do exist, not only in this city, but in every city throughout the land. It has come to pass that we can not now-a-days pick up a paper, but about the first thing our eye meets is the defalcation of some bank officer, some insurance agent, or State or county officer, while the masses are groaning under heavy taxation, and starvation staring them in the face. We won't say what ought to be done with many of these wolves in sheep's clothing, but it requires no stretch of the imagination to determine that there ought to be a stop put to such proceedings. Possibly the handling of some of these pious scoundrels over to Judge Lynch would help the cause some.

Our Circuit Court decided an important suit this evening that has been in the courts for several years, which was Davis R. Cougher against E. W. Bryant, Henry W. Hough and Henry J. Spenehl, officers of the Life Association of America, for $50,000 for malicious prosecution. Cougher, some years ago, was agent for an Eastern Insurance Company, and made some statements on the street about the financial standing of the aforesaid Insurance Company, when the officers of the aforesaid Company arrested him for slander, etc. He in turn sued them for malicious prosecution, the Life Association in the mean time having failed, and this evening the jury brought in a verdict for $15,000 as damages against said individuals. Of course they will try to get a new trial on an appeal, as the verdict is considered heavy by most people. It is at least the heaviest verdict of the kind ever rendered by one of our courts.

"BETTER TO LAUGH THAN TO CRY."

BY ELIN CRAIG.

How well I remember the rosy maid,
In the merry old days gone by,
Who cheerily rang in our cottage home,
"It's better to laugh than to cry."

If the weather was hot, if the weather was
If everything was just as it should be,
If the clothes line broke on a windy day,
It was "better to laugh than to cry."

Some Latin and Greek I was taught at school,
Some French and Italian I learned to read,
Yet ever I treasured the saying true,
"It's better to laugh than to cry."

And gallantly over the sea of life
I carried me high and dry,
And I steadfastly held to the maxim old,
"It's better to laugh than to cry."

Making Hay Beef.

At the late fat stock show in this city we met Mr. Gillett, owner of many of the prize winners, and asked him how he produced such remarkable beef animals. He said:

"It is as easy to grow these fellows as inferior ones. My cattle are graded short-horns—a good stock to begin with. I like, in my latitude, to have calves drop in March or April, or even the first of May will do. I let the cows—with their calves—graze on good blue grass pasture. When the calves about the first of October. The first winter I give the young stock nothing but hay—all they will eat. The second summer allow a little corn in the ear. About the 20th of October increase to a full feed of corn. I let hogs run with my steers when feeding corn—one hog to two steers. The hogs will fatten in sixty days, when I replace them with others. In this way pork will pay for at least two-thirds of the fattening of the steers. Ours are excellent for finishing up the fattening process. This is, in a few words, the practice adopted by all good stock feeders in Illinois."—Farmers Review.

How to Count Cash.

In England a patent check till has been brought before the mercantile public which seems to be a very ingenious contrivance. The official description of it says it will check every penny taken and paid, better than keeping a cashier and using cash books. It occupies no more room than the ordinary till. If an assistant should take money of a customer and fail to put it in the till, it can be detected. If only a part of the amount is put in, it will show how much has been withheld. If any cash has been taken out it will show what amount. The till cannot be opened without it being known, and the number of times. It will show how much money there ought to be in at a time. Any amount of change can be left in it for use, and yet none can be taken away without it being known. It can be left any length of time without being cleared, and will show the amount that ought to be in without counting the cash. It can be used as a desk, or let in level with the counter top if required. It shows the number of customers waited upon by each assistant; and if a line is drawn across close to the glass every hour, it tells the number of customers at any given time. And all these advantages are wound up in the brief statement, "Interest on outlay and cost of working one-half a penny a day."

German Emigration.

Emigration from Germany to the United States has for the last few years been reduced to very narrow dimensions, partly owing to the economic crisis across the Atlantic and partly to the stringent precautions of the German Government against the departure of young men who have not performed their military obligations—the class most likely to emigrate. These precautions extend, it is even said, to Antwerp, a non-German port. There was some expectation that the Socialists laws would induce the Government to relax this stringency in order to favor the expatriation of the disaffected, but it seems that they are afraid of allowing any loophole lest it should be too largely taken advantage of. Mr. Mandl, an American subject of Hungarian birth and a resident of Paris, had been refused permission to deliver a lecture at Berlin in favor of emigration to the United States. He proposed, while avoiding any political topics, to show that owing to the bountiful harvest and a revival of trade, there is a good opening for German emigrants, especially in the far West, where necessities laborers and artisans might join their countrymen already settled there, and in no long time attain a comfortable position. The refusal of the Chief of Police was justified on the ground that not only the Socialists, but a considerable proportion of the well-to-do class would take the hint and emigrate, whereby Germany would necessarily suffer in the loss of capital and industry.

Soils that are moist, or newly plowed soil, should be sown to in preference to barley. Sow two and a half bushels of seed as soon as possible. No crop needs a more frequent change of seed than oats if they are desired. New seed should be brought from Canada, New Brunswick or Scotland is preferred.

The Department of Agriculture will this spring distribute seed of a new Irish potato, from Peru. It is described as of medium size, round, bright yellow when cooked, very delicious flavor and different from any of our varieties.

ABOUT WOMEN.

Marriage is an ordinance that is too seldom seriously considered outside of a divorce suit.

It is when a woman tries to whistle that the great glory of her mouth is seen without being heard very much.

He said but little, yet as he gazed on the mutilated edge of the best razor, he mentally vowed never again to marry a woman with corns.

A gentleman stopping at Hartford, a short time since, saw what he supposed was a hot-foot, but was informed it was a Hartford girl's shoe-button.

A Western paper wants to know why a woman always sits on the floor to pull on her stockings. We suppose it is simply because she can't sit on the ceiling.

A fashionable young woman at Vassar was asked by the classical professor for a definition of ambrosia. After some hesitation she replied: "I think it is a kind of hair oil."

They have a Mohawk girl in her teens at Mill Point, Ontario, who weighs 332 pounds. And it she weighs that as a teeny girl, what will she weigh when she gets her growth?

A henpecked husband said in extenuation of his wife's raids upon his scalp: "You see, she takes her own hair off so easily she doesn't know how it hurts to have mine pulled off."

A religious newspaper will go the round of the family circle and still look bright and clean, but when the family story paper makes the circuit it looks as if it had served in the capacity of a bustle and been given to the baby to cut its teeth on.

The good-natured husband that is foolish enough to do shop errands for his wife never knows enough to do them properly. He is just as apt to buy paper cambric as black alpaca for sheeting, if the drygoods clerk only tells him it is the proper thing.

Another of the sixty thousand unmarried women of Massachusetts has deserted the ranks of the maiden sisterhood for the arms of a naturalized Chinaman. There is probably this advantage about marrying a Chinaman, that the bride will never have to take in washing to support him.

The Mormon women say their husbands are the bravest of men. We believe it. Here, the men who venture on trebletons are considered as truly heroic characters, but there are no words to express the true estimate of a man if whom sixteen wives are able to say—he is a darling devoted husband.

A Tennessee widow bought a suit of clothes for a young man, with the understanding that he should marry her, but he hastened to his own country and purchased a license for himself and a young lady to whom he had previously engaged himself, and was married. The widow made him surrender the clothes.

A Sealed Postman.

You've heard of sealed letters, of course, and seen them, too, no doubt; but did you ever hear of a letter-carrier, also, being sealed? Well, a bit of news has come saying that among the Himalaya Mountains, the men who carry the mail on horseback are sealed to their saddles in such a way that while they can ride easily enough, they can not get down from their seats; and, what is more, the mail packages are sealed to the men. Once started on the route, the seals are not allowed to be broken, except by the Postmaster at the next station, and if they happen to get broken otherwise than by accident, the carrier is severely punished.

The result of this sealing is that a mail-carrier who wishes to steal the letters in his charge, is obliged also to steal the saddle and horse—and himself as well I suppose. Nice places these carriers have to ride through at times! Why, some parts the route is so steep that in going down the rider is kept upright by a rope passed under his arms, and held in the hands of two men who are above him on the mountain. If it were not for this, the rider would fall over the head of the horse, or else cause the horse to go over head first.

Altogether, the postmen of the Himalayas must have a hard time off it. This whole number of Indians in the United States, not including those in Alaska, is estimated at 278,000. The number of schools among them is 380; scholars, 15,515; amount spent for education last year, $337,397; number of church members, 28,000; number of acres of land cultivated, 292,500; bushels of wheat raised, 668,278; of corn, 4,636,351 bushels; of oats and barley, 449,247.

The Secretary of the Treasury has issued a circular to Collectors of Customs, instructing them that in no case will live animals be permitted to be shipped from their respective ports till after inspection, with reference to their freedom from disease and the issuance of a certificate showing they are in a proper condition of health.

St. Louis is tormented by the noise of church bells, and an ordinance is under discussion prohibiting the ringing of bells over fifty pounds in weight. That would silence several fine chimes and it is likely that a compromise measure will be adopted, restricting to certain hours.

There is a tide in the affairs of lovers which taken at the flood leads on to matrimony.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

"Put not your trust in kings." Three seas and a juck will skin them every time.

Of the five thousand voters in Lynn, Massachusetts, three thousand five hundred are shoe makers.

In Nebraska there are now forty-two Presbyterian churches; fourteen of them were built in 1878 and dedicated free of debt.

In Lebanon, Indiana, opposing law years fought with inkblots, splattering the walls and the presiding Judge as well as themselves.

The physicians say that the almost universal practice of wearing veils over the face and eyes is of great injury to the latter delicate organs.

This demand for the new silver dollar is almost entirely from the East. Some of the Western States have each taken more than New York and New England combined.

Many eggs are now sent to London from Continental countries in cheap boxes, instead of boxes or barrels. The coffins sell for more than cost, and the shippers make money on the packages as well as the goods.

"I feel better," remarked a father, as he gave the strap a rest, while he took off two extra pairs of pants from his disobedient son: "We have reached bottom at last." And he resumed operations on a solid basis.

"Does prohibition prohibit?" asks an exchange. We don't know. Now stand still while we give you one. Does application apply? Or, if you want an easier one to begin on, does emigration Emma?—Hawkeye.

The Secretary of the Memphis, Tennessee, Howard Association, has completed his report, which shows the receipts of the organization, during the late epidemic, to have been $417,536.60, and that the disbursements were $417,790.53.

"I'm a rutz-laga, and here's where I plant myself," said a tramp as he entered a farm-house near Freeport, Illinois, and seated himself at the table. "We allers bile cows," said the farmer's wife, and poured him a dish-pan full of hot water.

It is pretty positively stated that the remains of A. T. Stewart have been turned to reporters. It is also rumored that Judge Hilton paid, through New York law firm, $50,000 for the body. No arrests have been made.

The 70,000,000 of grain used in the United States annually for making liquors would give two hundred pounds of bread, per annum, to every man, woman and child in the United States. Great Britain uses 80,000,000 bushels each year for making liquors.

The Baptists have in the United States 25,499 churches, and 14,955 ordained ministers. During the year were 103,736 admissions by baptism and 40,403 by letter, while 13,175 persons were restored to membership. The total membership is 2,102,034.

A gentleman being threatened with an infectious fever, said to his little son, who in an affectionate mood wished to embrace him, "You mustn't hug me; you'll catch the fever." Willie, standing back, looked in amazement upon his papa, who, by the way, is a pattern of propriety, and quickly asked, "Why, papa, who did you hug?"

"That young lady tried her best to catch my husband before you married him," said one young lady to another as a mass of curls and braids, flounces and overskirts passed the window at which they were sitting. "I wish to the Lord she'd got him!" was the quick reply, and then a dead silence fell upon the two, and wonders in crochets were accomplished in the next half hour.

I've a letter from thy sire,
Baby mine, baby mine;
He's down the river in a boat,
Baby mine, baby mine;
He is now chuck full of wine,
Baby mine, baby mine;
He is coming over the Rhine,
Baby mine, baby mine;
He has better come in soon,
Baby mine, baby mine;
I've been waiting here high noon,
Baby mine, baby mine;
I am waiting with a broom,
Baby mine, baby mine;
I will chase him round the room,
Baby mine, baby mine;
While his nose shines through the gloom,
Baby mine, baby mine.

The fashion of "reversing" the vase is all the rage just now at dances, and bids fair to deprive the "many vase" of much of that elegance and smoothness which the poet has described as "the poetry of motion." Those who are proficient in this somewhat difficult accomplishment, and, worse still, those who are not, career about a ball-room in all directions, twisting and twirling evidently very much to their own satisfaction, but greatly to the inconvenience and annoyance of the uninitiated.

A Lone musician fiddled "Home, Sweet Home," so sweetly at a street corner, that a stungater three blocks away was affected to tears. When he was asked why he wept, and if the dear old tune stirred tender memories in his heart, mournfully replied: "You bet. If you were sole proprietor of a red-headed woman with a diagonal eye, who could make nine balls-eyes out of a possible ten with a stove-rod, and whose best argument is a move-rod, perhaps the dear old tune would stir you in the same way. Young man, you lack experience."

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL,
Editor and Proprietor.
BURLINGTON, KY., FEBRUARY 20.

The price of hogs still has an upward tendency.

We venture the prophecy that next season we have good crops.

The other day, in Owensboro, a woman went into open court and horse-whipped a man for slandering her.

Boone's candidature for register of the Land Office, Dr. Scott, is not at all discouraged, and thinks his prospects for nomination are good.

It is fact that the present Auditor has held the office nearly twelve years, having been elected to it three times, is having a telling effect in the present canvass.

His reports from the black plague which has of late inaugurated such a reign of terror among the inhabitants of Russia, are somewhat more favorable than they were ten days since, and energetic measures have been adopted for its suppression.

The Courier-Journal says the county Democratic conventions thus far indicate with quite positive certainty the nomination of Blackburn for Governor, Hewitt for Auditor, and Hardin for Attorney-General. For Lieutenant Governor, Cantrell has a good lead, while for Superintendent of Public Instruction and Register the race is most anybody's.

Col. McCarty writes to the Elizabethtown News from Washington that Blackburn's chances for the next Speakership are on the increase, and some of his friends are quite sanguine. The race will be narrowed down to Randall or Blackburn. They are both strong men, both fully competent, and both backed by strong influences and enthusiastic friends.

The Courier-Journal says: "One of the first duties of the good citizen is to aid as far as he can in supporting his country paper, for that paper can do more to promote the moral, intellectual and material interest than all other agencies. Show us a county which liberally supports a good newspaper, and we will show you a county whose people are intelligent, enterprising and prosperous. A good newspaper flourishes only where the people of the county are known abroad for their intelligence, their prosperity in all the pursuits of life. About the best county to move from is one which does not support or supports indifferently its newspaper. About the best county to move to is one which supports, and supports liberally, its newspaper."

Our St. Louis correspondent has, undoubtedly a strong desire to see his native county improve her school-houses. He says: "Let me remark, that, after mature consideration, I have come to the conclusion that this is going to be a good year for the good people of your county to build or improve their public school-houses. Don't think they will ever have a better season; labor is cheaper, and building material of all qualities never was known to be so low; and there never was a time when there were as many mechanics out of employment as now. Pardon me, but I tell you, your people, and particularly the children are deserving of better school-houses than you have, and you must have them. Don't forget to keep this matter before the people; what I have stated is true, and I know the good people of your county love the truth."

Last Monday, Bracken County instructed only for T. L. Jones and F. L. Cleveland.

Robertson, for Underwood and E. L. Cleveland, Howard Smith, Tate, Edgar and Shelton.

Pulaski, for Blackburn, Cantrell, D. H. Smith, Hardin, Tate, Allen and Marcum.

Perry and Letcher instructed for D. Howard Smith.

Montgomery instructed for Thos. L. Jones for Governor, and refused to go further, although Boyd's friends claim both the county and delegation as solid for him for Auditor.

Boyle's delegation will vote for Dr. L. P. Blackburn, Chas. E. Bowman, P. W. Hardin, D. Howard Smith, James W. Tate, Ralph Shelton and James L. Allen.

The Kenton County delegation, it is said, is composed of 25 Smith and 17 Hewitt men.

The notorious Jesse Underwood was met by a Mt. Sterling man who was traveling in Carter County a few days since. He says Underwood had just come in from a hunt, having killed seven foxes and one wildcat. He goes about well armed with two seven shooter revolvers in his belt, and an eight-shot Spencer rifle in his hand. At night he sleeps upstairs in his father's house, with the doors strongly barred, and he has loopholes commanding the door, so that any attempt to capture him would be desperately resisted. Since his escape from the Bath County jail last fall, where he was held for killing Trombo, the authorities have not thought proper to seek for him in his mountain fastness. He says if unmolested he intends to leave the State. His brother George, who was shot through the abdomen when the militia went to quell the outlaws, has not entirely recovered.

The lift Hewitt got in Kenton, last Monday, is the result of the unwieldy and boisterous manner in which the work was done. Had all the men in the meeting conducted themselves with decorum, and known what they were there for, Colonel D. Howard Smith would have received the instructions almost without a struggle.

The late mass meeting in Boone would, as to order, compare as favorably with the Kenton County meeting, as a church meeting would compare with the mass meeting in Boone. We don't want to be understood as saying all present in the Kenton meeting took part in the disgraceful proceedings.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.
Another Defalcation—He Spent the Money in Speculation—A Dreadful Calamity in Kansas City—Cold Weather, &c., &c.

St. Louis, Mo., February 14, 1879.
To the Editor of the Recorder.

About one week ago I advised you and your readers of the trial and conviction of one W. H. Heath, an ex-Auditor, for embezzlement of $143,000 of public school funds. Now, be it known, in the indictment against this kid gloved criminal, there are five counts, including an additional $80,000 steal of the people's money, which he undoubtedly made way with; but he was fortunate enough to get four of the counts dismissed upon a technicality of the law. It is generally understood, if not admitted, that he lost the money gambling, and it is said a party that got a goodly share of same has the "lion" to his name, as he is at this time a member of the Legislature; and it would not surprise your correspondent in the least if some of our Honorable Police Commissioners got a part of the funds, as several of them have become famous from handling cards, and these very same chaps are appointed as conservators of the peace and dignity of the community. It is hardly necessary for me to inform you intelligent readers that the people have a right to know who gets their money, when squandered by an unfaithful servant in a gambling house. Nearly ever official defalcation in this city for the past two or three decades can be traced to the gambling hells that are about throughout the city, and this court is clearly of the opinion that it is about time an example should be made of "these kid-gloved, tawny-tongued, collar-kid-gloved, patent-leather-booted fellows" that lay in wait and dog the steps of every public officer that has the good fortune to handle large sums of the public money. There is scarcely a day of our natural existence but what we are asked when we are going to have better times, and our answer invariably is, when we have confidence restored. And I ask you, Mr. Editor, how is it possible to restore confidence between man and man while we have so much rascality in official circles? The ink upon our last issue was hardly dry before an official defalcation of some $30,000 was announced in the quiet little burg of Bellevue, Illinois. Mr. Geo. W. Sieber, Treasurer of the county, being short as is stated about that amount. The amount is not large, compared with some of our big steals; but still that amount of ready cash these hard times is enough to make a whole family of country editors happy. Don't you think so? How to remedy this wholesale stealing is enough to puzzle the brain of a Billion; but this court is clearly of the opinion that a dose of hemp, administered by Judge Lynch, would probably have a tendency to put somewhat of a check to the business. But where to begin and where to leave off would probably be the most difficult problem to solve. By the way, it was whispered into the ears of the writer, and there was considerable talk about it among the masses out this way, that the biggest of all the big steals occurred at the National Capitol, the 4th of March, two years ago. Did you hear anything of it? It is said by many intelligent people out this way that about that time, one Sam'l J. Tilden, of New York, met with a big swindle which, for an out and out swindle, lays all other pieces of sharp practice in the shade. It may not be so. I only state what I heard, and you may have heard the same thing. There was a good deal of comment about it at the time out this way.

Did you hear anything of it? It is said by many intelligent people out this way that about that time, one Sam'l J. Tilden, of New York, met with a big swindle which, for an out and out swindle, lays all other pieces of sharp practice in the shade. It may not be so. I only state what I heard, and you may have heard the same thing. There was a good deal of comment about it at the time out this way.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.
About one week ago I advised you and your readers of the trial and conviction of one W. H. Heath, an ex-Auditor, for embezzlement of $143,000 of public school funds. Now, be it known, in the indictment against this kid gloved criminal, there are five counts, including an additional $80,000 steal of the people's money, which he undoubtedly made way with; but he was fortunate enough to get four of the counts dismissed upon a technicality of the law. It is generally understood, if not admitted, that he lost the money gambling, and it is said a party that got a goodly share of same has the "lion" to his name, as he is at this time a member of the Legislature; and it would not surprise your correspondent in the least if some of our Honorable Police Commissioners got a part of the funds, as several of them have become famous from handling cards, and these very same chaps are appointed as conservators of the peace and dignity of the community. It is hardly necessary for me to inform you intelligent readers that the people have a right to know who gets their money, when squandered by an unfaithful servant in a gambling house. Nearly ever official defalcation in this city for the past two or three decades can be traced to the gambling hells that are about throughout the city, and this court is clearly of the opinion that it is about time an example should be made of "these kid-gloved, tawny-tongued, collar-kid-gloved, patent-leather-booted fellows" that lay in wait and dog the steps of every public officer that has the good fortune to handle large sums of the public money. There is scarcely a day of our natural existence but what we are asked when we are going to have better times, and our answer invariably is, when we have confidence restored. And I ask you, Mr. Editor, how is it possible to restore confidence between man and man while we have so much rascality in official circles? The ink upon our last issue was hardly dry before an official defalcation of some $30,000 was announced in the quiet little burg of Bellevue, Illinois. Mr. Geo. W. Sieber, Treasurer of the county, being short as is stated about that amount. The amount is not large, compared with some of our big steals; but still that amount of ready cash these hard times is enough to make a whole family of country editors happy. Don't you think so? How to remedy this wholesale stealing is enough to puzzle the brain of a Billion; but this court is clearly of the opinion that a dose of hemp, administered by Judge Lynch, would probably have a tendency to put somewhat of a check to the business. But where to begin and where to leave off would probably be the most difficult problem to solve. By the way, it was whispered into the ears of the writer, and there was considerable talk about it among the masses out this way, that the biggest of all the big steals occurred at the National Capitol, the 4th of March, two years ago. Did you hear anything of it? It is said by many intelligent people out this way that about that time, one Sam'l J. Tilden, of New York, met with a big swindle which, for an out and out swindle, lays all other pieces of sharp practice in the shade. It may not be so. I only state what I heard, and you may have heard the same thing. There was a good deal of comment about it at the time out this way.

and some of the would-be patriots haven't got entirely over it yet. I had almost forgotten to mention, that it has been but a little while since our Circuit Clerk came out short the snug little sum of $60,000. Wine, women and gambling shops the cause, and what is worst of all, it now turns out that his bondsmen are insolvent, and some of them holding positions of honor money goes.

One of the most deplorable calamities that it has fallen to our lot to chronicle, occurred at Kansas City, on Tuesday morning last, by which there were six men killed outright, and some twenty others more wounded. It was occasioned by a land slide on the Chicago and Alton road, near the city. The cut was some fifty feet deep and two hundred feet long, and while the men were at work, one of the banks gave way, burying six men alive and crippling twenty old others. There will undoubtedly be some work for lawyers and the courts before the affair is entirely forgotten.

There is general dissatisfaction among our representative men this week, about the appointments or nominations by our saintly Governor for Police Commissioners, His Excellency, on Wednesday last, sending into the Legislative body, for confirmation, the names of Wm. M. Ladd, J. C. Nixley and David H. Armstrong. The nominations took our worthy lawmakers by surprise, and the two former will undoubtedly be rejected, as they are not in the ring and not up to snuff. What the result will be, no one can tell, as yet; but, sure as you live, there is trouble in the camp. The city of St. Louis has six Senators and fifteen Representatives in that august body, and his Excellency did not consider it worth his while to consult one of them about said nominations; and you mark well know dignity has been slighted. The pay of these important positions is $1,000 per annum each, as salary; but knowing ones say the perquisites attending same are ten times that amount, and sensible people would reasonably suppose so, from the desperate efforts men in high positions make to secure same. The office is more sought after than any five thousand dollar office in the State.

I advised you this time last week of the spring like weather we were having out this way, which, by the way, caused a decline in hen fruit (eggs) from 20 to 1½ cents per dozen in one day, and poor people were happy. But on Wednesday morning last, old Graybeard put in his appearance, and we are having genuine old fashioned winter over again, and hen fruit is to-day worth some 15 cents more than it was this time last week, which makes hard times for your correspondent.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to the Recorder.
WASHINGTON, February 14, 1879.
There is no longer reason to doubt that the jury test oath law, which for years has prevented the selection of a United States jury of intelligence in the South, will be repealed at this session of Congress. There is doubt, however, of the repeal of the law which permits the Federal Government to recover the States with officers to supervise elections. Both these laws are distasteful to a vast majority of the people of both parties, and the latter, especially, is foreign to the Democratic idea of our Government.

In the Senate, during the past week, Mr. McCrary has made an excellent speech in favor of transferring the Indian Bureau to the War Department, and Mr. Sanders a speech on the other side.

The friends of an increased payment for carrying mails between this country and South America seem to have the active aid of all the members of the Senate Committee on appropriations, and no active opposition from the remaining members. Mr. Eaton, of Connecticut, excepted. The Committee recommends the payment of $150,000 per annum to each of two lines of steamships. One from New York via Norfolk, and the other from New Orleans via Galveston. There is no doubt that the proposition will receive a three-fourths vote in the Senate, and that a large majority of Representatives will vote in its favor if the question comes squarely before the House.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Constance.
February 11.—Checkers is the game here. Guy Smith was the admitted champion, but, being so intoxicated with success, it was thought advisable to call in Dr. Terrill, who prescribed a dose causing the victor to throw up the spoils before he reached kingdom, leaving him a soberer and a wiser Guy. D. Beall and Alie "Lay" on counts for your town with a load of coal. Don't mock with Alie; he is not often from home. Esquire Whitlock and company have returned. They could have been bulldozed, bribe nor coax their dogs to catch the Buckeye fox. "Squire, you should have 'saddled Blackstone,' evidently they were awaiting a retribution from the Governor. H. C.

Plattsburg.
February 10th.—Since the damp weather set in, stripping tobacco has been the principal business of the citizens of this vicinity. Several acres of wood have been burned during the past week. Ed. Hensley sold for $8 and $4; Benjamin Crisler sold for same, while Thomas Hyne sold for $5 all around. Professor W. H. Gaines, who adjourned his school on Ashby Fork on account of the appearance of scarlet fever. On the morning of the 24th of last month, Susan Pinn, a young man of our town, died of consumption. On the 6th inst. T. W. and Emily Phillips lost their little daughter Ellen of scarlet fever. She was in her tenth year and a favorite of the entire neighborhood which sympathizes with the grief stricken parents.

Florence X-Roads.
February 17.—Mr. Seales, who lives near Denness Station, on the Kentucky Central Railroad, came very near purchasing and removing our saw and grist mill, last week. The only difficulty was about making the present owners safe for the amount agreed upon.

Wood-sawings still continue when the weather permits. Parties are still the rage—five last week. The ball at Mr. Manning's was a success, although the number of ladies in attendance was limited, owing to the bad weather, by which a great many were disappointed. The party at Columbus House was well attended, and some twenty guests were present. Ladies, fourteen or fifteen young men, three widows and two bachelors present. Dame Rumor whispers of a couple of weddings to take place this week. Plenty of bad colds and sore throats.

Owl College.
February 14.—The farmers in this vicinity have begun their spring work, such as clearing off ground, making and repairing fence, having it sharpened, &c. Mr. Stamper Stephenson, of near this place, has sold his farm to Mr. N. S. Johnson, for $20 per acre.

Our school at this place was on February 7th. The scholars recited speeches and read compositions before a large number of the old patrons and friends of the school who were present. The school was in session five months, and was taught by Mr. T. D. Rose, who now talks of going to Beaver to get a school. We hope he will be successful, as the parents here are well pleased with what he has taught their children. The health of this neighborhood is not very good at this writing. Bad, at this late residence, near Beaver, on the 11th inst. Maria Goddard died. We think our peach and cherry crop will be very glutting this year. Wheat looking well. PAP'S BOY.

Q-illerliffe.
February 14.—As I have seen nothing in the Recorder from this town for some time, I will try to send you a few items. Since our last writing we have got a sailing blacksmith—one Charley Clark. He is black enough, and guess he is a very good smith.

Our saw-mill is progressing finely, and very likely will be sawing before this goes to press. Mr. Norman, of Gloucester, is setting it and instructing the company how to run it. We notice in the Walton correspondence to the Courier-Press, that the Senior brothers are building a steam saw and grist-mill at Quillerville. Your correspondent has not seen the grist part. Business is dull here, as it has been very muddy since the snow went off until to-day, when it is frozen up.

We are sorry to have to report the sudden death of Maria Goddard, a young woman 23 or 24 years old, and liked by all who knew her. She was helping Mr. W. Ashbrook strip tobacco Thursday, the 11th, had a paralytic stroke and died about 10 o'clock that night. Also, the death of H. C. daughter of J. S. and N. Johnson, Wednesday night. Born January 24th, to Joseph Ball and wife, a boy. No cards.

Hebron.
February 14.—Died, on Monday night, the 10th inst., Mark Whitaker. His remains were placed in the vault at Bullittsville. Ruben Quick is suffering considerably with a lame back.

The boys here made a big turnout on Tuesday night to attend the hop at Mr. Manning's near the city. Hebron was also well represented at the ball at Union, Wednesday night.

The people about Hebron are taking a good many tickets in the Louisville and Indianapolis Orphans' Association drawing. All expect to draw the Rose Hill farm. Jerome Souther has sold to John Ernst his undivided interest in the Hebron farm.

John Rucker and Charlie Gaines are preparing to build extensive barns, this spring. Miss Fannie Whitlock, of Constance, has been visiting for several days with Miss Lou Bradford of this place.

Eq. Sanders will shortly move to Temp Gaines' place, between Hebron and Franksville. Jim Clure has gone West to seek his fortune. Prof. Jones school closes Tuesday, 18th.

On Saturday evening, Mrs. Russell, toll-gate keeper at Constance, slipped and fell from the porch while

LAST week we stated that Dr. Dawson, of Cincinnati, succeeded in taking the grain of corn out of the nose of Mr. Peter Horton's little boy. We have since learned from Dr. Smith that such is not the case, and that the child is still suffering from its effects.

THE Georgetown Times says that Mr. S. A. Thomas, of White Sulphur, District, has two ewes that have produced 12 lambs in two years, and together they have produced 23 lambs. One of them, 6 years old, has had 13 lambs; the other, 4 years old, has had 10.

THERE is a well authenticated statement in circulation that the University of the will, some time this summer, erect a commodious church building in Burlington. They are now negotiating for a lot upon which to build, and, knowing the parties who, it is said, have charge of the matter, we have no doubt but the work will be put through with all possible haste.

The Kenton Convention.

Last Monday, Kenton County held its meeting to appoint delegates to the State Convention, which meets in Louisville on the 1st day of May next. Having heard of the independence, and having heard of the success of the Kenton County Convention, we conducted there, we had an anxiety to attend last Monday's meeting. So early this morning, in company with ex-Sheriff B. K. Hines, we started for the central city of Kenton. After a tremendous ride of three hours, we found ourselves in said city, which, like our own town, is located rather in the background as regards the commercial world.

The crowd, before our arrival, had commenced pouring into town from all points of the compass, and more particularly from Covington, while the country delegation came in on horseback, in sleighs, sleds, buggies, and not a few on foot. Covington sent out a long procession of buggies, hacks, coaches, furniture cars, and express wagons, loaded to their utmost capacity.

By 11 o'clock the town was crowded, and among the candidates present were H. P. Wilson, Dr. H. H. Smith, Fayette Hines, Z. F. Smith, H. A. Henderson, G. M. Edgar and Dr. S. S. Scott. Each of these gentlemen had many friends present, and the electioneering spirit, which had been kindled in the country, was now being kindled in the city. The crowd, previous to the assembling of the convention, presenting their claims on the office to which they were running, was while these gentlemen were speaking that it became so dense that it was impossible to get a foot in the crowd. The convention, therefore, was held in a hall, where the delegates were seated, and the speakers were seated in front of them.

When Mr. Henderson retired from the stand, Mr. Theodore Hallam, Chairman of the County Executive Committee, with much difficulty started the subject of the meeting.

Now commenced a scene, a description of which would exhaust the English vocabulary, and then he partially described. Mr. Hallam had no doubt that the meeting was a success, and that the delegates were well qualified to represent the county. He then turned to the subject of the meeting, and said that the delegates were well qualified to represent the county. He then turned to the subject of the meeting, and said that the delegates were well qualified to represent the county.

BURLINGTON, KY., FEBRUARY 20.

STATE NEWS.

It is said that many colonies of bees were frozen during the late cold spell.

In Ransom County, recently, twelve thousand acres of land were sold for taxes.

The Elkton Register man recently smoked a cigar that was 35 years old. It had lost all its tobacco taste.

A PARKER at Harrodsburg proposes to sue the Cincinnati Southern Railroad for not permitting him to choose his coach.

The Cumberland Courier is responsible for the statement that Sam Richards, mail carrier on the Glasgow route, has ridden in eleven years, 115,734 miles.

The Courier-Journal says every exchange reports the wheat crop in a very promising condition. The snow protected it during the long freeze and it is now spreading itself.

In Mason County, at a late term of the Circuit Court, the Judge instructed the grand jury to indict every person who would not work or was traveling about without visible means of support.

The Standard Journal says that just as sure as Dr. Blackburn or Governor Underwood fail to go into the convention with a sufficient number of instructed votes, Lindsay will be our next Governor.

The body of Jeff Brown, a prominent lawyer of Louisville, who has been missing since the 18th of November, was brought up a few days ago by a dredging machine working in the mouth of the canal.

It is a noticeable fact, says the Greenup Independent, that when you come suddenly on a young couple in the morning, the young lady is generally busy arranging her back hair, and the gentleman is stirring the fire.

The Trigg County Democrat says that a man by the name of Chris Thompson, having a wife and four children living near Rock Castle, in that county, eloped with a niece, aged 25 years, a daughter of his brother, Henry Thompson, and made for parts unknown.

The Trigg County Democrat tells a remarkable story of a sick man leaving his bed during the late cold spell, and wandering aimlessly around through the snow and ice, attired only in such clothes as are usually worn by patients. Having crossed Singing Fork and gone a short distance into the woods, he was overtaken by a couple of men on mules and asked to ride. Getting on a leading one, he rode homeward contentedly until his party got off the mule to mind the gate, when a sudden freak seized him and away he went at full speed. The mule was tracked, but it was some time before the patient was found and taken home, where, to the astonishment of every one, and grievous disappointment of his doctor, he rapidly recovered, and is now a well man.

Kentucky Crops.

Commissioner Davis, in his report to the Kentucky Bureau of Agricultural Statistics, for February 1st, says: "The wheat, rye, barley and winter oats, each of which was sown last fall, in acreage fully an average, and have taken root vigorously under the deep bed of snow that prevailed during the past month. In some of the Southern and Western counties there is complaint of a 'sickly tinge,' given the wheat plant, no doubt by the grub of the Hessian fly, which were deposited under the clumps of the stalks last fall. Sheep grazing is the only protection, where those grubs exist in quantities. The condition of the winter cereals may be placed at fully 100." He says further: "The black frost, which generally means a temperature colder than fifteen degrees below zero, usually kills all the fruit buds on grafted peach trees, and not infrequently, seriously damages seedling peaches and the less hardy varieties of apples, cherries, plums and other fruit and berries. Consequently, we may expect in this latitude to find the fruit crop seriously affected by the cold term beginning about Christmas, and lasting up the 20th of January."

What Is Retail Store?

He had on a coat of remarkable open countenance behind, with a comfortable absence of sleeves as far up as the elbow, pants of a scattered texture, and a clip hat with a syphon-like look trailing from a crack in the crown. He was from away back. He walked hesitatingly into one of the Union street bazzars that flung a million or two yards of fabrics to the lusty breeze in front.

"What can I do for you?" asked a polite clerk, disengaging himself from a bevy of shopping ladies.

"O nothing, nothing. Just go on waiting on them gals," he shyly fumbled a bundle under his arm.

"The ladies are through purchasing and I am ready to attend to your wants." "Well, is this your retail store," said the man of the flowing lock, looking decidedly awkward as a number of ladies drifted up close to him. "Of this store is a retail store, I just loved it. I fetch in a lot of old shirts of mine and give you a retail store. That's the reason I set three sets of tails now, and I just thought of this store as a retail store. I'd just give you to retail here again."

Scattered ladies and a real faced clerk was the result of the interview.

FASHION NOTES.

SPANISH lace veils are again in fashion.

WIDE collarettes of furs are again fashionable.

TINY brooches are used to fasten bouret-strings.

FRANK-HEELED boots for dancing must match the dress.

The old "Normandy" shape is being worn for evening bonnets.

Black kid gloves, buttoned with small pearls, are novelties.

Lace mittens are worn only at parties where there is no dancing.

COMBINATIONS of colors in fabrics for party wear, are decidedly striking.

MANY handsome ball dresses shown by the leading dress-makers are without a train.

WHITE net bonnets, trimmed with Breton lace, are worn at receptions and afternoon teas.

LACE mits, lace long gloves, and pale blue-kids with numerous buttons are all now fashionable.

SATINS showing clear cream hues and pomegranate tints form admirable combinations by strong daylight.

STRIPED velvets, combined with silk or satin, form very elegant full dress toilets; the garniture should be lace.

SKIRTS are noticeably short in front giving an excellent opportunity to exhibit fine hose and handsome slippers.

A RICH damask of a clear straw color or small small palm leaves and pink flowers scattered over the pale tinted ground.

SETS, comprising a collar, a handkerchief and cuffs, of old fashioned ruffling, made of the finest thread, are new and beautiful.

There is a novelty in sleeve-buttons of very light tortoise-shell representing horses' heads with the bit, bridle and headgear of gold.

Hose are more richly finished in the insteps. Slippers of satin brocade and damask goods correspond in tint with the dress or the garniture.

The Princess model shows a change for the better. The skirt is not so flat; an extra width is placed in the back, giving quite a bouffant expression.

It appears that satin showing the decided old gold hue for the ground with the shadings of royal purple, is classed as one of the latest novelties.

NEW handkerchiefs have centers of white linen, borders of colored silk, and are ornamented in one corner by the embroidered figure of a grenadier.

MANY of the latest models in over-skirts are cut in points. It is fashionable to have the basque cut in points; the back, center and side forms are also pointed.

In the present style of dress, large buttons and rich laces are much used. Handsome buttons are of carved steel and chased silver, but the most beautiful are those of enamel.

It is fashionable to wrap a Spanish lace scarf around the head when attending a ball or reception. This scarf should be three yards long; those made by the Faysal house are very pretty.

The lace is quaint and of a wavy character.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to the Recorder.

WASHINGTON, February 6, 1879.

The New York Times says the project to aid lines of steamships from New York and New Orleans to South American ports, found its way into the Senate on the 4th in "formidable shape." The proposition now is to give $150,000 per annum to each line. The subject is now in the hands of a sub-committee of the Senate Appropriation Committee, consisting of Messrs. Dorsey and Blaine, Republicans, and Wallace, Democrat. I have not been able to view this projected aid so great an evil as the Times and some other papers do. It is an experiment, and not a costly one. If it shall aid our manufacturers, producers and merchants one-tenth of what its friends claim, or what appears likely, the money will be well spent.

Congress, I regret to say, has filled the past week with "words, words, words." Good speeches have been made, to be sure, but speeches are a luxury, and not a necessity. But the week has shown, at least, that the army is not to be reduced below 25,000 men; that a preliminary examination for a plan for the improvement of the Mississippi river will be agreed on; that money will be appropriated, probably ten millions, to commence payments under arrears of pension bill; and, most important of all, that there is little disposition to have an extra session. We may be sure that all absolutely necessary legislation will be disposed of before March 4th.

Yesterday, in the House, the Army Reorganization bill, modified, was attached as an amendment to the Army Appropriation Bill. This was in Committee of the Whole, and the House was to act on the amendment. The modified bill is an improvement, in some respects, upon the bill as first submitted by Burnside in the Senate and passing in the House, but is at best a compromise and unsatisfactory, and in all probability it will not succeed, as it certainly ought not to. ARSIN.

A NEVADA woman scolded her Chinese servant the other day for not cleaning a fish, and on going into the kitchen soon after found him energetically washing it with brown soap.

IF THE DEVIL WAS DEAD.
The devil sat in his easy chair,
The smoke around him was blue,
His head was thrown back his legs were crossed
For he had nothing just then to do.
He picked up the paper to read awhile,
And laughed till tears stood in his eyes
Till at last he noticed this paragraph,
"If the Devil was dead."
A hardened look came over his face,
His eyes turned an ashen gray;
"He's always talking about me," said he,
"And they wish me out of the way."
And he called to one of his small imps,
Who was mashing a barrel head,
To get at the brim-dome contain'd therein,
To scent up the flame so red,
"Get a rake handle and whittle it sharp,
And a bottle of wine as red;
Then write on the shovel point,
What they'd do if the Devil was dead."
"Moody would give right up in disgust,
Satan would stand on his head,
And Becher would not wait to say what'd be
If he thought the Devil was dead."
"Yearly conventions would never be,
For it has been truly said,
The clergymen would have to work
If the Devil was really dead."
"Every old maid would be filled with grief,
They would soon to the altar be led;
They'd have such spunk they'd propose to the man,
That is, if the Devil was dead."
"The theater would soon be out with a play Entitled, 'How did he die?'"
"And a dress of lace, a steamer would reply,
From ministerial work got the fly!"
"In a lens of all the editor,
With ideas and thoughts so evil;
His very poor now, would be poorer yet,
Were it not for his friend, the Devil."

For he helps him steal other person's wit,
Which he could not scratch out of his head
His paper would stand, and the editor leave,
If the Devil was really dead."

With this the Devil arose from his chair,
Brushed the cobwebs out of his head,
And remarked: "I'll go to the outer world,
And convince them that I am not dead."

He did; and he also did it well,
For doesn't every one say
When everything goes entirely wrong
Then there is "the Devil to pay?"

Then good friends all, of every class,
If you wish all business to thrive,
Do your utmost and do it well,
To keep the Devil alive.

The annual cost of the public school system in the United States at present will average about $86,000,000.

This statement that Colonel J. Stoddard Johnson is a candidate for Secretary of the United States Senate, is emphatically denied by Mr. Johnson.

The coal miners at Ashland, Ky., who have been on a strike for the past few months, have resumed work without the owners making any concessions.

At Cincinnati, February 15, Judge Baxter, in the United States Circuit Court, rendered a decision in the case of A. F. Clark, indicted for violating the election law, holding the law to be constitutional, and a proper exercise of national authority.

The Missouri Court of Appeals, in the case of an application for an injunction to restrain the Board of Public Schools from teaching foreign languages and ornamental branches in the public schools, decided that the whole matter is in the hands of the Legislature, and that the courts have no power in the premises.

The Bowling Green Pentagraph advises its friends not to eat heavy supper, because an overworked stomach causes sleepless nights and dreams. It says that a square beefsteak eaten at supper will make any man a candidate for the Legislature, for he will dream that he is being urged by his friends to make the race, and announce himself before he discovers his mistake.

In the case of Adolphus Gilman, on trial in Richmond, Va., February 12th, for ejecting a Deputy United States Marshal from a polling-room at Petersburg, Judge Hughes ruled that Deputy Marshals have no right in the election room during the progress of the voting; officers needed to quell actual disturbances, or suppress the actual need of oppression, or fraud be attempted. A nolle prosequi was then entered.

Here is a description of what every woman has been or hopes to be—a bride. She quits her home, her companions, her occupations, her amusements—everything on which she has heretofore depended for comfort, for affection, for kindness, for pleasure. The parents by whose advice she has been guided, the sister to whom she has dared to impart every embryo thought or feeling, the brother who has played with her, by turns the counselor and the counseled, and the young children to whom she has hitherto been the mother and playmate—all to be forsaken on one fell stroke. Every tie loosened, the springs of every hope and action is changed, and yet she flies with joy into the untrodden path before her. Buoyed up by the confidence of requited love, she bids a fond and grateful adieu to the life that is past, and turns with excited hopes and joyous anticipations of happiness to come. Then who unto the man who can blight such fair hope, who can, coward like, break the illusions that have won her, and destroy the confidence love had inspired?

TEXAS LETTER.
WILLIAM PEN, TEXAS, Feb. 9, 1879.
To the Editor of the Recorder:
By some, Texas is considered the land of Paradise, but your correspondent has been here long enough to learn that it falls far short of what he has always been taught he should encounter, if so fortunate as to finally appear there. Texas, however, is a fine country, and is being settled rapidly by persons from the East, the West and the North.

A poor man has a hard row to hoe here, as well as in other States, and I would advise a poor man to stay where he has friends.

The people of here are very sociable, and make a person feel as much at home as it is in their power.

Farm hands can be secured at very reasonable wages, there being some discrimination in favor of those who have been here for some time and are acquainted. Wages range from $12.50 to $15 per month. I am getting $12.50 per month, and am living with as nice a gentleman as there is in the State.

He resides one mile north of William Pen, and two miles from the Brazos River.

The land in this locality is very fertile, the country tolerably level and productive. Cotton and corn are the chief productions.

Some of the farmers have been plowing in a few days. I anticipate an interesting time when I commence plowing in the black, stiff soil.

I was glad to welcome the Recorder, which came to hand. For my last, it made me feel as though I was at home once more.

The health throughout this country is generally good. F. M. ADAMS.

The Pension Plunder.
To the Editor of the Recorder:
The Congress of the United States appears to have determined to pension everybody now living who ever, at any time or in any way, took up arms in behalf of the government, whether any service was really rendered or not, or whether the pensioner ever fired a gun in the line of duty, or whether he was diseased or disabled in the line of duty or not, and without any regard whatever to the wants and condition of the party applying. The government has become so rich, and the people so able and anxious, that any amount will be willingly produced by them on call, provided it is to go in the way of pensions to our noble old soldiers.

The able-bodied soldiers of the last war are not yet pensioned, but those of the war of 1812 are, in every case where the service extended to, I believe, fifteen days—at least, to some few days—and that too, without the least regard whatever to the condition of the party in life. The simple fact is that he was a soldier for the fifteen days is all that is required to entitle him to the pension. The wealthiest men in the country are, under this law, entitled to their $8 per month from the government. This is neither more nor less than a legalized plundering of the Treasury. The Mexican soldiers will soon be placed in the same favored class, and next all the soldiers of the last war will come in, and the people must foot the bills. Is there a solitary reason on earth to justify such legislation?

Are we to be forever in the hands of a Congress afraid to refuse any swindling, thieving measure that may come before it, if it appears to be in the interest of the soldier? This indiscriminate pensioning of the once soldiers is unjust and oppressive, and needlessly increases the great debt now weighing so heavily upon us. It is iniquitous from center to circumference, and its advocates can not possibly find a solitary good reason for its support.

If Congress has any sense, it will weak to resist any claim that may be presented for the benefit of the once soldiers, whether just or unjust, the time has come for that body to be finally dissolved, and some other mode of providing a Legislature adopted by the country. If it has become necessary, in order to secure the soldier vote for the one party or the other, that that vote shall be pensioned, then we have arrived at a beautiful juncture in our national life. But such is not the case. The party leaders may think so, and on that idea waste hundreds of millions of the public money in pensions in order to secure the vote; and if such be the reason of this pension legislation, God help us. A pension law for the benefit of the soldier who has lost his health or limb in the service of his country, or who has been disabled, will at all times be approved by the people; but this pensioning of those who were never disabled, and were never wounded or disabled, and have no claim other than an idle service of fifteen or twenty days at some military headquarters of yore, and never saw the enemy or smelt gunpowder, is a most iniquitous thing; and it is strange that a fair-minded man would take a pension under such circumstances.

DES MOINES, IOWA, has a brass band composed of printers. They set up type all day, set up the neighborhood during the evening, and then set themselves up about midnight.

Important to Honey Consumers.
The Bee-Keepers' Association of North America, at its session held in New York, last October, submitted the following report for the benefit of consumers of honey:
"A few facts are necessary to preserve them from imposition. Nice white comb, or itself, and is generally admired, but the price many lovers of honey will not afford. It makes a beautiful dish for the table, but is no better than extracted honey. All comb is wax, and in the stomach it is perfectly indigestible. Extracted honey is the pure liquid honey, taken from the combs by the honey extractor. It is entirely different from that known in the market as strained honey. Consumers help to impose upon themselves by the false idea that pure honey will not granulate. They desire ungranulated honey, and dealers have attempted to supply the demand. Almost all pure honey will granulate when exposed for some time to light and air of purity. Much of the jar honey heretofore sold and recommended not to granulate, is a very inferior article, composed largely of glucose. Granulated honey can be reduced to its liquid state in a few moments by placing the jar in warm water. When thus liquified, it so remains for some time before again crystallizing. Consumers may be sure of a wholesome article by purchasing granulated honey and reducing it."

"We would respectfully call upon producers and consumers to unite their efforts to procure, by petition or otherwise, such legislation in their respective States as will prevent the placing of any adulterations on the market under the name of honey. This becomes the more important, since, during the past year, some American honey has been condemned in Great Britain as adulterated. We certainly ought to prevent the sale of such adulterations as are forbidden in European countries. We suggest: the following tests to prove the purity of honey:—

"1. Honey adulterated with a poor article of glucose will, when poured into a cup of strong Japan tea, turn black by the action of the tannic acid upon the copper salts left in the glucose.

"2. A purer article of glucose is detected by pouring strong alcohol on it in a tumbler. The alcohol will dilute glucose, but it will cause a deposit in the shape of a gummy substance at the bottom of the glass."

Demoralization of Kentucky Politics.
At no period in the history of Kentucky was the spirit of demoralization so prevalent as now in the politics of the State. Among the thoughtful and intelligent classes of the people a feeling of profound disgust has been developed in view of the present condition. It is the legitimate result of the system of personal electioneering that has come into vogue among the numerous office-seekers who throng the highways of the State. So all-pervading has become the system, and so corrupting the influence of it that many of the best men of the Commonwealth rather than resort to it, positively decline to aspire to positions in the public service. The spectacle that is now presented to the people, wherein, from twenty to thirty office-seekers are traversing the State for the purpose of manipulating local conventions and working up "instructions" in behalf of themselves in the approaching Democratic Convention in this city, is a like deplorable and disgraceful. These office-seekers include aspirants to all the offices, from the Governorship to the Registership of lands. Already several gentlemen—Judge Alexander, who had announced himself as a gubernatorial candidate, and Hon. Daniel H. Hughes and Hon. Henry A. Tyler, who were prominent in connection with the Lieutenant Governorship of the State—have abandoned the field in disgust, proclaiming their indisposition to pursue a nomination upon the prevailing system of personal electioneering. No man of intelligence can expect any good result to the common welfare from the present situation of affairs. The politics of the State have been reduced to a fearful scramble among mere office-seekers, the public service will be prominent in connection with the lowest level, the old standard of personal fitness or qualification for offices being submerged in the tumult of personal contention. The time is at hand when the people should call "a halt" upon the multitude of mediocre political aspirants.—Louisville News.

The gentleman explained and went out to get air.

Wade Hampton's Dream.
The editor of Columbia, South Carolina, Register, in the course of a most interesting account of a visit to Gov. Hampton, whom he found greatly improved in strength and steadily recovering from the severe trials through which he has recently passed, tells a striking story of a dream which the Governor had at the crisis of his case, and tells it in the Governor's own words. The visitor, about to take his leave, said to the Governor: "At least, in all your serious illness you had the devoted love of your own people."

"Ah, yes, sir," was the hearty deep-toned reply, "never man more I believe, as confidently as I do that I live, that the prayers of the people saved my life. I will tell you why I feel and believe it so firmly. While I was lying here at the point of death, and had utterly indifferent whether I lived or died, I got a letter from an old Methodist preacher, one of my old friends. He wrote me word informing me of the deep and devout petitions put up in behalf of my restoration by the Methodist conference then in session at Newberry. He then urged upon me to exercise my will to live in response to the supplications of the people of the whole State. My sister, who had tremblingly brought the letter to my bedside and read it to me, then urged me to listen to the kind, loving words of the man of God, and to rouse my will to live, and I promised to do so. I fell into a deep sleep that night, and the most vivid dream I ever experienced was that I was in my slumbers. I dreamt I was in a spacious room, and that in it I was moved to all parts of the State, so I met my assembled friends everywhere. I remember most distinctly of all, old Beaufort, where I had last been. It seemed that there were large assemblages, and as I looked down upon them a grave personage approached me and touched me on the shoulder and said to me: 'These people are praying for you. Live! live! live! I never realized anything like it before. I never felt a vision. I woke the next morning feeling the life blood creeping through my veins, and I told my family the crisis was passed and I would get better.'

At the close of the touching and thrilling relation, we bade him goodbye, heartily wishing him a speedy recovery, and many, many long years of health and usefulness.

The Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer says it has leaked out that there has been a very large sized difference of opinion between the National and Congressional Democratic Committees as to the conduct of the next campaign. The National Committee with Barnum at the head wants to run the next campaign in the interest of Mr. Tilden. The Congressional Committee with Wade at the head wants to run the interest of Thurman. The fight between these Committees on this point was hot and unrelenting. Neither would yield, and the debate, at times got high. After a number of meetings and hours and hours of debate and discussing and conferring, the Committees have agreed that they are not to agree, and have compromised the matter by dividing to form a new Co. In order, to consist of five members from each of the old Committees. This new Committee is to have its headquarters in Washington, and to be general supervision of the campaign but it must fight it out between its as to whether it will support Tilden or Thurman or some other man. This reliably stated to be the present state of the fight.

W. L. RIDDELL,
Editor and Proprietor.
BURLINGTON, KY., FEBRUARY 27.

The doctors could not resuscitate the negro who was hung in Louisville last Friday.

F. M. CALKIN, editor of the late Covington Ticket, died at his home in Ohio, last Thursday.

SEVERAL counties hold conventions to instruct delegates next Monday. About one hundred delegates will be made that day.

If you want to be announced as a candidate for Representative, it will cost you no more to have it run from now till the first of August than it will for one week.

The Courier-Journal has a brace of libel suits, the offspring of its comments on the verdict of the jury in the Clayton murder case. The figures in each are $25,000.

The Chinese Bill has been passed by both houses in Congress and is now in the hands of the President awaiting his action, about which there is considerable speculation.

The prospects for Tilden's nomination again in 1880 are improving as the time for the national convention approaches. He is being recognized as decidedly the most available man.

The committee appointed by the Kenton Convention to present the names of persons to be appointed delegates, did the handsome thing(?) of recommending every one of its own members.

We understand that several of Boone County's gallant sons have the Legislative bee buzzing in their hats, and would not refuse to allow their names used in connection with the race for the Legislature.

OUR St. Louis letter shows the gentleman who occupies the executive chair in Missouri, up in anything but an enviable light. There are too many such men as he represents Governor Phelps to be occupying places of high honor and trust in this land.

THERE will be a large uninstructed vote in the State Convention at Louisville, and several of the slow running candidates look to it for sufficient strength to keep them before the convention, and increase their opportunities to become compromise nominees.

THE ravisher, George Washington, colored, was executed in Louisville last Friday. The usual rotten rope was used, and the condemned man was let fall to the ground, from whence he was taken back on the scaffold and swung off the second time. The crowd that witnessed the hanging was estimated at twenty thousand.

It seems strange that those who framed the resolutions to be submitted to the Kenton Convention should have made such a marked difference regarding the candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor and that of Auditor. Had the one intended for the Auditor been adopted, the delegates would have been instructed as to that office in plain terms.

THE Nationals-elect have entered into a solemn compact to act in concert in the organization of the next Congress, and declare that in all matters coming before that body after being regularly organized they will fight both the old parties when their views are antagonistic. The National leaders claim that their party is growing rapidly, and that it will make its mark in 1880.

WE hear of several persons who have been constant readers of this paper for the past three years, and who, we are sorry to say, have never contributed in any manner to its support. Now we want to know of those persons if their conscience does not say to them that they have been receiving the benefit of labor long enough without paying for it, and that they should come forward and subscribe at once.

LAST Monday, Garrard County instructed for Blackburn, Bowman, Hardin, Hewitt, Sheldon, Allen and Tate. Clark, for Blackburn, Whitaker, Sheldon, Henderson and Tate.

Grayson, for Blackburn, Dawson, Moon, Hewitt, Henderson and Maroon. Muhlenberg, for Lindsay, Cantrill, Hardin, Hewitt, Wilson, Z. F. Smith and Tate.

Owen, for Blackburn, Cantrill, D. Howard Smith, Z. F. Smith and Duval.

It is understood that some Kenton County delegate has a resolution to submit to the May Convention, which, if passed, will involve the instructions of all delegates appointed and instructed by county conventions where the candidates for whom they were instructed were present in their own interest. The adoption of such a resolution would be rather an extraordinary move on the part of the convention, and one which it is not likely to take. The convention can find better means by which to set its seal of condemnation on the present riotous manner of conducting the State campaign, than that in the above mentioned resolve. It is really necessary that the officers be fanned down, but the action cannot be taken by the said resolution as it is not all practicable.

The Augusta, (Ga.) Chronicle says: "It is evident that Mr. Tilden is fast becoming a more formidable candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency. A year ago he had little or no strength, and was not regarded as a possible factor in the next political campaign. The investigation of the cipher dispatches which was planned to accomplish Mr. Tilden's ruin has been of benefit to him. It has given him prominence and brought him conspicuously before the people at a time when public sentiment concerning the next campaign is being formed. Again, it is evident that a Democrat can not be elected unless he carries the State of New York, and it is equally evident that none but a Hard Money Democrat like Mr. Tilden will stand the ghost of a chance in that great State. For these reasons Mr. Tilden will be found a formidable candidate for the nomination when the National Convention assembles. But, on the other hand, there is reason to fear that if Mr. Tilden should be nominated his candidacy—in certain contingencies—might create a serious schism in the Democratic party and result in crushing defeat. The Democrats—and especially are these Democrats in the South—who still believe that Mr. Tilden's timidity cost him the Presidency, who have lost confidence in his courage, his statesmanship and his integrity, and who will not vote for him unless under the strongest compulsion."

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

St. Louis, Mo., February 22, 1879.
To the Editor of the Recorder:
Speaking after the manner of business men, I might say the present has been an off week with me. In other words, the weather has been so disagreeable and your correspondent has felt so poorly the week through, I did not care whether school kept or not. Feeling thus, I had about concluded to give you and your readers the go by this week, but the fact is, the force of habit is so firmly imbedded in my natural organization, that at this time in life it costs an effort to throw off an established custom of the most trivial nature.

Well, it has been a week of considerable importance with many of our leading or representative men, and not a few have been trembling in their boots, and looking with fear for something to turn up that would be in their way of getting the nomination for the next Presidency. And right here let me remind you and your readers that the way of the transgressor is hard, and I may as well, in the same connection, advise your readers that if they are guilty of tricks that are vain and ways that are dark, that they had better not come out for office or public favors.

I believe I advised you in my last respects, that our Saintry Governor had sent to the Senate the names of J. C. Nidelet, W. M. Ladd and David H. Armstrong for confirmation as Police Commissioners, and that there was great indignation manifest in political circles on account of the first named. The affair, to say the least of it, has stirred up the most unpleasant odor of anything of the kind for many a day. To come to the point, I do not know that I can say what I wish to communicate, better than to say that this day, one week ago, our honorable State Senate appointed a sort of smelling committee, politely styled an Investigating Committee to visit our city and hunt up evidence against the moral characters of Messrs. Nidelet and Ladd, and said Committee came to the city last Saturday evening and engaged rooms at the Laclede Hotel. Mr. Ladd had been a merchant in this city for the past sixteen years, and business men generally looked upon the whole proceeding as nothing more and nothing less than a fight between the business and bummer elements of the city, and your correspondent became so interested in the matter that he, this day one week ago, wrote a letter to his Excellency, Governor Phelps, extolling the virtues of Mr. Ladd, as we had been a business neighbor of his for ten years, and we had never heard aught against his moral character, and we were of the opinion until within the past few days, that there was not a more exemplary young man in this city than W. M. Ladd, and we so expressed ourselves in said letter to his Excellency. But before the aforesaid Committee concluded the work of investigation, it was proven to the satisfaction of every member of the Committee, doubtless, as well as every reader of our daily papers, that the aforesaid Ladd had been, for years, in open adultery with one Mrs. Lundy, of this city, and the evidence was conclusive that they had been ejected from three hotels in this city. And this is not all. It was also proven that there was a collusion between his Excellency and A. B. Wakefield, the most notorious and despicable gambler in this city, to nominate the aforesaid Nidelet and Ladd, in order that he, Wakefield, might control the gambling halls of the city. The evidence seems conclusive as to this. But as black and damaging as it is, it is not the blackest page in the history of these men. It was asserted before the said committee, and proven, too, to the mind of any unbiased or unprejudiced person that there was actually a conspiracy between his Excellency and this man Wakefield, to bring about a meeting of a certain woman of the town, and a prominent candidate for the position of Police Commissioner at a certain assignation house, in order that they might blackmail him, and defeat his chance for the position. There was evidence before the said committee that Wakefield and his Excellency did arrange for said meeting, and that they did employ a certain carpenter to make peep-holes from an adjoining room, and that the aforesaid Wakefield and his Excellency did, on the appointed day, and at the appointed hour, go into said room, lay in wait in said room, and through said peep-holes viewed the operations as arranged by their nefarious designs. There is hardly a respectable Democrat in this city or in this whole great State, who is not mortified out of countenance at the conduct of the Executive head of this Commonwealth. Your present correspondent is clearly of the opinion that about the best thing this lecherous old scoundrel can do for himself and the people of this State, whether these things be true or false, is to step down and out of the gubernatorial Chair. This is not the first instance of his lecherousness, and whether this last report is true or not, it is all in the papers, and the evidence seems conclusive, and everybody believes it, and all modest persons are disgusted with his conduct. So we say he ought to step down and out, and leave for parts unknown for honor of the State and position he has signally disgraced. Of course, Messrs. Ladd and Nidelet will not be confirmed, and right here I may as well say that I have not spoken with a man on this subject the past three days, Democrat or Republican, but what is ashamed of our present Executive head. He is a disgrace to the place that he holds and ought to resign at once.

Today being the birth day of a Patriot of olden times, one that would doubtless scorned the idea of being President by the 8 to 7 rule, our merchants on yesterday, by an almost unanimous vote, voted to close our Exchange, so there is but little business being transacted with us to-day. Hoping you are feeling patriotic, we will lay our pen down and

BURLINGTON, KY., FEBRUARY 27.

Corn for Horses.

Is it not economy to feed horses corn in the ear? We have proved it for a number of years, believing that the portion which is not masticated, and so passed out of the horse without being digested, was not equal the miller's toll. The toll is very heavy, and this with the waste and the time spent going to the mill will make it fully equal to every eighth. Another thing farmers do not think about. Suppose every tooth is not masticated and assimilated by the horse, it is kept on the farm; whereas, if it is left at the mill, the farm is so much depleted of plant food. The Southern and Western corn is lighter and not so apt to produce colic. In the South, corn is almost always fed in the ear, and so it is in the West when fed at all. Corn is excellent food for horses to work on; but not so good for fast driving. They are more quiet and tractable on corn than with any other grain, and will do more hard pulling and drudgery with less loss in condition. Oats make a horse sprightly and active, and hence should be fed sparingly to a colt. Oats have helped to make a great many balky, spavined and runaway horses. Corn makes them dull and slow, but strong. Corn is the best for colts while being broken. It may be lighter and not so heating by having wheat bran mixed with it.—Rural New Yorker.

A couple may set up for themselves with very few utensils, scarcely any provisions, and next to no knowledge of cookery. A gas or oil stove takes the place of a costly and cumbersome cooking range. Coffee is bought not only parched but ground. Spices and pepper come all prepared for use. Every kind of bread, cake and pastry can be purchased at a slight advance on the cost of the material they contain. If one wishes the sport of making them, self-rising flour may be had in any grocery. Fruit of all kinds at ready for the table can be purchased about as cheaply as that which must be prepared. Not only lobsters and other shell-fish, but salmon may be bought cooked and ready to be served at a price but a little above what the crude articles cost; and cooked corned beef, tongue, pig's feet and ham have long been on the market. There are also canned soups, that—except to be diluted; mince meat, already to be put between pie-crust; and roast meats and fowls of all descriptions. Some grocers keep much prepared for frying Boston baked beans, put up in cans, have had a great run during the past few years. English plum pudding is also on the market. Last summer witnessed the advent of fried potatoes as an article of commerce. Cans of cooked green corn, beans, peas, tomatoes, cauliflower and asparagus are found on the shelves of every corner grocery. It is no longer necessary to have a cook, or to be a cook in order to keep house. It requires scarcely any cooking utensils to provide a warm meal. A can-opener, a frying-pan and a coffee pot are the principal requisites. Even the last is not absolutely necessary, since a mixture of prepared coffee, sugar and cream may be readily obtained. It is even practical, now for the novice to dispense with a book, as the label on every can tells how to treat the contents.

Deep Plowing.

I do not plow to an unreasonable depth, because I have no manure that I wish to get rid of. About the year 1840, Gov. Isaac Hill, of New Hampshire, after finishing his political course, entered into the Farmer's Monthly Visitor, wherein he advocated extreme depth, ten inches in plowing, and asserted that another farm is laid beneath every man's farm, and that he had only to run the plow to this depth, or two inches deeper, reaching quite a portion of the subsoil, and he would have another farm of superior fertility to the first, without any additional purchase money. This myth was believed and practiced by many "new light" farmers, to the great injury of the agricultural portion of the State, where, in hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of manure was hopelessly buried beyond the reach of vegetation, as manure at that depth will leach down much faster than plant roots can grow to overtake it. To this point I quote Col. Waring, in "American Agriculture."

"About six acres were plowed some seven or eight years ago, twelve inches deep. The subsoil was blue clay, which was brought to the surface, was a lasting injury to the land. It still shows the ill effect of the treatment, in spite of time and manure. I confess to having been an advocate of these theories for many years, and I have seen them sustained on certain soils. Where? Only on swamp mud prairie soils, where the bottom is as rich as the top; but I have slowly come to the belief that it is usually the safest plan to leave the soil alone, where nature made it, and where she always keeps it in her richest forests and fields." This writer found on his three acres of corn, the past year, that the corn was best on sward ground (that is usually the poorest), where the manure was plowed in only five inches deep, compared with the residue of the soil, which was old ground where the manure was plowed in eight inches deep. Also, a piece of meadow of about one acre on the shore underlaid with a gray sand, like sea sand, was plowed deep for the purpose of smoothing it down better, and was then sown to hard grass early in April last, and came up well, "and when I looked for grass, there grew nothing but sickle grass."—New England Farmer.

The New Cattle Disease.

In these columns yesterday the subject of pleuro-pneumonia among American cattle was referred to, as also the order of the British Government for the slaughter at Liverpool of a recent arrival at that port of stock from the United States, because affected with this or some other disease. It was stated therein, on the authority of a New Haven, Conn., Journal, that pleuro-pneumonia existed in that State, and also on the authority of the Commissioner of U. S. Agricultural Department, that it existed more or less in Virginia. There would seem to be no doubt that it is prevailing in some parts of the country, and that the Commissioner is taking prompt measures to secure the action of Congress thereon. The Washington correspondent of the New York Daily Commercial Bulletin states that on January 80th, a document regarding this new disease was sent to Congress from the Agricultural Department, with the request that it be referred to the Agricultural Committees of both Houses, with instructions to report as quickly as possible. It contains reports from various parts of the country, especially the East, showing that pleuro-pneumonia is raging generally, and fatally among the cattle, and that it is almost as dangerous as the rinderpest. Dr. Gadsden, of Philadelphia, reports in a letter that it is severest in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Long Island. It is raging in Maryland and Virginia, and around Washington in its worst form. Something will be done immediately by Congress about it.

The British Consuls in the United States also inform the British Privy Council that pleuro-pneumonia exists among cattle, in mild type, however, in various parts of the country, but it is not infectious. But the agricultural interests in England are endeavoring to induce the Privy Council to schedule the United States as an infected country.

It is of great importance that the extent and virulence and possibility should be ascertained, as the continuation of the enlarging export of cattle to Great Britain is involved in the result.—Republican.

Our European Stock Market.

The shipping of live stock from our country to Europe is no longer an experiment, but has become an established fact. But while this trade is in its infancy, it is well for our stock producers to look well to their interests in building up and maintaining it at a profit.

It is evident to every one who has traveled in Europe, or who is familiar with the agricultural condition of both that country and our own, that the cost of producing meat is largely in our favor, and must continue to be for a long period of years. No known country surpasses ours in climate, soil and water, or in the growth of grains and grasses that are essential to the rapid and healthy growth of stock. Here there is a combination of all the elements of success, and if we fail in reaping a good harvest financially, it will be our own fault. Our natural resources and means of transportation to the seaports are nowhere equalled.

We have heard it said that the trade will not last; that we shall soon overstock the foreign markets with meats, and reduce the price so much that it will not bear the expense of shipping and leave us a paying price at home.

That fear is groundless. We have not really opened the door to the European markets, and know but little of the extent of the possible future trade. But we do know that since it was first tried, as an experiment, the demand has increased faster than the means of transportation permitted us to supply. On January 1st, of the present year, two new lines of steamships were started, devoted exclusively to carrying livestock across the ocean. The vessels are built for the purpose, and carry a really greater number than the ordinary freight vessel. As the business increases other lines will be established, and the arrangements for the safe transit will be perfected and the cost lessened. Consequently a lower price in Europe will still continue a paying price to the grower at home, and every animal sent out of the country will require another to fill the place in home consumption. Others have said this will injure our foreign demand for cured meats. This is an error. The idea of fresh meats going to a different class of consumers altogether, and there can be no conflict in that respect. The danger lies not in this direction. The prices realized from this trade and the demand will be governed by the same law as all other commercial articles. The quality of the material sent will either build up the market or sink it. In Europe, half-fed, or, we might say half-starved stock is not sent to the market, as so often here, neither are diseased animals allowed to be sold as some sell them here with us. There the government takes an interest in guarding the health of domestic animals. We need legislation in this direction, and the time is not far distant when we must have it or our stock products will decline in the markets of the world.—Farmer Review.

"LITTLE chaps are very annoying," sayeth a young man in Burlington. He has some on his hands.

It seems to us that the prospects for a stir in religious circles in this town are remarkably good at present.

THANKS to W. P. Lodge, of Hebron, Ky., and James L. Connelly, of Webster, Colorado, for favors extended.

THIS is moving season with the country cousins, and in some localities nearly every family will exchange homes with in the next ten days.

We are reliably informed that the Grangers have determined to establish stock pens at the residence of W. M. Comer near Florence X-Roads, for a point at which any of the farmers will find safe for their stock on certain days in the week not yet determined upon.

THE horizontal bar was erected in the County Clerk's office yard, last Saturday, and the yelling kept there all the afternoon could be surpassed only by a Democratic mass meeting. If the noise Saturday is a sample of what is to be kept up all summer, not only the muscles, but the lungs as well, will be developed.

A. B. PARKER was in town Monday. Arthur was glad to say is looking well, and as joyful as of yore.

LAST Saturday evening, the Florence Dramatic Club gave its evening entertainment, which was attended by a large and appreciative audience. While the weather, during the week, had not been favorable for persons from a distance to attend, and the Club was thus necessarily compelled to rely mainly on those in the immediate vicinity of Florence for patronage, their faith was not misplaced, for each evening of the week a large and attentive audience followed their various characters through the joys and sorrows of their mimic life, applauding loud and sympathizing there, and in the most appropriate manner expressing their appreciation of the efforts of the members of the club to amuse and instruct them. The management had been to considerable expense in renting and decorating the stage, which presented a handsome and artistic appearance. The plays were well mounted, several of the scenes having been painted expressly for the occasion. It is to be regretted that the stage room was so limited, as it was impossible for the tableaux to be rendered as effective as they might have been had there been sufficient room for the participants to properly take their respective positions.

THE performance opened each evening of the week, save Friday, with the presentation of the intensely temperance drama The Red Tie, a play abounding in fine passages of morality and sentiment, and riveting the attention of the beholder from the opening of the first scene to the falling of the curtain on the last. The tableaux and situations of the play are more sorrowful than startling, and yet are of such a nature as to afford the thinking mind abundant food for reflection.

Audiences, as a rule, prefer to laugh, and the button-busting farces Artful Dodger and Petty Baker were calculated to relieve the mind of the gloom produced by The Red Tie, and send each one home in a good humor. In addition to this, on Saturday night, a new farce, Seeing the Elephant, if anything more laughable than the others, was produced, thus, in the pleasantest manner possible, finishing a week of success in more senses than one.

Our space will not permit us to particularize and comment upon each part, nor would we care to undertake so delicate a task, but justice compels us to mention the thorough and painstaking manner in which Sam Conner entered into and sustained the parts in which he was cast, and in which he was ably supported by Miss Nellie White, whose only serious fault we must be her difficulty in suppressing a constant laugh. The leading parts in the drama were ably taken by H. A. Cantler and Miss Sophia Clark, while the remaining characters were produced in a manner creditable to those sustaining them. The farces kept up too constant a stream of laughter to allow an audience to be critical, and were well received by all who had the good fortune to attend the entertainment.

"TAKEN all in all, the week's entertainment! can not be regarded as anything but a success and a credit to the management, to whom we desire to return our sincere thanks for favors extended, and who may congratulate themselves upon the auspicious reception of their efforts.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Florence.
Born—To Wm. Logan and wife, a son.

Prof. Frick moved from Florence to Petersburg, Monday.

THE residence of Mr. Phil Senious, on Bank Lick, was burned last Saturday. Mr. Senious was moving to the burnt mansion from Big Bone, had got part of his goods moved and started a fire in the kitchen, when the shingles on the roof, being old and dry, were ignited by a spark from the chimney. There being no one at the house but Mr. Senious, the building was burned to the ground, together with most of the goods. It was insured in the Royal Insurance Company for $1,000, and was valued at $2,500. This is the second time that Mr. Senious has been burned out. The other time he lost all his household goods.

Quillerville.
March 3d.—Business good here. Our saw mill is doing a good business, as there are about two hundred and fifty logs in the yard. It is no trouble to get them there, inasmuch as it is down hill to the mill.

Our blacksmith is still doing a starving business, and yet he is in the best of spirits. Your correspondent was in Walton, the other day, and saw the machinery of the mill that Rouse Bros. are erecting there. We wish their success, as a good mill is badly needed there.

From the looks of things there Saturday evening, strong drink must have run in the gutter. It is a good thing to have that little drowsy for there is not of the stuff to be had at Quillerville.

Florence X-Roads.

EMMA Hoffman, of Ohio, is sick of a fever at her father's near here.

THE condition of the culverts on the Florence pike are getting more dangerous every day.

THERE has been some talk of having the second school exhibition this winter, but some of the patrons object to so much time being taken in making preparations.

MR. Rouse has made application for a patent on his railroad gear. We heard a man remark, the other day, that he would have to travel on a railroad, where he would have to travel to open gates.

MR. Green Aylor and Miss Lou Underhill were married at Elder Stephen's, last Thursday.

AFTER the ceremony, the party repaired to Mrs. Aylor's, the mother of the groom, where an elegant supper was enjoyed.

Bellefonte.
As we approach spring-land, after a winter which will be memorable for its extremely cold weather and deep snows, we begin to hear of preparations making by our progressive farmers and business men for the coming season.

QUITE a number are preparing to plant an unusual amount of their land in tobacco and potatoes. A few will try hogs again this year. The wheat sown last fall is now looking very promising with us. A more than average amount of land is being sown in oats and grass with us this spring.

WE have examined several orchards and flowerly all the peaches and cherries killed. Also a great deal of the tender varieties of the tender and smaller fruits.

MR. Basley, of Flatburg, is hauling a lot of fine black walnut logs here, where he intends to ship them to the city. We hear that he paid $15 per "M" for them in the tree.

THE last run of heavy ice in the river benched the ferry company's boat "Mary Fred," and sunk it. The company are at work trying to raise her, and hope to be able to make the regular crossing in a few days.

THE Middle Creek water-mills are again running and turning out a large amount of meal. Mr. John Bruce and Theodore Roberts are the accommodating millers.

LAST week Mr. Jo Maurer shipped some dozen of clothes and 100 nests of market baskets. This week our willow growers begin cutting their crop of willows.

WE notice in last week's Recorder the announcement of one and the promise of more candidates for the Legislature. Now, Mr. Editor, as your Hebron correspondent suggests, as the two main objects which were before the people at the last election for Representative, viz., the dog and stock laws, are settled, let the coming man take up the road law—a good suggestion, say we, and we will second his motion by adding the school law to his proposition. We believe that the county is as much in need of one as the other. Let our coming man speak out.

OUR city is still improving, and we hear of quite a number who are contemplating to build this season. Judge Cole has just built a shed in which to erect his stock scales, and H. C. Griffith, "Old Green Back," has just completed a turning day and other entertaining apparatus, in the upper story of Esquire Grant's foundry on Third street.

THERE is considerable sickness in the neighborhood—mostly such as are brought on by exposure to cold or sudden changes of weather. Mr. Scott Rice has come to Louisville, where he has put himself under the care and treatment of Dr. Hut-Che. He is suffering from kidney disease and hemorrhage of the bowels. Wm. P. Ryle has been quite sick with pleurisy, but is now slowly recovering. We are sorry to say that Mr. Jas. P. Kelly is again quite seriously sick, having suffered a relapse from his long spell of sickness. Mr. Kelly has now been confined to the house five months, most of the time to his bed.

Petersburg.

Spring—wet, gloomy and disagreeable—as upon us. True to the prophecy of the infatigable groundhog, we have had the doubly concentrated essence of February weather, all its varying moods; March has come in like a meek lion or a ferocious sheep, thereby throwing another measure of uncertainty into the balance on the side of conjecture against fate, which trips our profoundest philosophers into the foulest traps of error and convinces us that all the old prophets are dead and the young ones as ignorant as babes; and the inevitable spring moving has come along with the rest to add to the disagreeableness of life at such periods; our butcher has gone on a pleasure speculation trip to the plains of Green River, leaving his deputy to finish the distribution of the last animal dissected by a distinguished citizen of our suburbs has loaned a "meat house," sent for a cargo of beef, which mysteriously failed to come to time, thereby causing great anxiety among the "friends of the family"; in fact, this catalogue of evils might be continued ad infinitum, but enough is a good deal and too much is plenty; besides we have some things to rejoice over.

Capt. A. B. Parker, of Capt. E. Adams of the United States government service in the capacity of a stockkeeper, has married a very handsome lady, a Miss Gray, of Covington, and with his bride is located in the Schramm Hotel, in Sweet Pete for the ensuing sixty days or during good behavior. The Commissioners in the partition of the realty of Mr. John Norris, deceased, have succeeded in making what is generally conceded a fair and equitable division of the same among the seven owners. Reese has bought a new hat, put on a clean suit, blacked his upper lip, and is making a desperate effort at having himself generally acknowledged as the boss and confidential friend of Little Rube. Dr. McWorthy announces himself as the coming champion of the blue ribbon temperance cause which is to strike this section next June, about six weeks before the millennium.

Rutherford has corked the Chinese immigration bill, and inconveniently set down on both branches of our big Congress; and now those who "always said so," were always opposed to it," &c., &c., are daily increasing in number, until not a voice will be missed in its advocacy.

Deacon Grant has transplanted his vine and fig-tree, brook and lime, home from the farm of Hon. J. D. Willis, of Grange, to the farm of J. Frank Grant, of Silk Strang Row, has moved into the house in the White settlement lately vacated by the Deacon.

BRO. E. D. Carter, with his handsome ring, has gone East, contrary to the advice of Horace U., and has accepted a situation both lucrative and pleasant as chief clerk of a boarding factory away down in Jersey.

PROF. Frick, of Florence, is moving to this place, with a view to locating permanently. His plane arrived last Friday, and the Professor, with his family and household goods, is daily expected.

AT the last meeting of Petersburg Grange, a resolution was passed reminding all dues unpaid by its members up to January 1, 79. This wipes out the ledger and gives everyone a new deal, and all the members are expected to come up promptly in future, pay their dues, attend regular meetings, and otherwise conduct themselves as becomes the discreet Granger.

Hebron.

A good many of our citizens went to hear Talmage lecture.

BORN—To Wm. and Mary Hensley, March 1st, a 12-pound boy.

HUBERT Cropper proposes to ornament his place with a new paling fence.

IT didn't take Jim Cole long to get West enough in his, as he is at home.

A good many of our citizens attended the dramatic entertainment at Florence.

JOE Laile took some fine horses to sell to parties living in Ohio, the other day.

JOHN Cole delivered to a gentleman in Aurora his fine, year-old gelding, price $100.

WE are in favor of a primary election this time, and for a Returning Board.

DR. Leta Terrill says it's a boy, and George Reeder and wife, of Stringtown, are happy.

IT is thought that there will be some litigation in regard to the Jap Stockwell estate.

STRIDER's Hamiltonian is growing in great favor. His colts are being much sought after.

SOME of the boys were impressed (with a No. 11 boot) the other night that it was a select party.

PROF. Jones and wife have gone to Independence to spend a week or so with friends and relatives.

MIKE Cole and John drew a pair of nice horses to Aurora to show to parties there proposing to buy.

JIM Ute is reading law, preparatory to offering his services as Counselor, Judge some time in the future.

IT is believed that this neighborhood can turn out more fine horses than any other place in the county.

ON account of the inclemency of the weather on last Lord's day, there was no service held at Hebron.

BIDWELL's Almont is said to be the fastest horse in the world for a quarter mile, showing a 2:12 gate for a mile.

ED Hunt, of Ohio County, Ind., passed through our town with a small drove of horses for the Cincinnati market.

ON Saturday evening, the band turned out in full force and gave the town a general blowing up—on their horns.

JAKE Griger analyzed forty-one gallons of sap (water maple), and obtained therefrom two quarts of very fine syrup.

JOE Reed will play in Hebron, during the season, at one of the principal opera-houses, possibly, if they agree on terms.

WANTED—Two or more candidates from each precinct in the county to run for the Legislature until the primary election.

THURSDAY is at this time about three hundred Hottentots trapped in this neighborhood. Occasionally the atmosphere reminds one of the fact.

A great many people on the streets, Saturday evening, and the young ladies taking horseback exercise gave everything a lively appearance.

THERE is a good deal of tobacco passing through this place en route for the Covington market, the price ranging from $5 to $10 per hundred.

A fine-looking sorrel horse came through Hebron, the other day, with a place of saddle and the headstall of a bridle on. Whore is your rider?

CANDIDATES for the Legislature had better not delay too long in sending in their names to the Recorder, as there will only be two columns devoted for that purpose.

THE Grangers talk of building a new storehouse in Bullittsville. We also hear that Mr. Wm. Cole, of Bullittsville, is going in to the dry goods and grocery business.

HEBRON needs a hotel on the European plan; also more dwelling houses for renting purposes. Landlords ought to take advantage of the times and build more houses.

THE Hebron Dramatic Club progresses finely with its exercises. It has an experienced leader and critic to put it through, and will probably give a public entertainment about the 1st of April.

THE dancing party at Mr. Geo. Hick's, on Thursday night, was well attended. All present seemed to enjoy themselves very much indeed. It was difficult to decide who were the bolles of the evening.

RABBITS ought to be unloved for three years, and anyone knowingly and wilfully taking the life of an opossum out of season ought to go to Frankfort and serve a term of years in the—well, Legislature.

A good way to prevent chickens from scratching in the garden: Take a three-pronged stick, similar in shape to the chicken's leg and foot. Bind it on in front of the leg with a small cord. As his chickenpick licks, instead of going backward it continues to walk the gentleman out of the garden. Patent applied for.

I would suggest that a society be organized in the county of Boone, composed of male persons of the age of 80 years and upwards. The object of the organization would be to hold annual meetings at a suitable season of the year, in the shape of a barbecue or basket meeting, and at the same time discuss matters relative to old times, and such other subjects as would be interesting on the occasion. Suppose, Mr. Editor, that you publish a suitable time and place for holding the first meeting, organizing, electing officers, &c., the society to be known as Boone Veterans, or some other appropriate name.

ELDER W. S. KEEKE preaches at the Christian Church in Florence the first Sunday in each month. His appointments will appear in the Directory hereafter.

We have heard it suggested that on the third Sunday in April, Rev. Jas. A. Kirkley and Rev. Geo. Vanden will exchange pulpits.

Mr. Kirkley preaching at Dry Creek and Mr. Vanden in Burlington.

The Universalist congregation of Burlington will, for the present, occupy the Court-house.

On the morning of the fourth Sunday and on the evening following.

THIS new church at Bellevue is not large enough to accommodate the large congregations that there assemble on the second and fourth Sundays of each month, when the weather is fine. It is said the church will be enlarged.

In the matter of the heirs of John Norris, an petition for partition, Commissioner allowed $28.25; three Commissioners each allowed $3; Commissioner for deeds, $10.50.

Beall & Whitlock allowed $32 for coal furnished the Poor-house.

Davis Bros. allowed $30 on account of Poor-house.

Ferry Carroll released from paying tax on 33 acres of land erroneously assessed against him.

It has, ever since we commenced the publication of this paper, been our earnest desire to avoid publishing anything calculated to create a local disturbance, or cast any undue reflections of a personal nature; but the "Ode" which appeared in last week's issue was a glaring violation of our rule, and an article which would have been rejected had we given it the proper examination.

It contains thrusts at persons who have proven themselves our friends not only in word but in deed, and we regret that in its unguarded and unimpaired condition it should have been so ungratefully published. In justice to Mr. C. C. Conner and Fountain Riddell, both of whom we understand have been accused of the authorship of the article, we desire to say that they knew nothing of its existence until it appeared in print. In another column will be found a reply to "Union," and as both sides have now been heard and received a like treatment at our hands, we close the columns of this paper against any further discussion of the subject.

THE other day, a negro man who was living with Montez Gray, near Bullittsville, became enraged at Graves' cook, a colored woman, because she gave him a quantity of food, and he seized the table, and grew so furious that he grabbed a heavy shovel and made an assault upon the woman whose arm was broken by a stroke received in attempting to ward off the blows of the demoniac he had. The disturbance was quelled, and the man arrested and tried before Judge Gaines and Kendall, who committed him to jail to await further trial.

Personal Mention.

REV. L. D. STAW, who has charge of the Methodist church of this circuit, favored us with a brief call, one day last week.

Our young friend Edward McKenzie, who has been engaged in business in St. Louis for some time, is home on a visit. His many friends were glad to welcome him back again.

ONE night last week, one of the female citizens of Bucktown got into a row, which resulted so violently that a man was dispatched to the county Jail. Sheriff Foster, who donned his official robe, repaired to the front, read the riot act, and soon succeeded in quelling the noise. Nobody killed, but a few were knocked down; consequently, no arrests were made.

Lines.

Respectfully inscribed to our friend "Union."

We honor "Union" for her strength, And think it just and true That she should go to any length (That's proper, right and true) To add to our neighbor's joy.

But wisdom, harmony and love Can never be deceived, Since justice bids them not to rove, If others should be relieved, Accusing those of selfishness.

Who preach the faith in love, And since the organ you annoy, Pray, let us make friends, By offering that which is alloy.

A willing heart to do the Master's will, A master who should say to us: "Wrong, Then God will teach you who's your neighbor still."

And that "Union" is lots of right which makes her strong. A MEMBER.

We are in receipt of a postal from Miss B. Combs Wood, of Dulaski Co., requesting us to announce that she will give an educational entertainment in Burlington and Florence in a few days. The postal is dated March 7th, 1879, and was mailed at New Liberty, Ky.

It has been decided to move the school building in the "White School District" to a place located somewhere near Alfred Cason's. A meeting was held in the school-house last Saturday to arrange plans for erecting the new building.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

CONSTANCE.

MARCH 7.—If you are scarce of mud down your way, just send in your order and we will fill it out immediately, for we have plenty and acres to spare.

At the election for a preacher for the coming year, the members of Point Pleasant Church decided to employ the Rev. W. S. Keene.

Mr. Jeff McNeal has erected a log house on his place to rent out. Also, Cash Brown, for the accommodation of his overseer, Dick McDaniel.

Miss Kate Tappan's school will close week after next.

The friends of Mr. Jas. H. Walton talk of running him for County Representative.

John Wall has gone to the Prairie State (Illinois). Success to him in his new home. Some of our farmers have begun breaking up for spring crops.

Mr. Henry C. McNeal is laid up with a sore hand.

Mr. Jesse Foster is going to move from Mr. A. Gaines' place in a short time. Mr. Wall and family will move to their old place. Anderson's ferry, next week. James H. Walton will move on Squire Harper's farm this spring.

OWL COLLEGE.

MARCH 3.—Pruning trees, preparing the ground for plowing and burning brush seems to be the topic of farmers.

A merry spring is this, when every object around us, heralds the departure of the lion to give place for the lamb. How every lover of nature can feast his soul upon her beauties when bright, beautiful spring, brings her garb the omnipotent being has given her, greets man as a token of His undying love!

We hail the early approach of this season as a harbinger of good to our farming community. Already are they taking advantage of this delightful weather to turn the soil while the sun shines, preparatory to raising a large crop of grain.

We learn from the sound of the woodman's ax as it descends to lay low the mighty oak of the forest, and presently a loud crash gives evidence of the falling of an aged and struggling tree.

The roads are drying up, and we hope they will soon be in fine condition.

Mr. John Powers was visiting friends and relatives at Zion Station last week.

Pa's Box.

HEBRON.

The first Monday in March was a general setting up day.

Saturday afternoon, big foot by the band. The town gay and happy.

Dr. Jones Terrill moved from this place to Bullittsville on the 6th.

Millers having corn meat to dispose of can find ready sale at Hebron.

Joe Lidle has moved to the Rankin place, near the Florence Fair Grounds.

Quite a lot of costumes and trunks generally arrived on the 5th for the dramatic club.

Johnny Clarke's Aurora man went back on time. A Cincinnati middle man makes up the job.

Persons intending to trail over the mud roads had better procure a life-preserver before they start.

Reserved seats are already being sold for the dramatic entertainment four weeks or more in advance.

The boys who went West (to St. Louis) report a good chance to invest money (for necessities of life).

It has been a little dry about Bullittsville for some time, but we understand she is coming in again.

A considerable amount of money passed hands on the 10th. Uncle Geo. Clure being the principal collector.

Henry Plunkett, dairy stock passed through this place en route for their new home near Francisville.

The new minstrel troupe that is forming here will be ready to start on the road as soon as spring frosts open.

We are to have two schools in Hebron this summer—male and female schools—to open Monday, March 10th.

His Honor Jimmie Aylor, the Mayor of Hebron, had a public presentation of a fine cold-headed (hickory) cane.

Dr. Terrill's friends bid him down for a barrel of crab-cider and a basket of champagne the day he left Hebron.

The sale of Mark Whitaker's personality on Wednesday, the 6th inst., attended the highest bidder, on the 10th, in four different lots, from $40 to $25 per acre.

The man generally are taking an account of crops, preparatory to laying in their spring goods and getting ready for the season.

Franklin has purchased a fine saddle horse of Robert Tanner. Price not learned, but supposed to be pretty well up in the hundreds.

Arrivals on Saturday evening by mail coach. Wm. Warner, Asa Jones and wife, M. F. Crigler and wife, and Johnnie Stuck and wife.

Manifest of the Wm. Warner on her down trip Thursday last: 6 passengers, 1 sack coffee, 2 bundle papers, 1 willow basket, 1 broken umbrella.

Sam Soderberg and Chockie Lodge have gone to East Bend to browse around for a few days, as the grass starts a little earlier there than most places.

On Saturday evening last, (Jim) Davis' Fountain Square was the scene of great merriment. On that day, we think, the frogs started on their journey toward the surface.

On last court day we understand that the stowpicks veterans met in full force. The meeting was high, rough, and enthusiastic. What a happy time when Christians meet!

We were shown a sample of M. F. Crigler's shenille (cashmere) wool. It is very fine both in regard to length, and texture. He has only a few hundred pounds to dispose of.

By the way, Mr. Editor, how did it happen that our old friend F. U. Major's name was not mentioned in the gubernatorial race? I suppose he held in reserve for the sweet bye and bye.

"The citizens to be great strife among our market gardeners and farmers as to who shall have the longest, tallest, reddest and finest looking wagon, with the biggest dog painted on it."

People are getting very indignant over the way certain trifles are misused in this country. It looks as though somebody in the high regard to the next fitting of the grand jury.

A high fright occurred in our place Friday night, over a coal-oil lamp taking fire inside a room. It did not explode until it was thrown against a rock. Some says, "Dog gone the coal-oil lamps."

Some people are curious to know why that "Crossed Plow" in regard to the road tax allotment was not answered through the Recorder. People are so curious nowadays, maybe you can get someone else to answer.

I can sympathize with that lady who thought Hebron ought to have sidewalks. It may be, if she would mention the matter to her husband, he would make a start on the much needed convenience, as he owns considerable property in Hebron.

If a few more such men as we have heard named for the Legislature would run, and use the swag pretty freely, it would not be a tender to our citizens.

Will, hardly ever. Sugar and lemon for two.

Great excitement in Hebron; Mike Clure struck oil; take a multitude of people gather to the spot; the oil flows in a stream and stands in pools under the old storehouse.

But, alas! it was finally discovered to flow from a coal-oil can containing fifty gallons, which had sprung a leak, and ran down and out from under the door.

The curves are so short and narrow on some of our roads (turnpikes included) that it makes it quite dangerous to approaching vehicles and conveyances of all kinds, and causes a great deal of delay.

If we deem it necessary to petition our next Representative to have a law passed compelling all owners and drivers of vehicles and other conveyances to use, or cause to be used, an alarm of some kind to notify approaching teams. A wind-broken horse might answer the purpose.

I understand that the city public functionaries have been very careless and negligent in regard to their duty. It is creditably reported that on one occasion, when his Honor Judge Riddell entered the city, he was taken to the bench in an official capacity, he (the Judge) soon discovered that his seat was contested by a huge four-legged dog, with bristled standing ears.

The Judge, who was disposed to look down, picked up (a little courage) a volume on ways and means (to get the hog out) and soon put the animal to flight; whereupon he took his seat and remarked, "Now, gentlemen, I beg to attend to any business that may come before the court" (if there is no hog here mixed with it). As the Judge rode off, he has since been the most famous writing teacher secured in the Court-house, and the Judge mistook him for a hog.

NOTICETOTAXPAYERS.

Under the law there is 6 per cent. added to all unpaid taxes on the 1st day of April of each year for the preceding year, and the Auditor is required at the first court of competent jurisdiction (which is the Franklin Circuit Court, held in June) to take judgment against all delinquent taxpayers. Therefore, after the 1st day of April, 1879, there will be 6 per cent. added to all unpaid taxes for previous years, and between the 1st day of April and the 1st day of June, 1879, there will be 6 per cent. added to all unpaid taxes for the current year, and to save myself from the cost and humiliation of future judgment taken against me in said Court,

LUMBER! LUMBER!!

BURLINGTON, KY., MARCH 13.

COVER THEM OVER.

WILL CARLETON.

Cover them over with beautiful flowers;
Deck them with garlands, those brothers of ours;
Lying so silent, by night and by day,
Sleeping the years of their manhood away;
Years they had marked for the joys of the grave;
Years they must waste in the sloth of the grave.

All the bright laurels they fought to make blossom,
Fell to the earth when they went to the tomb;
Give them the meed they have won in the past;

Give them the honors their merits forecast;
Give them the chapels they won in the strife;
Give them the laurels they lost with their life.

Cover them over—yes, cover them over—
Parent and husband, and brother and lover;
Crown in your heart those dead heroes of ours,
And cover them over with beautiful flowers.

Cover the thousands who sleep far away—
Sleep where their friends can not find them to-day;
They who, in mountain, and hillside, and dell, Rest where they wearied, and lie where they fell.

Sotly the grass-blade creeps round their repose;
Sweetly around them the wild-flower blossoms;

Zephyrs of freedom fly gently overhead,
Whispering words of the patriot dead.
So in our minds we will name them once more.

So in our hearts we will cover them o'er;
Roses and lilies, and violets blue, Bloom in our souls for the brave and the true.

Cover them over—yes, cover them over—
Parent and husband, and brother and lover;
Think of those away heroes of ours,
And cover them over with beautiful flowers.

Useful Hints.

Wash-leather gloves should be washed in clean suds, scarcely warm.

A large stone put in the middle of a barrel of meat is a good thing to keep it cool.

Indian meal should be kept in a cool place, and stirred open to the air once in a while.

Woolens should be washed in very hot suds and not rinsed. Lukewarm water shrinks them.

Tortoise shell and horn combs last much longer for having oil rubbed into them once in a while.

Silk pocket handkerchiefs, and deep blue factory cotton will not fade, if dipped in salt and water while new.

Do not wrap knives and forks in woolens. Wrap them in good, strong paper. Steel is injured by lying in woolens.

When ivory handled knives turn yellow, rub them with nice sand-paper or emery; it will take off all these spots and restore their whiteness.

Bottles that have been used for rosewater should be used for nothing else;
if scalded ever so much, they will kill the spirit of whatever is put in them.

A warming-pan full of coals, or a shovel of coals, held over varnished furniture will take out white spots.
Care should be taken not to hold the coals near enough to scorch the furniture.

Spirits of turpentine is good to take grease spots out of woollen clothes, to take spots of paint from mahogany furniture, and to cleanse white kid gloves. Cockroaches and all vermin have an aversion to spirits of turpentine.

Do not sweep carpets any oftener than is absolutely necessary. After dinner, sweep the crumbs into a dusting-pan with your hearth-brush; and, if you have been sewing, pick up the shreds by hand. A carpet can be kept very neat in this way, and a broom wears it very much.

It is a good plan to put new earthenware into cold water and let it heat gradually until it boils; then cool again Brown earthenware is a material that can be toughened in this way. A handful of rye or wheat bran thrown in while it is boiling will preserve the glaze so that it will not be destroyed by acids or salt.

Never iron flannels. Silk, or anything that has silk in it, should always be washed in water almost cold. Hot water turns silk yellow. It may be washed in suds made of nice white soap; but no soap should be put upon it. Avoid the use of hot irons in smoothing silk. Either rub the articles dry with a soft cloth, or put them between towels and press them with weights.

A Stepper.

Judge Nicholas Longworth, of Cincinnati, says the Turf, Field and Farm, of Boone County, Kentucky, quite a phenomenal young trotter. It is a beautifully bred in her two-year-old form, by Strader's Hasketon, and out of Topey, by Phil Sheridan, a good road mare that formerly belonged to Mr. J.
W. Fitzgerald. She never showed any marked inclination to trot until last August, when Colonel Graddy commenced to halter-break her. In this work he used a running horse and was surprised to find that the filly kept up a perfect trot as fast as the old blind horse could run. Since that time she has been handled with more care, and gives promise of being another "Maud S."

The Sioux City Journal says: "A malicious story is afloat to the effect that an Eldora girl went back on her lover because he was so bow-legged she couldn't sit in his lap."

ABOUT WOMEN.

MARRIAGE is no uneven game. It is a tie.

HUSBAND money—the money paid a baby's nurse.

"The worst female companion for a young man," Bet.

"AW! I have given unto thee," said
the shoemaker to his girl.

All good wives ought to like Boston, because it is such a hub.

SOME of the Washington society
belle has organized a cooking club.

The fashion in England, set by Lord
Carrington, is, for afternoon marriages.

"THERE'S music in the heir," says Jones. Jones has a bran-new baby in his house.

It is said that house-cleaning is like going through a tunnel at night, you never know when you are through.

"ANONYMOUS articles will receive no attention," the editor remarked when a baby was found at his front door.

NOTHING perplexes a married man more than to find his wife using his bachelor cigar-case to keep her hairpins in.

"WHAT were the worst results of the late civil war?" cried a Democratic orator. "Widows!" shouted Jones, who had married one.

THE proper time for a girl to marry is after she has counted up her cash and finds that she can support herself in case her husband turns politician.

SAYS Giles, "My wife and I are two yet." "Faith I know not why, sir," quoth Jack, "You're ten if I think correctly—she is one and you are a cipher."

AN English writer says in his advice to young married women, that their mother Eve married a gardener. It might be added that the gardener, in consequence of his match, lost his situation.

In Boston, a courageous girl about to marry a comparatively poor young man, has requested her dear young friends not to make her any wedding presents, as she may not be able to reciprocate in the future.

A WOMAN has received ten thousand dollars for an invention which dead-ens the noise of the New York elevated railway. Now, if she will invent a device that will deaden the noise of a scolding wife, it will be worth millions.

It is said that a young lady who has a relative of any importance in Washington, finds it difficult to slip into the matrimonial noose, she posts off to the nation's capital. She then gets a puff in the papers, goes to parties, &c., and before he knows it some poor fellow is sold.

A CERTAIN resident of North Adams, Mass., recently buried his wife, a woman of unusual size, and a few days after the sad event a neighbor attempted a little in the consolatory line by remarking: "Well, Mr., you have met with a heavy loss." "Yes," replied the mourner, "with a sigh, 'she weighed 400 pounds.'"

"YOUR husband will be coming home tired and cold," said a prudent lady who was entertaining a neighbor one cold night last week; "had not you better run in and look at your fires for a moment?" "Oh, I'll make it hot enough for him if he don't bring the new hat I selected on Eighth street yesterday," was the brisk reply.

A FAMILY is like unto an equipage, says the Court Journal, and this is the explanation: First the father, the draught horse; next the boys, the wheels; for they are always running around; then the girls, the hubs, they are surrounded by fellows. The baby occupieds the lap-board, and the mother—well, what's a wagon without a tongue, anyhow?

The wife of a printer in New Haven has applied for a divorce, on the ground that her husband has no style about him; he won't brace up, has no dash, cuts no figure, has no point, lives up to no rule, is of a bad form and bad make-up, isn't a man of letters or up to the period, is a poor type of the genius, is out of quoin, and couldn't impose on her any longer.

INSTANCES of marriage resulting from correspondence between strangers are frequently read of, but the Chicago Tribune tells a different story about a pair who, after exchanging letters, met by appointment in that city: "The surprise with which she discovered that he, instead of being 27, tall, dark and aristocratic, was 46,
stumpy, red-headed, fat and bow-legged,
was only equalled by the rapturous amazement with which he discovered that she, instead of being willowy of figure, just 18, with warm golden hair, an opalescent complexion and blue eyes like limpid lakes, was six feet one if she was an inch, 52 if she was a day, weighing 300 pounds if an ounce, and with no warm yellow or any other hair of her own."

A CONDUCTOR on one of the Iowa trains which left Council Bluffs for Chicago, recently ran across a "live corpse" on board his train. When he approached the passenger for his ticket the fellow shoved one at him which he had procured at a "scalper's" office.

The conductor, while scrutinizing the tickets closely, discovered the word
"corpse" written across the face of the pasteboard. He looked at the "corpse" in the seat and remarked that he was a pretty lively looking dead man, and that if he was going to ride on such tickets he would suggest that he get inside a box and be transferred in the manner "corpses" usually are.

THE LOUISVILLE COMMERCIAL.
LEADING REPUBLICAN PAPER
IN THE SOUTH.

THE LOUISVILLE COMMERCIAL is now about to enter upon its tenth year. It will advocate in future, as it has in the past, the cardinal Republican doctrine: equal rights under the law to all men; devotion to the union of the States; the honorable discharge of national obligations; the growth of friendly relations among all people of all countries. While staunchly adhering to the Republican party, it will aim to be fair and just in its criticisms on public men and measures, not withholding blame from its own party when deserved, or praise from its opponents when they are entitled to it.

THE DAILY COMMERCIAL has the full telegraphic dispatches of the Associated Press, and gives a complete record of current events. THE WEEKLY COMMERCIAL is a large nine-column paper, with few advertisements, especially edited to make it acceptable as a family newspaper. The terms given below for the Commercial to be in both editions, the CHEAPEST PAPER IN THE WEST.

ATTER DARK.

When twilight gathers in her shawl,
And whistling swallows skim and hum,
The children, turning homeward, leave
His place under the stars the moon.

And through the melancholy eyes
The strange drops in the milk-white bloom.

Delights that go and come Through sorrow in the falling dew,
Like waves that were a wreath of loam
The darker that the waters grow,
Flow round my solitary home.

At evening, when the stars are few,
So, sad and sweet as bridal tears,
For broken homes, to see withdrawn
The child we love, have gone the years.

We elbowed the frosty hills and saw Descend on all the frozen mires
The sunlight breaking through the thaw.

Like one who, in the driving snow,
When all the world around him lies dim,
Hears far off voices, faint and low,
I hear the loved of long ago
Singing among the aspen.

And as the soft, descending light
Falls, shadowing into dusty red,
I think how beautiful the night
With gathering stars is overspread,
Like seeds of many an old belief
Through shames of sorrow harvested.
Harper's Magazine.

The Dead Speak.

I stand alone in the midst of the great city of the dead. Silence profound reigns on every hand, disturbed only by the hollow moaning of the wind among the tombs and monuments of departed ages. Around me, on every hand, lie sweetly sleeping in the cold embrace of Mother Earth the rich, the poor, the high, the low, the great, the small, the wise, the foolish, the philosopher, the statesman, the king and vassal—all classes of mankind on one common level, all sleeping the long sleep of death.

A feeling of deep solemnity falls upon my spirit as I thus listless wander through this silent abode of death. Here are the once busy nations of earth. Their labors are ended; they have fulfilled their mission. They have left the busy arena of life and lain down to rest, while others have taken their places on the stage of action.

Thus I muse upon and contemplate the scene before me, and reflect upon the hour when I too must lie down to rest with them. I think in my reverie of the mighty nations that have existed in ages past—of the warriors, statesmen and philosophers. I stand and gaze upon the monuments of the dead, and in my reverie I ask myself, Where are they whose dust moldered under these marble piles? And from the depths of the tombs echo answers, Where are they? they were, but yet are not.

While I thus linger and muse, in my imagination I seem to hear a confused whisper of voices, all speaking in audible tones from the abodes of the dead. I turn about and listen, and from the mounds of antiquity comes the voice of Paul proclaiming the good tidings of salvation from sin; a dying word, and shedding light through the darkness of the tomb, cheering the weary Christian through this wilderness. He, with Peter, John, James, Matthew and the Apostles, have been gone from earth for nearly eighteen hundred years, yet they have been speaking, through their writings, to every generation down to the present, and will continue to fill the hearts of listening thousands with the heavenly rapture so long as time shall last. But way dwell on this point. Go back even to the Garden of Eden—to Adam and Eve, the ancestors of the human family. To-day they are speaking in every sin, every sorrow, every woe and evil.

Single Life.

Why should not single women be as happy as single men? We rarely meet an unhappy old bachelor, and seldom a lonely or discontented old maid is numerous. The mere fact of remaining single need not ruin a whole life. Most elderly single men have had once some romance, some absorbing love or crushing sorrow, that has caused them to remain single. But men know well enough that the mere act of metaphorically shaking one's self and doggedly setting to any task that is available cures the heartache and is the best mode of turning tribulation into rejoicing. The poor curate far away from lodgings; the sailor far away from home and the pretty, tarted face he left behind him; the struggling literary hack, to whom a wife and children mean starvation—one and all have had their golden dreams, their unattainable ideal; none the less golden or the less ideal because it was never reached. Such hopes serve to cheer men on and to brighten the dull round of daily routine; or if the prospect of marriage had to be abandoned, or the loved mistress prove false, still life has to be borne, and one more unmet goal is added to the number. There is a place for everything in nature. Women are gradually themselves finding scope for their faculties and fresh outlets for their activity. They can be very happy if, abjuring enjoyment for themselves, they throw all their sympathy into the lives of others. From the serene heights of a looker-on, the single woman shares the pains and comforts of the woe-stricken, the heart-stricken and the cheering. Independence, too, has a great charm. The single person may roam where he lists—may range to the end of the earth without fear of having of heart-strings tugged at, or feeling himself dragged back by family ties and duties. For him there are no harrowing death-bed, no bitter watchings and anxieties, no agonizing fear of ruin for the sake of those cherished ones dependent on him. Calm and confident, he knows that fate can not harm him; for it is only through our affections that we are vulnerable. He knows what he has surrendered, but he does not regret it. His privations have been keenly felt, but they have brought him a great possession—the peace of contentment; an abiding and satisfying joy.

In Memoriam.

In memory of Past Grand J. J. Hoffman, of Walton Lodge No. 183, I. O. O. F., who died Feb. 21, 1879.

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Great Parent, the giver of only good, to remove from our midst our worthy brother J. J. Hoffman, who, though young in years, by his nobleness of soul and generous principles, had won for himself the respect and esteem of all who knew him, being ever ready to offer aid and sympathy to the needy and distressed. While he bowed in humble submission to the dispensation of the Great Controller of events, we can not but express the regret peculiar to our nature, in view of the decree by which we have been deprived of the society and friendship of one so beloved and esteemed. In his death the Order has lost a loved and noble member and his widow a loving, faithful and kind husband. Be it therefore

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt sympathies to the wife of our beloved brother in this, her deepest affliction and saddest bereavement, and that we sympathize with her in the loss of her beloved, whom she will never more look upon in life—who shared with her in prosperity or adversity her joys and sorrows through the journey of his life. Although her heart be bowed down in grief, we would cheer her with words of consolation and kindness, and pray that her days may be days of joy and happiness.

Resolved, That we extend to the sister and friends of our deceased brother our kind sympathy in their bereavement, and assure them that, while we bury his frailties, his virtues will exist in memory as a brilliant star to guide our erring feet to the haven of rest.

Resolved, That the foregoing preamble and resolutions be spread in full on the minutes of the Lodge, and that a duly certified copy be sent to the widow and sister of the deceased, with the seal of the Lodge attached. Also, that a copy be sent to the Commonweal and Boone County Recorder for publication.

G. L. EDWARDS,
S. W. ARNOLD,
Committee.

JUDGE ALEXANDER RIVES, of the United States Court for the Western District of Virginia, has been causing much excitement in that State by a charge delivered to the grand jury. His ruling was in effect that whenever a jury of a State court in criminal cases, failed to have colored members upon it, that fact raised a presumption of a discrimination against a class of citizens because of race, color or previous condition of servitude; and was, therefore, in violation of the laws of the United States. Under this ruling five County Judges have been indicted at Danville, Virginia, and it is thought more indictments will be found. The Legislature at once passed a preamble and resolutions providing for proper steps to carry the proceedings before the Supreme Court, and requesting the Congressional delegation of the State to move for a committee in Congress to inquire whether the Judge "has not been, and is not now, usurping Judicial power for the purpose of bringing about unnecessary conflicts between the State and Federal authorities." It has been but a short time since the same Judge ordered the release of two negroes convicted of criminal offenses by a State court, because there were no colored jurors on the jury that convicted them. Steps were taken by the State authorities to get those proceedings before the Supreme Court also, and we believe the matter has not yet been decided. Altogether Judge Rives has managed to make himself particularly obnoxious to the people of Virginia since the war. Though the family to which he belongs is one of the oldest in the State, and has been fruitful of men of learning and character, this representative of the honored name is, perhaps, more odious to the people than any carpet-bagger on the bench or off it.—Age.

Longevity the Result of Care.

The fact that the late Richard Henry Dana was regarded as an invalid until he had reached fifty, and yet outlived all his contemporaries, is not so uncommon as it appears. The opinion that it is usually the healthful, robust men who attain longevity, while it is prevalent, is not correct. Many of our citizens are now over seventy, and likely to last much longer, are not and never have been vigorous of body. They have been, on the contrary, delicate from childhood, and kept themselves in active life by prudence and the excellent care they take of themselves. Peter Cooper is an excellent example. He was pum at his birth, and has continued more or less feeble nevertheless, he has engaged in various enterprises; has created from nothing a large fortune; has been a most generous benefactor to his native city; and will have completed, on the 12th inst., his eighty-eighth year. The persons who go their graves at forty and fifty have frequently had any amount of physical stamina, and have depended on it so entirely as to neglect all hygienic laws and disregard anything like discretion. There is a certain arrogance of health which ruins health by excess of confidence. Men of this sort are persuaded they can endure anything and everything, and acting on their persuasion, they break down suddenly and unexpectedly, and slip out of existence. The semi-invalid or invalid, on the other hand, seldom incurs any risk. He guards himself at every point; he sees where danger is, and sedulously avoids it. His condition has rendered him heedful, heedfulness has grown into unchangeable and unchangeable habit. Ease of circumstances also contributes greatly to longevity where a man either has simple tastes, or is judicious in his mode of living. Adversity to the accepted notion, poverty is rarely good for anybody; for it entails not only absence of comfort, but constant friction and endless worry. Other things being equal, the rich long survive the indigent.

Before Marriage.

Lovers' quarrels arise from different causes; sometimes from mere intensity of affection making undue exactions, and at others from causes which, properly understood and appreciated, would warn the parties of the impossibility of their ever living happily together.

For instance, a young man who is engaged finds his affianced very jealous. Whenever they meet other ladies in society, she treats him with great coolness. This chills his ardor and makes him discontented; so much so that he is in doubt about marrying her at all. He has, in fact, come to the conclusion that if he believed she would treat him after marriage in the same way she does now, he would never marry her.

As a general proposition, it may be laid down that persons will not change essentially after marriage. A belief that they would has been the cause of countless unhappy marriages. They will be just about the same after as before, and, if anything, a little more likely to give way to strong natural propensities or peculiarities of temper.

If you were not to marry a young woman, provided you believe she would continue to be as she now is, without any very marked change in her disposition, then you do a very perilous thing to marry her at all.

The same rule, on the other hand, applies to the young men. Many and many a girl has made a shipwreck of her happiness for life by marrying a young man in the confidence that, after marrying, she would wield such an influence over him as to reform his wild habits. She finds her influence diminished, rather than increased, after they are married, and disappointments, disagreements and misery necessarily follow. Many a one with whom, without any change of character, you are not satisfied.

How National Banks Were Started.

An association of gentlemen in an Eastern State raised $300,000 in currency. They went to the office of the Register of the Treasury and exchanged their currency for three hundred thousand dollars in six per cent. gold-bearing bonds. Then they went to the office of the Controller of the Currency, in the same building, and organized a national bank—deposited their $300,000 in bonds, and received for their bank $250,000 in national currency. They had let the government have $300,000 in currency more than they received for banking purposes, and had on deposit $300,000, on which they received as interest from the government $18,000 a year in gold (and exempt from taxation). This was pretty good financing for this bank to receive $18,000 a year in gold on the $300,000 in currency which they had just loaned to the government. But this is not the whole story. They had their bank made a public deposit. They soon discovered that there was scarcely ever less than a million dollars of government money deposited within their vaults. They did not like to see this vast sum lie idle. They therefore took $1,000,000 of this government money and bought $1,000,000 of fifty-two bonds with it. In other words, they loaned $1,000,000 of the government's own money to the government, and deposited the bonds received in the vaults of their bank, on which they drew from the same government $600,000 a year in gold interest. Thus for their $300,000 a year in currency which they originally loaned the government, they receive annually in all $78,000 in gold.

It must be eminently right and good to rise early, because it is so inhumanly hard to do it.

The Mince Pie—A Temperance Lecture.
(Old City Derrick.)

My friends, there is another rock I wish all to guard against. It is hidden by the still summer sea, but upon it many a human bark has split. I refer to the mince pie. Yes, my hearers, the mince pie is a rock that has brought thousands to watery graves—or not to watery graves, exactly, but—you understand what I mean. The mince pie is the curse of the land. It is alluring your youth from the path of sobriety and virtue, and leading them down to ruin. It begets an appetite for strong drink that sweeps everything before it. Look not upon the accused thing. Shun it as you would a viper. Sit on it; trample it under your feet, as it were.

I once knew a brilliant young man, loved and courted by all who knew him. His is the story of thousands. This young man's aunt could make a mince pie till you couldn't rest, and her art led him to destruction. That insatiable monster! At first he ate lightly of the damning food; then, as his appetite grew by what he fed upon, he ate deeper and deeper, until after every meal he would sink into a heavy sleep, only to awake with a head bigger than Daniel Webster's. He would chew cloves and cardamom seeds for hours, and yet you could smell his breath across the biggest county in the State. He saw that he was becoming a slave to the accursed pie. He was already a slave to strong pie; he was already a slave to strong pie; he was already a slave to strong pie;

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL,
Editor and Proprietor.

BURLINGTON, KY., MARCH 20.

A Call for a Mass Convention.
There will be a mass meeting of the Democratic party of Boone County, held in the Court-house in Burlington, on Monday, April 7th, 1879, at one o'clock, p. m., for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate to represent the county in the next Legislature of Kentucky. R. K. Ewing, Chairman Dem. Ex. Com.

The price of hogs was inclined to decline, last week.

Last Monday was a bad day for the celebration of St. Patrick's day.

CARROLL COUNTY wants a slice off Owen County, but the Owen News-enters its protest.

The accomplice of the negro Washington, who was hung in Louisville on the 21st of last month, has been tried and sentenced to be hung.

This snow-shoveler was out in full force Monday morning. This business had been abandoned for the more profitable labor of preparing gardens.

CONGRESS is in session again, and there is no telling how long it will take to dispose of the business of the special session. Each party charges the other with bringing about the extra session.

On the fifth of next month Robertson and Nicholas Counties choose, by primary election, a Democratic candidate to represent them in the next Legislature.

We are in receipt of a copy of the Clay County (Kansas) Dispatch, which has just completed its sixth year. The Dispatch devotes its entire dimensions to a puff of Clay County to which it does ample justice.

An exchange flatters itself that the use of silver money will materially assist in doing away with the credit system, from the fact that silver is so cumbersome that a person is glad to pay it out as soon as received.

The United States Senate is composed of forty-two Democrats, thirty-three Republicans and one Independent, while in the House there are one hundred and forty-eight Democrats, one hundred and twenty-nine Republicans and ten Flamians.

Tus Flemingburg Times speaks out in meeting and says, Kentucky would be acting with better judgment if she would ask Congress to appropriate a few million dollars to form a permanent public school fund, rather than to be asking for it to improve the navigation of streams which do not have water enough to float a light draught duck nine or ten months in the year.

The next General Assembly of this State will be called upon to consider a proposition to enlarge the Penitentiary, or to establish a branch prison, at some suitable point in the State. The present prison buildings at Frankfort are not large enough for the confinement of the prisoners now serving out their sentences. The number of convicts is so much excess of the capacity of the building that two men are often lodged in the cells originally intended for but one prisoner. The proposition to erect a branch Penitentiary appears to be the more popular just now, and the Legislature will be called upon to consider the matter soon after it meets next winter.

Below we give the instructed vote for candidates for State offices:

The Nelson Record is distressed about the rapidly increasing of delinquent taxpayers in Nelson County, and suggests that when the constitution is changed that a clause be inserted to prevent any man from voting who has not paid his poll-tax six months beforehand.

The successful farmer has his plans for the coming season matured, and is now anxious to commence putting them into execution. Such farmers know that crops their lands are adapted to the best paying of those will they turn their attention.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Fluorine.
A protracted meeting was held at the M. R. Church during the past week, and conducted by Rev. Shaw. No additions. A little daughter of Mr. Lewis Yager, who has apparently been at death's door the past three weeks, with dropsy superinduced by scarlet fever, is still in a semi-unconscious state.

A little son of Rev. Reed died at Rev. Mr. Buffington's, Sunday.

Dr. Gene Rice returned from New York last Saturday, where he has been attending Medical Congress. He graduated with high honors, and is going to bang out his shingle in connection with Dr. H. S. Newton, of Cincinnati.

The Sheriff of Grant County advertised 23 farms for sale last court day for delinquent taxes. The Sheriff of this county says that he will have 60 for sale if the owners don't pay up their taxes before the first of April.

Did the frost kill the fruit, Monday night? is a fruitful subject for discussion.

Plattsburg.

Once more to the breach!
Our town and surrounding country are full of stirring events.

Miller ten schools have just completed the wooden bridge across Ashby Fork for Professor Dressman, but for the benefit of Professor O. Snyder, who is such a stickler for facts, the dimensions will be omitted. Last Saturday afternoon, several of the young men chopped wood for Mr. Henry Sullivan, and as a remuneration for their services they were permitted to hold sweet communion with their girlfriends until a late hour, when all separated, thinking it was good to be there.

There has been considerable sickness throughout this section for the last month. Mrs. Elizabeth Crisler, has pneumonia; attending physician, Dr. R. H. Crisler. Rev. John Crisler, died last Thursday. Will some one who is well versed in etiquette please answer the following question: A public exhibition of his hand should the hat be taken off on entering a room? Mr. Editor, which say you? (The right hand, of course.)

Miss Lisa Scriver, of Carroll, is visiting in this neighborhood. Mr. A. J. Worth has bid adieu to his old friends in Boone, and gone West to grow up with the country.

Hebron.
Mr. Casey has not determined, as yet, on going to Nova Scotia this spring.

Wm. (Hail Columbia) Rome will give a public exhibition of his hand should the hat be taken off on entering a room? Mr. Editor, which say you? (The right hand, of course.)

Brother Barnett on last Lord's day gave the church a pretty strong hint that the parsonage needs a new roof. He said, "I understand that there will be another toll-gate put up on the road somewhere between Constance and Ovington. Such is life."

It has been a noticeable fact that yearling Democrats won't work to the wheel or under the saddle; they will kick. They work admirably in the lead.

Mr. Alce Clure has a jar of petrified preserves which has been on hand 22 years. If Mr. Clure will send them over to Hebron, we'll guarantee they will not last another year.

Our Sunday newspaper man has only missed once since he commenced on the route. Tom, you must quit shoving people's eyes in time of preaching or somebody will pull the meeting-house down on you.

Wm. Woods, near this place, received the sad intelligence of the death of his father, Joseph Woods, of Delphi, who died Tuesday, the 11th, at 9 o'clock p. m., of inflammation of the brain. His remains will be deposited for the present in the vault at Spring Grove Cemetery.

It is rumored that Dr. J. J. Dulancy, of Covington, has bought, or will buy, the fine manor and grounds of Alonso Gaines, of Hebron. After the Doctor gets settled in Hebron, he will cost a pretty good sum to buy his possessions, including his practice and influence.

It took two days to divide the lands of C. Quick, Esq., of Hebron, and Mr. J. R. Rice, Surveyor. Gaines Commissioned by M. S. Rice, Surveyor. The land was divided into six lots, each being agreed to pay to the widow yearly $25, making $150 a year for her support, the giving up her dower. Later, there has been some kicking in the barns, and the work has to be done over. Oh, Moses!

houses here that can be used for that purpose. We are passing away, as the tramp said.

Petersburg.
The material state of affairs is decidedly changed since the last report from this signal station. Weather bright and clear, no rain, no fog, farmers all whistling the new Granger tunes, and the earth is rapidly being turned bottom side up with care.

The division of the Norris estate has suddenly developed several new farmers, and the wily edge in these quarters is especially remarkable. It is hoped, and confidently predicted, that the long, balmy days and short nights of July and August will wear this cumbersome wedge away, particularly with our new Justice of the Peace, Seaton Early, Esq.

We have a grand new land, first quality horse, as an indispensable luxury in our town now, and there is considerable rivalry among our most ambitious citizens to be the first to ride in it.

Mr. Harry Jones and his wife, who have been spending a month or two at Mr. John Norris residence, left for their home in Versailles, Ind., last Saturday. Mr. Jones has been assisting Mr. Norris in the settlement of his father's estate.

Prof. Frick is thoroughly established here, and now the piano, organs, accordions, Jew-harps, don't get a rest from morning until night.

This end of the Petersburg and Burlington turnpike looks like a long finger with a big point, and is a six-inch cut of gravel and sand twelve feet wide, with wings at irregular intervals on the hills, all the way from Capt. Terrill's residence to the corner of the limit.

New residences, at an expense varying from six bits to two dollars and a half, are being sprung up on the new Woolper pike, and the big wagon load of dry goods boxes had been sprinkled along the sides of the road.

Capt. Dressman has his full force at work making the cut and fill at the Ashby Fork bridge, and from "Mr. Drivings," a new wagon, the turnout presents a picturesque appearance.

The yeast factory here works four hands. Miller ten schools have just completed the wooden bridge across Ashby Fork for Professor Dressman, but for the benefit of Professor O. Snyder, who is such a stickler for facts, the dimensions will be omitted. having the champion female farmer of the county, if not of the State, in the person of Miss J. S. Dinmore, who owns and has under her immediate personal control near 400 acres of land, most of which she has in cultivation and fine condition. Her fields and fences, as well as her orchards and vineyards, are models of their kind. She superintends and directs all the work on and about her farm.

Our string band has disbanded for the season, and Dandy Tom has moved to his farm on Middle Creek, where he and Storke are turning the seed.

Personal.—Mrs. Harvey Marshall, of Waterloo, has been very sick the past few days, but is now somewhat better. She has been confined to her bed near two months.

Mr. J. W. Kile is suffering with a severe cold on his chin. Mr. Scott Kile is home again from Louisville. He is somewhat improved in health.

Hog Cholera Cured.
Send $2 to S. McGuffin, Rising Sun, Ind., and get a Recipe for the Remedy.

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

This is to certify that I, Ferdinand Bee, bought of S. McGuffin the knowledge to cure cholera October 2, 1877. To that date I had lost 4 six-month-old pigs and three old sows. When I left home nine more were sick and two were not able to walk. I commenced giving the medicine, and in one week I had them all cured. I now have 84 fat hogs, well and hearty, and 41 pigs and sows, which are all well, and have lost none since I got the cure, and this is Jan. 1, 1878. I have raised hogs for the last thirty years, and several years I lost all I had by cholera. Now I know I have a sure cure, and do testify that it will cure as S. McGuffin represents, and has saved me, I had 108 fat hogs, at 2 cents per pound, $756, and 47 sows, $2 per head, $94, a clear saving of $850. My neighbors are still losing hogs with the cholera, and I give this notice for their benefit.

FERDINAND BEE.
Booxe Co, Ky., Jan. 1, 1878.

On the 26th of October, 1877, I purchased S. McGuffin's Hog Cholera Cure. Up to that time I had lost 80 hogs that would average 100 pounds, and 12 fat hogs. After I got the Cure I lost one large fat hog. I know it to be a good PREVENTIVE for Hog Cholera.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS.

Under the law there is 5 per cent. added to all unpaid taxes on the 1st day of April of each year for the preceding year, and the Auditor is required at the first Court of competent jurisdiction (which is the Franklin Circuit Court, held in June) to take judgment against all delinquent taxpayers. Therefore, after the 1st day of April, 1878, there will be 5 per cent. added to all unpaid taxes for previous years, and between the 1st day of April and the June term of the Franklin Circuit Court I will proceed to levy and sell property to raise the unpaid taxes, with the 5 per cent. added, in order to save myself from the cost and humiliation of having judgment taken against me in said Court.

On last Monday evening, Mr. Arthur Blythe received a letter from Mr. James M. Preston who has been visiting friends near Lexington for some months, and from which the following is an extract:

"When I wrote you last, I thought I would be at home in Burlington by the 20th of this month (March). I can not get there, as I am almost entirely confined to my bed. I sit up about four hours a day, and now think I shall die from home; so please tell the people farewell."

THE brute who outraged Mrs. Truesdell, back of Newport, Friday week, has received his just deserts at the hands of a Campbell County mob, which took him from the Newport jail last Sunday night, thence to the residence of Mrs. Truesdell, who identified him, which together with the confession of the crime he made when arrested, furnished the regulators with all the proof they desired to make out a case against him, whereupon they hung him to a limb within a few hundred yards of where he committed one of the foulest deeds known to the criminal calendar.

THE greatest floater in the known world, Paul Boyton, who is making a trip from the head waters of the Ohio to New Orleans, launched himself Cincinnati Tuesday afternoon, and commenced his lonely trip South.

HE stopped over at Cincinnati when he arrived there last week, and was received with considerable pomp. When he passes a town there is sure to be a stampede to the river to see him. He is advertising his life-saving rubber suit, the same he wore when he swam across the English Channel.

THE GRANGERS.

An Instructive Lecture by

Jas. D. Willis,

Who Indulges in Some

Sensible Talk,

And Charges the Responsibility for Official Corruption Upon the Farmers.

The following address was delivered before Petersburg Grange, No. 1,280,

by Jas. D. Willis, Esq., Saturday, February 22d, 1879:

Worthy Master, Ladies and Gentlemen: At a previous meeting, your induigence and good nature gave your attention to a few thoughts I had hastily prepared for what I conceived to be the good of the order; and you so far complimented my effort and good inteation as to request a rehearing today. My modesty will not permit me

to believe that they possess any extraordinary merit; yet, in all candor, I believe them to be true, and with cheerful submission yield to your demands.

Some remarks made on that occasion with regard to the education of farmers, especially young farmers, in all matters pertaining to their political, as well as domestic interests, have awakened a new train of thoughts, to which

I can not forbear giving expression to-

day. My modesty will not permit me

to believe that they possess any extraordinary merit; yet, in all candor, I believe them to be true, and with cheerful submission yield to your demands.

In the East, in almost every neighborhood, the farmers have established clubs whose meetings are held at each other's houses or at some central place, with their wives and children to spend the long winter evenings in social conversation and in the discussion of subjects pertaining to their welfare; and nowhere can a more intelligent, practical class of men and women be found than among the New England farmers.

Their school teachers, book agents,

lightning-rod men and demagogues

they send out West to enlighten our ignorance and to lighten our purse.

It is from this class that we mainly derive our opinions of the Yankee

Next!

This week we give you a solid paper.

Some nice spring weather again this week.

Mr. CHARLES CLORE has been dangerously sick for several days.

Called to condense our Neighborly Notes this week.

Notice the change in Snyder & Swetnam's advertisement, this week.

The docket for the approaching term of the Circuit Court is small.

The County Clerk has the work on the Commissioner's Book for 1870 well advanced.

The grand jury was in session one week and returned forty indictments, two of which were tried.

Mrs. REED and family have moved back to Burlington, where they resided several years since.

Wm. FOLEY, a young gentleman and an old citizen of the north part of the county, died last Monday.

The farmers grow restless under the protracted winter, and are anxious that spring should come and behave itself.

Our Kansas and St. Louis letters were unavoidably crowded out this week, but they will appear in the next issue.

Those who grumble most about the action of courts are those who have the least respect for courts—O. D. McManis.

If you think there is but little rending matter in this paper, just try copying it and you will soon discover your mistake.

On Monday last, Miss Mary A. Thompson commenced teaching school in the public school-house in this place.

W. M. CORNELL informs us he has sold his young cattle we spoke of last week, but will try to have another lot by April Court day.

In this issue will be found advertised the sale of the personal property of Wilson Harper; also a house and lot for rent by J. W. Davis, of Hebron.

Our last summer slanders have now developed into "sunshine," as they at present seek the brightest streaks of sunshiny at which to deposit their anatomies.

Last Monday night, quite a bright light was noticed west of town, and seemingly in the vicinity of Aurora, where it is thought there was a conflagration.

We are sorry to announce the death of Mr. H. P. Marshall, who died last Monday morning, having been a sufferer for several months from a lingering disease.

On the 22d inst., Mrs. A. M. House departed this life. Mr. House was both a Grand and Odd- Fellow, and his funeral, Sunday, was conducted by these organizations.

The Criminal Court was entitled to 12 days session, but the docket did not furnish it food enough for six days' steady labor. So much for the good morals of the county.

Our Peterburg correspondent notes the demise of Mr. Richard Parker, who was well and favorably known throughout the county, and whose death will be lamented by all.

Two germs of spring fever were not destroyed by the winter weather, and it threatens an early appearance this spring in Burlington unless some disinfect without delay.

One evening last week, Mr. H. J. Foster received a letter from an aunt who resides in Clark County, and in said letter was a check for $50 of which the lady made him a present.

I am tired of seeing my name used in connection with the Terrell trial and the Boone Criminal Court. Every little child in the country is writing squibs about it—O. D. McManis.

We understand the citizens of between Woolper and the Bellevue pike are stricken with the turnpike fever, which, it is to be hoped, will develop into something more than "turnpike colic."

AND now comes Professor Stephenson and challenges any school in the county to produce a class of ten, ages taken into consideration, that is as proficient in grammar as a class he has in his school.

We understand that the Grangers had a royal time at Mt. Pleasant Monday. A big crowd, an eloquent address by Mr. Whitehead, and an elegant and abundant feast is the way it was stated to us.

The committee appointed to obtain a site for the Universalist Church was surveying lots Tuesday, and the probability is they will decide on building on a lot immediately in front of Mr. A. G. Winston's residence.

Mr. A. COBLE, of Bellevue, was in to see us one day last week. He reports his mercantile business of last year as unprecedentedly good. A liberal use of printer's ink, this year, will carry your sales far beyond those of last year, friend Corbin. Try it.

We have just heard of quite a curiosity, somewhat in the shape of a chicken, and which made its appearance on this mundane sphere at Joseph D. Holsinger's, on Gunpowder. Our informant says it has four perfect feet and legs, besides another remarkable feature he could not describe. The fowl or quadruped, just as you may call it, is living and as lively as a cricket. Craddock, N. B.

On the 10th inst., Gabriel Haskins, colored, was tried before Judge Kendall and Gains at Burlington, charged with kidnapping as assault with intent to kill. Gabe was sentenced to jail and last week he was indicted, which was followed by a trial and conviction on Saturday last. Monday morning, just two weeks from the day of the examining trial, Gabe, under the vigilant watch of Deputy Sheriff Foster, started to the Penitentiary for the period of two years. Gabe was a poor devil.

Religious Items.

Next Sunday is an odd Sunday with the churches.

Two ministers preached a m. sermon in Burlington, Sunday. An unusual event.

We must have a church building, said the Universalists, and continued their committee on location and subscriptions, Sunday.

On the 30th Sunday in this month Elder J. P. Stephens will, at 10 a. m. and 3 p. m., preach in the school-house at the Florence X-Roads.

Transfers of Real Estate.

The following conveyances have been recorded in the County Clerk's office since our last report:

L. C. Morris to C. O. Roberts, 14 1/2 a. near Verona, $655.

Edward Green to John W. Rice, lots No. 10 and 11 in Bellevue, $325.

W. T. Grille to L. J. Hume, 29 a. near Verona, $900.

John R. Johnson to T. J. Griffith, 110 1/2 a. near Verona, $577 50.

Thomas A. Connelley to Joseph Riddell, 2 a. on Gunpowder, $900.

A view of the political race-course this week says for Governor, Blackburn is about to shut both his competitors out, he wanting but seventy-two more—secure his nomination the first ballot, and there are yet over three hundred delegates to be appointed, so you can set it down that Blackburn will be the next Governor.

Jones has pulled in ahead of Underwood to the extent of one vote.

For Auditor, Hewitt, in the last week, has made a big gain on his opponents, and now wants but one hundred and seventy-seven votes to secure his nomination on the first ballot.

The races for Lieutenant-Governor and Attorney-General are also about settled.

Personal Mention.

MISS BELLE SCOTT, of Petersburg, is the guest of Miss Lizzie Alloway.

For some days Mrs. Viola Grant has been from home visiting her relatives.

Miss KATE HALL has returned from a protracted visit to Cleveland, Ohio.

Misses KATE KEVILIN and SUE KYLE are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Geo. G. Hughes.

Mrs. S. W. CARPENTER, of Hebron, has been visiting friends in Burlington for some days.

MISS MATILDA ROGERS, of Bellevue, has been spending several days with her relatives here in town.

E. A. GULLICK, editor of the Carrollton Democrat, arrived at our office with a call while in town, Tuesday.

On last Sunday, Miss Amanda Jeffries, who taught the winter school at Normansville, returned home, her school being out.

The following letter, received from Hon. John G. Carlisle, dated at Washington, D. C. March 18th, is published in the Covington Commonwealth.

"Dear Sir—There are a number of persons in Kentucky who are entitled to three months' extra pay under the act of 1849, and the recent act of Congress, on account of services as soldiers or sailors in the war with Mexico. Many of these do not know what is necessary to be done in order to draw the money. The accounts of those who served in the army, whether as regulars or volunteers, will be settled by K. B. French, Secord Auditor, and the accounts of those who served in the navy will be settled by J. W. Taylor, Fourth Auditor. Each is to be addressed at Washington. Many of these claim their pay under the act of 1849, soon after the war, and have forgotten the fact; but, by writing to one or the other of these officers before named, stating the facts connected with their service, they will be answered, and will be able to proceed to collect what may be due them."

The event of the month in Burlington society circles was the wedding of Mr. Emmett Gullion, of Liberty Station, Carroll County, and Miss Mollie Campbell, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O. Campbell. The ceremony was performed by Rev. James A. Kirtley, in the presence of a number of the bride's relatives and intimate friends, at the residence of the bride's father, on Tuesday the 22d inst., at 1 o'clock p. m. After the ceremony, bride and groom, followed by the guests, repaired to the dining room, where there was in waiting a beautiful arranged-in-laden with all the delicacies of the season. It could suggest, and to which ample justice was done by the gay assembly. Directly after dinner the happy pair left for the city to take the first train for Carrollton.

Personal.—Miss John O. Campbell, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O. Campbell, a Kirtley, in the presence of a number of the bride's relatives and intimate friends, at the residence of the bride's father, on Tuesday the 22d inst., at 1 o'clock p. m. After the ceremony, bride and groom, followed by the guests, repaired to the dining room, where there was in waiting a beautiful arranged-in-laden with all the delicacies of the season. It could suggest, and to which ample justice was done by the gay assembly. Directly after dinner the happy pair left for the city to take the first train for Carrollton.

The bride looked quite handsome in a black rep-sil, elegantly made and trimmed, while the groom was attired in the usual black costume.

Among the guests were the groom's sister, Miss Maggie Gullion, and his brother, Mr. R. A. Gullion and lady.

Miss Frankie Campbell accompanied the bride party to Carrollton, where she will remain several days.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Owl College.

There has been considerable sickness in this locality, but those who were most ill are improving.

The weather we had last week reminded us of a real old fashioned winter.

The tobacco roots about here are nearly through sowing tobacco seed, and a large crop of the weed will be raised here this year.

Personal.—Miss Mary Connor, of Richmond, was visiting our friends, last week. Jesse Franks and wife, of Mount Zion, Grant County, were visiting Mr. John Powers, last Saturday and Sunday. W. D. Craven has rented Reuben Connor a lot of corn and tobacco land.

Beaver Lick.

Among others, at the wood-sawing at Jno. T. Underhill's, Thursday week, your correspondent noticed "Jo-Go," the inimitable pencil shaver for the Commonwealth.

The "boys" have been dodging Gen. Sleat, the worthy sheriff, for several days, but he believes he managed to march a few of them up to see you, or rather the Burlingtonites.

after elected; they mature schemes of plunder like the Credit Mobilier and the North Pacific Railroad; they fill the lobbies of Congress with their agents, who feed members with all the epicurean delicacies the city of Washington can afford; saturate them with liquor that in the simplicity of their home life they never dreamed of, until we can scarcely recognize the delicate, refined intellectual gentlemen we chose to represent in the plithoric, swaggering, sensual creatures they send back to us. Thank God there are some exceptions to the rule, for were it not so, there would be no hope for us; but such is the state to which our affairs are rapidly tending. The gold, the silver, the iron and the coal mines have their organizations for the same purpose. The whiskey men have their organizations and control Cabinet officers; the brokers have their associations; tobacco manufacturers and cigar-makers, their unions; pork-packers, their conventions; merchants, grocers, butchers, carpenters, bricklayers, plasterers, molders, weavers, spinners, and so on down, until you come to the farmer, have their associations; but, oh, poor devil, must go it alone. He has gone it alone and with the result? Reckoning upon the honorable nature of his calling; its high moral, and elevating character; the purity of its principles; his industry, and his strong arms and hands to secure him an elevated position in the ranks of men, he finds himself a mere camp-follower in the march to material prosperity, considered a bore by the upper-ten, and in politics a cipher a power for the more favored class. President James says in a last message to Congress, that one-half of the people of the United States are engaged in agricultural pursuits; that the value of their products reaches the inconceivable sum of $3,000,000,000 annually; that the exports of agricultural products during the past year amounted to $524,000,000, or, as the Secretary of the Treasury informs us, 77 per cent; more than three-fourths of the total exports from the United States. These are significant figures, and show the class to whom we are indebted for the balance of our favor. But to $27,314,234 in our favor. But the Secretary gives us additional information, still more interesting to the farmer. The total amount of revenue from all source for the past fiscal year was $257,768,878 70; of this sum, the amount received from Internal Revenue was $110,581,025 74, or nearly one-half of the total receipts of the government. To raise this sum, you are taxed on spirits and malt liquors manufactured directly of grain, and on tobacco $100,000,000, while the banks numbering 6,456 separate institutions, including every character of concerns that are a banking business, with a capital of $875,000,000, doing a business amounting to billions of dollars annually, are taxed to the pitiful tune of three and one-half million; almost the entire balance of revenue is derived from customs levied on articles of prime necessity, and you being the greatest consumers of these, have the most of that to pay also.

As to State taxation, I have no data by which to ascertain the proportion paid by the farmer, but we have every reason to believe that it is in about the same ratio with national taxation. During the late administration of Gov. Dix, in the State of New York, the ascertained value of real estate and personal property was about equal, while the taxes paid by real estate equal as 6 to 1 on personal property. Now this was in the great commercial and manufacturing State of New York, embracing the large cities of New York, Albany, Buffalo and Erie, containing the money centers of the Western World. Yet, real estate paid six times as much taxes as capital and every species of personality. A similar investigation in our own State would, no doubt, reveal a like state of affairs. Now, to what use are those vast sums of money applied? Not to pay off the national debt; not to the opening of and improving the navigation of our rivers; not to the removal of obstructions to trade and travel; not to developing the boundless resources of the country, but to maintain a standing army whose business it has been to arrest peaceable citizens; invade legislative halls, and to overthrow State governments. It is used to subsidize corporations; to foster monopolies; to corrupt the ballot-box, and to maintain the party in power by putting the money where it will do the most good. As an illustration: New England is solid for the party in power, and just the other day we paid Great Britain $5,500,000 to allow New England fishermen to catch fish along the coast of Canada. Most of this money was taken from the price of your tobacco and cotton. On the other hand, the South is solid against the party in power, and no sooner had its opponents been elected than a crowd of spies, prosecutors and false witnesses were enlisted to punish them, all paid with your money, and the Secretary of War appealed to Congress for permission to send the army—alike supported by you—in the wake of these upholders of the party in power. If these things are objected to, a cry is raised for a strong government, a proposition is made to refer to a commission of 5 to 7.

When these things are spoken of by farmers in the Grange, we are at once called to order by outsiders, who say it is not fit that we should talk about politics, but confine ourselves to pigs, poultry, potatoes and pumpkins; but for one, do not go to understand the object of our organization. We meet here specially to discuss matters connected with the successful prosecution of our occupation, and whatever subject has a bearing upon it is a legitimate matter for our consideration, whether it be politics or politics. However, when I speak of politics, I do not mean partisan discussion. In our proceedings here, we have no right to know Democrat or Republican, land money or greenbacker. The Grange party is our party, and all matters that promote the welfare of its members should be dear to our hearts, and not only subjects for discussion, but for our profoundest consideration. Let us be like the early New England settlers who, when the yehelard the Connecticut Valley, say that it was fertile and the fullness thereof is the farmer's. Resolved, Second, That the Grangers are farmers, and third, That we are Grangers. This is a syllogism which, if generally accepted and adhered to, no politician of party could confuse.

The farmers feed and indirectly clothe the nation; they fight the battles of the country; they pay the expenses of the government, and east a majority of the ballots that elect the officers who make and execute the laws. Then, why in the name of common sense should not they discuss, and, if necessary, dictate the policy they will have pursued, and the measures they will adopt. They are responsible for mislegislation, and for the perversion of the powers of government; because they leave the power to control both, and if they do not, it is their own fault. The currency question, the tariff, the patent laws, the question of subsidies to railroads and steamship lines, the disposition of the public debt are questions that more seriously and as immediately affect our interest, as the best time and manner of sowing wheat or planting corn; the best remedies for hog cholera, or the time of the moon in which to wear a calf.

Inasmuch as these are all questions immediately affecting the interest of the farmer, I would make them, not only the subjects for our consideration, but for our united and energetic action. If we are capable of self-government at all, we must be competent to prescribe the measures to be adopted by the government we have created.

But, it is urged that this course would convert the Grange into a political party, and destroy the organization. This assertion is without foundation; for we would ignore parties as now constituted, and not only in behalf of equality and the attainment of those rights now withheld, let us be thoroughly organized, presenting a compact, united body, representing millions of ballots in the polls; and there is no need of us becoming politicians in the common acceptance of the term, or partisans. It is only required for us to make our wishes known and politicians and parties will volunteer their services in our behalf, and beg for the privilege to become our tools and slaves. Every other class engaged in almost every other pursuit but for our united and energetic action in union and concentration of purpose, have found their greatest advantages and what ground is there to suppose that a similar course would not prove of equal advantage to the agricultural community. Let it be known, for instance, that we are, as a body, opposed to the patent laws as they now exist, and had determined to support no man for office, who would not use his influence for their repeal or modification. Every convention from county to national could adopt platforms embracing similar views. Representatives and Senators would wrangle for the privilege of introducing bills for their repeal or modification. The papers would be filled with interviews in which Hendricks, Blaine, Thurman, Conkling, Grant and a host of other leaders would express their astonishment that it was not universally known that the repeal or modification of the patent laws had always been the dearest object of their hearts, the end and aim of all their efforts. So would be with other questions affecting the welfare of the great agricultural population.

We have but to make our wishes known in an authoritative manner, coupled as it would be with the power to have them enforced, and they would be respected. As it is, we are not only without power, but a prey to all other classes. The capitalists have their Representatives in the Legislature and Congress to watch their interest, and gush in high flown language about national honor and credit, and with contemptuous phrases scorn the repudiating tendencies of the simple minded Granger, if he gives utterance to a cry of anguish at the immediate prospect of bankruptcy, and reduction of his family to want. The manufacturers have their Representatives, who are ever crying for more protection, and yet, truthfully boast that the finances of the country are in such a condition that they can compete successfully with the pauper labor of Europe, and undersell manufacturers of calico in Manchester itself. The iron and coal men of Pennsylvania; the whiskey men of Ohio and the West; the miners of California and Nevada have their representatives in Washington, ready to do their bidding, while we, more numerous and representing a greater amount of wealth than all of them combined, are without an advocate. Our very existence is forgotten, except when some member of Congress, in laughing over his cups at incidents occurring in his campaigning, calls to mind some enthusiastic Granger, who spent his money and voted for him, thinks he will show his gratitude and secure his lifelong allegiance by franking to him a spoonful of worthless, rotten seed.

We had a Representative once in Congress, and the very novelty of his position rendered him so popular that the people called him home to make him Governor of the great State of Indiana. All honor to J. D. Williams who in a corrupt age, maintained his integrity in Congress, and defended his class, unaided and alone defended his class, who scorned the sneer of his colleagues, and took pride in the cognomen Blue Jeans, bestowed upon him as a badge of contempt, not only for his dress, but to designate his connection with the proscribed class of farmers.

Worthy Master, my attention has been called to the fact that this is the 22d of February, the 147th anniversary of the birth of George Washington, our leader through the dark and bloody throes preceding our birth as a nation; whose fostering care preserved our infancy, and molded our youth to a vigorous manhood. Our assembling on this day is one of peculiar fitness, and we would be negligently, indeed, if we failed on this occasion to give our voice in the loud hosannas now ascending from the grateful hearts of millions of freemen. George Washington was not only the first President of the United States, but one of the first farmers of his day. While superintending his farm in Virginia, those principles of liberty and equality were implanted in his soul, that culminated in American freedom and prosperity. He was, in the best sense of the word, a Granger, and not only labored but finished his work on true Granger principles. His name is a household word through the breadth of the land, and we the cordially award to him his due meed of praise, because he was one of us in occupation, in sympathy and in the objects for which we are striving.

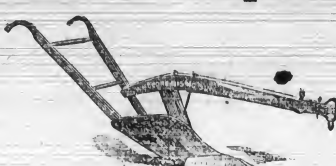

Worthy Master and Grangers, I have consumed more of your time than I intended when I commenced this address. The deep interest I feel in the subject must be my apology. In conclusion, allow me to humbly express the opinion that if we would maintain our organization, we must place before its members some object more radical, more far reaching, more important than has yet been presented to them; something that not only affects their interest, but which will require their united, patient effort to attain. In a free government all things are possible to a determined majority, and if there ever was a time in the history of our country when the united action of all the conservative powers were needed, it is now. A strong form of government, by which is meant the concentration of power in the hands of a few capitalists, is the hourly demand issued from the great cities; from corporations and money centers of the country. It rests with you, the farmers of the United States, to answer the demand. If a united answer is returned, it settles the question forever; but, if a divided and feeble response is made, the demand will not only be repeated and persisted in, but will be granted. Then will the brief, but bright and glorious day of American liberty be ended through the supineness and indifference of her great conservative agricultural population.

How to Avoid a Cold. The "Perriscope" says: "When a person begins to shiver, the blood is receding from the surface; congestion to a greater or less extent has taken place, and the patient has already taken cold, to be followed by a fever, inflammation of the lungs—neuritis, rheumatism, etc. All these evils can be avoided, and the cold expelled, by walking or some exercise that will produce a prompt and decided reaction in the system. The exercise should be sufficient to produce perspiration. If you are so situated that you can get a glass of hot water to drink, or a bath of hot water to sit in, or in every way assist nature in her efforts to remove the cold. This course followed, you need suffer but little from cold."

The Louisville Commercial says: "Jones and Underwood are running neck and neck, with their noses even, but the old Doctor is so far ahead of both that they couldn't even catch an infectious disease from his perspiring hide or reeking garments. The old Doctor means business this time. He has been fooling around the back doors of his party's conventions just as long as he proposes to stand it."

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, of March 10, published the sentiments and preferences of members of the Legislatures of Kansas, Wisconsin and Arkansas on the Presidential question. Grant is decidedly the strongest man among the Republicans, but the Democrats are divided between Tilden, Thurman and Hendricks, with perhaps a majority in favor of Tilden.

BURLINGTON, KY., APRIL 3.

A Call for a Mass Convention.

There will be a mass meeting of the Democratic party of Boone County, held in the Court-house in Burlington, on Monday, April 7th, 1879, at one o'clock, p. m., for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate to represent the county in the next Legislature of Kentucky. B. K. SLEET, Chairman Dem. Ex. Com.

Suppose Buford is convicted of murder, is it probable that he will take his case to the Court of Appeals?

You can find men who have known for ten years that Buford was crazy. Such fellows can always be found when necessary.

Buford is preparing for the insanity dodge which should be n. g. His case is one of as cold blooded work as has been done in Kentucky for a long time.

As will be seen by his card in another place, Governor Underwood has withdrawn from the gubernatorial contest. This is equivalent to a nomination for Blackburn even were he to have no more delegates instructed for him, because he will gather enough of Underwood's vote to make his nomination certain.

NEXT Monday is the day designated by the Democratic Executive Committee for the assembling of the Democracy of the county in mass convention to nominate a candidate to represent the county in the next General Assembly. So far it seems that the name of but one man will be presented to the meeting for indorsement.

The assassination of Judge John M. Elliott, a succinct account of which appears on the first page, spreads a pall of gloom over the entire State. Judge Elliott was well known in legal and political circles, and a man who had many personal friends. The cold blooded murder is without a parallel in the history of the State, and one which merits a rigorous punishment.

In Kansas, one day last week, a mob hung a negro man who was charged with having committed a rape, and after life was extinct the body was taken down and burned in a public street in town where the lynching was done. We mentioned this only to show that Kentucky is not the only State in which mobs are known, and neither is she in the lead as to cruel treatment of the victims of lynch law.

We have before us a copy of the Weekly Union, which was published in Washington City February 7th, 1856, and which was presented to us by Mr. Elliott Parker, who found it among some old papers which his father had carefully preserved. Among other things the Union contains an account of the memorable nine weeks' contest for the Speakership of the lower House in Congress, resulting in the election of N. P. Banks by a plurality vote, it being found impossible to elect a Speaker under the majority rule, so closely did each candidate's friends adhere to him. At that time Kentucky was represented by 5 Know-Nothings and four Democrats, John M. Elliott, who was murdered in Frankfort last week, being one of the latter. This paper also contains an account of the collision between Horace Greeley and Albert P. Rust, of Arkansas. The trouble was caused by a paragraph in the New York Tribune, and which severely criticised a resolution which Mr. Rust had introduced in Congress.

Below we give the instructed vote for candidates for State officers:

There are 107 delegates to appoint; 12 counties have appointed 112 and gave no instructions.

If all the money spent in this State in trying to secure election to office was put into the school fund, Kentucky public schools could be taught twelve months in the year.

Two or three men can band together in Cincinnati and murder a man and then cast the body in a furnace to be consumed by the flames, after which the murderers are arrested and one of them sent to the Penitentiary for a few years, and the Cincinnati papers say very little about the mild punishment administered or the enormity of the crime; but let a murder be committed in this State and the Cincinnati editors roll it under their editorial tongues as a sweet morsel, and write long articles in which they ridicule the whole State on account of the depravity of a few. Those who live in glass houses should not throw stones.

STATE NEWS.

—In Clark County a large crop of tobacco will be raised this season.

—The New Liberty correspondent to the Owen News says tobacco buyers are numerous in that section. Good tobacco land is renting for $20 per acre.

—The Owen News says J. P. Garvey has sued Judge Strother and County Attorney Settle, of Owen, for $20,000 damages for false imprisonment.

—Union Local: Gen. J. P. Nuckles has received another installment of the Kentucky war claim, amounting to $6,081.85, and paid it over to the Governor.

—Woodford Sun: On Thursday last, the 18th inst., Mrs. Jane Long, near Troy, in this county, celebrated her one hundredth year by a dinner to her children and great grandchildren.

—At Richmond, the jury in the murder case of Moody, for the killing of Burnam, after trying two days to make a verdict, agreed to disagree and were dismissed. Moody renewed his bond for his appearance at the next term of Court.

—Yeoman: If with $100,000 we can repair the present dams on the Kentucky river, and begin the structure of another new lock it will do more to revive the people of this section than any means of inspiration we have tried in the last quarter of a century.

—Glasgow Times: From a gentleman who has been traveling of late quite extensively in this and adjoining counties we hear that the tobacco crop of last year did not make one-half of a full average, and that when all the weed now on hand is prized and shipped, there will scarcely be over a third of a yield for the season past.

—Anderson News: A sad case was brought before Judge Posey Monday. Rev. Adolphus Montjoy, a young preacher of the Christian church, was tried on a charge of larceny and found to be of unsound mind, and sent to the Lexington asylum. Financial troubles and religious excitement are said to be the cause of his derangement.

—Owensboro Messenger: Some of the Daviess County distillers are now getting four gallons of whiskey from a bushel of corn. The real corn lands of Daviess County average 45 bushels to the acre, say, while the Daviess County drinker is gaged at about sixty drinks. At this rate our corn lands will yield 10,800 drinks to the acre, or about 2,000 drinks, which goes to show that after all there is lots of fun, as well as a deal of mischief in an acre of ground.

—Richmond Register: In a Commonwealth's case in the Circuit Court on Wednesday, Messrs. Chenault and Reed, two young attorneys at the bar, represented the defense, and undertook to clear their client by eloquent speeches of two hours' length. After they had taken their seats, the Commonwealth's Attorney, Capt. Adams, arose and, in response to the gentlemen's speeches, said: "Gentlemen of the jury, as General Lee said to General Hooker when the latter's army was about to cross the Rappahannock, 'that's too thin.' Handing the papers to the foreman of the jury, he resumed his seat, and in twenty minutes the jury returned a verdict of 'guilty, with imprisonment in jail for 6 months.'"

—Richmond Register: Some months ago, when Col. Cook and the negro Salie, of this county, and others from adjoining counties were arrested and taken to the United States Court at Louisville, charged with handling counterfeit money, Thomas J. Craw, of Jessamine, was among them. Last week his case came up before Judge Ballard, and the witnesses for the prosecution stated that at the time the spurious half dollar was said to have been passed Craw rode a black horse. Craw's witness, a small colored boy, stated that Craw rode a sorrel horse on that day. At this juncture the case rested until the colored boy could return to Jessamine and take the horse down as a witness. He was shipped from Lexington, arrived on time, entered the court-room, and, as he was a stunning big sorrel, won the case in about two minutes; and all came home.

—Robertson County Tribune: One of the most remarkable incidents that mark the history of the past is the return of the lost son of Amos Reeves, Esq., a citizen of Kenton town precinct. Twenty-six years ago, while Mr. Reeves resided on the Missouri river in the West, a little son only two years old turned up missing one day, and after instituting diligent search, and no traces of his whereabouts being found, the little fellow was given up as lost forever, the family supposing he had been drowned. Reeves and his family subsequently removed to Kentucky, and located in what was then Harrison County. Yesterday the missing link in the family chain made his appearance in the person of a large, well-developed, full-grown man, he having traveled from Detroit, Michigan, which was his last abiding place previous to his coming home. He says he was stolen and carried away by a tribe of Indians, who raised him, and with whom he remained till he was twenty years old, at which time he left them, and during the past eight years has been engaged searching for the country for his long lost parents.

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

This is to certify that I, Ferdinand Rue, bought S. McGuffin's Hog Cholera Cure, and lost 54 six-month-old pigs and three old cures. When I left home nine more were sick and two were not able to walk. I commenced giving the medicine, and in one week I had them all cured. I now have 84 fat hogs, well and hearty, and 47 pigs and shots, which are all well, and have lost none since I got the cure, and this is Jan. 1, 1878. I have raised hogs for the last thirty years, and several years I lost all by cholera. Now I know I have a sure cure, and do testify that it will cure as S. McGuffin represents, and has saved me, had I lost the 84 hogs, at 3 cents per pound, $760, and 47 shots, $2 per head, $94, a clear saving of $850. My neighbors are still losing hogs with the cholera, and I give this notice for their benefit. FERDINAND RUE.

Boone Co., Ky., Jan. 1, 1878.

Or the 6th day of October, 1877, I purchased S. McGuffin's Hog Cholera Cure. Up to that time I had lost 80 hogs that would average 100 pounds, and 12 fat hogs. After I got the Cure I lost one large fat hog. I know it to be a good PREVENTIVE for Hog Cholera. JAMES TAYLOR.

Cause of Unprofitable Farming.

The most vital question affecting the farmer is how to make farming profitable. Especially is this felt in the depressed condition of our markets at the present time, when produce of all kinds does not pay the cost of production. Below we give a condensed summary of the more prominent causes affecting the agricultural classes. We do not promise to present the readers of the Prairie Farmer all the causes affecting the successful outcome of the farm, but rather to point out the more important ones. We call particular attention to the following:

1. The enormous loss which many farmers sustain from the neglected condition of the manure pile.

2. From the exposure of farm machinery to the inclemency of the weather.

3. From the loss which is sustained in keeping more animals than the owners can properly provide food and shelter for.

4. From raising scrubby and indifferent animals, when good ones could be raised at the same cost and twice the profit.

5. From the loss of land than they can properly cultivate, thereby raising on two acres that which might be more profitably raised on one.

6. Making specialties of certain crops to the ultimate exhaustion of the soil.

7. From disposing of the crops in the condition in which they are raised instead of converting them into beef, pork or mutton.

8. In neglecting to properly attend to the details of a farm.

9. In not keeping a strict account of the transactions of the farm.

10. In not using proper judgment.

11. Purchasing provisions which should be raised at home.

12. In not having machinery enough to properly harvest and save the crop.

13. We believe that failure to make farming profitable may be traced to one or several of the above causes which a little study and forethought will obviate.

It will be apparent to every one who give the above causes due consideration, that the remedy for the unprofitable farming lies with the farmer.

Young Men, Listen!

Marry! Do it for forty good reasons. Have something to live for; keep yourself out of scrapes. Don't live just, musty old bachelors. Its bad for your health, worse for your morals, and for your beauty. Marry just as soon as you can make it convenient, and hurry all your matters into a marital shape. But when you marry don't mistake the face for the woman, or cash for character. Common sense is a rare virtue; better than greenbacks and gold or fashion. There are hundreds of just the right kind of girls here waiting for you. Don't pass by sound, practical sense in a woman, which is the touchstone to try her other qualities by, and become fascinated with and finally marry sick and cringing and greenbacks, in profusion. Secure strong practical sense. When you have that, all else will come. If your wife has intellect, she will grow to your way of thinking and make you grow to hers. A wife of this character, with womanly love in her heart, will find ways to make your love toward her grow as the years grow over both. But those women of strong common sense are never found where fashion insists upon dragging your females into a whirlpool, where there is idle gossip and little brain.

We know a dozen young men who stand looking after one young lady with a distinguished air and the reputation of a belle, and whose father has piles of money. While they are straining their eyes that way the pile of cash may tumble, and some gawdaw from the East will snatch away the glided toy. And all this time each has turned his back on an unobtrusive little damsel who was out out by nature to be his other half, and who is just that pleasant faced, placid tempered, lovable little creature who thinks enough of him to go with him to the end of the world and stand by and comfort him when he becomes gray-haired.

Young men, marry! Single in the world you are but half a man. The world to-day wants whole men. Patch up the other half and be happy. From this day resolve no longer to be solitary, moody, beer-drinking, pipe-smoking bachelors, of no sort of account to yourself and the community at large.

Making Lumber from Straw.

Mr. S. H. Hamilton, of Bushnell, Illinois, has discovered a process for making hard wood lumber out of common wheat straw, with all the effects of polish and finish which is obtainable on the hardest of black walnut and mahogany, at as little cost as clear white lumber can be manufactured for. The process of manufacture is explained by Mr. Hamilton in as follows: Ordinary straw-board, such as is manufactured at any paper mill, is used for the purpose. As many sheets are taken as are required to make the thickness of lumber desired. These sheets are passed through a chemical solution which thoroughly softens up the fiber and thoroughly saturates it. The whole is then pressed through a succession of rollers, dried and hardened during the passage, as well as polished, and comes out of the other end of the machine hard, dry lumber, ready for use. It is claimed that the chemical properties hardening in the fiber entirely prevent water soaking, and render the lumber combustible only in a very hot fire. The hardened finish on the outside also makes it impervious to water. The samples exhibited could hardly be told from hard-wood lumber, and in saving it the difference could not be detected. It is susceptible of very high polish, and samples of imitation of marble, mahogany, &c., were shown, which might deceive the most experienced eye. Not only does Mr. Hamilton claim a substitute for lumber in sash, doors and blinds and finishing stuff, but also a substitute for black walnut and other woods in the manufacturing of all kinds of fine furniture, coffins, etc., and also an excellent substitute for marble in marble-top tables, mantle pieces, bureaus, etc.

Protection Against Rust.

For farm implements of all kinds, having metal surfaces exposed, for knives and forks and other household apparatus, indeed, for all metals likely to be injured by oxidation or "rusting," we know of no simpler, more effective application than that furnished by the late Prof. Olmstead. He used it on air-pumps, telescopes and various other apparatus. Take any quantity of good lard, and to every half pound or so add of common resin an amount about equal to half the size of an egg, or less a little more or less is of no consequence. Melt them slowly together, stirring as they cool. Apply this with a cloth or otherwise, just enough to give a thin coating to the metal surface to be protected. It can be wiped off nearly clean from the surface where it will be undesirable, as in the case of knives and forks, etc. The resin prevents rancidity, and the mixture obviates a ready access of air and moisture. A fresh application may be needed when the coating is washed off by the friction of beating storms or otherwise. There was a talk of patenting this recipe at one time, but Prof. Olmstead decided to publish it for the general good.

To the North Pole by a Balloon.

Commander Cheyne, an experienced English naval officer, is making great efforts to get up an expedition to reach the North Pole by means of balloons. When the ship is beset in the ice pack, three balloons will be inflated and joined together by means of light ropes 60 feet long, thus forming a triangle. These balloons will have a lifting power of three tons, and will carry boat-cases, sledges, provisions, tents, ballast, &c. From calculations made, Commander Cheyne expects to drop within twenty miles of the North Pole, and should the wind be favorable for his return he will continue his aerial voyage and trust to good fortune to reach Russia, and descend wherever inhabitants may be seen.

Early Rising.

There is no time spent so stupidly as that which inconsiderate people pass in a morning, between sleeping and waking. He who is up may be at work or amusing himself; he who is asleep is receiving the refreshment necessary to fit him for action; but the hours spent in dozing and slumbering are wasted without either pleasure or profit. The sooner you leave your bed, the less frequently you will be confined to it.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

The tied of life—The married ones. The concurring here—The chirologist. The number of liquor dealers in Michigan is 3,899.

The wealth of Georgia is increasing at the rate of 40,000,000 per year.

A party of mounted tramps has gone into camp near Macon, Georgia.

A man with crooked legs can not be supremely happy, unless he owns an ulcer.

A Kentucky paper boasts of a society editor who "has no peer outside of the lunatic asylum."

Before committing matrimony, young man, join some good debating society and get your tongue in practice.

A new kind of ulcer has just been invented, with snow sheds all around the collar and a box tunnel down the back.

Suppose wearing the colored stockings does poison and cause the death of hundreds of women. Are not second marriages often happy?

An honorable member of the Wisconsin Legislature confidentially informs his fellow Senators that he "will keep the original origin of this bill."

"The only jokes women like to read are those which reflect ridicule on men." "Yes," says an exchange, "on taking up a paper a woman invariably turns to the marriage column."

In Rhode Island a man has walked twenty-five miles in four hours, twenty-two minutes and thirty-eight seconds, and the Boston post says he was somewhat hindered, too, by having to turn the corners of the State.

A widow intending to succeed her husband in the management of a hotel, advertised that "the hotel will be kept by the widow of the former landlord, Mr. Brown, who died last summer on a new and improved plan."

There is a talk of a new bell-punch to be put on a man's mouth to register the number of blinks he takes every day. It may lead to the reorganization of heads of families who come home full at night and have no market money in the morning.

PREScription FREE.

For the speedy cure of Scintillating Headaches, Neuralgia, and all other nervous disorders. Prepared by Dr. J. M. Grant, 101 West Sixth Street, Cincinnati, O.

WHAT MAKES A MAN?

Not numerous years, nor lengthened life. Not pretty children and a wife. Not palaces and chains and fancy rings. Not any such like trappings; Not pipe, cigar, nor bottle wine. Nor liberty with kings to dine. Nor coat, nor boots, nor yet a hat. A dandy waist, and a prim cravat. Nor all the world's wealth laid in store; Nor mister, reverend, sir, and doctor.

With titles that make many a fire. Nor ancient trove back to William. Who went from Normandy to kill. Nor Latin, Greek, nor Hebrew lore. Nor thousand volumes ramble o'er. Nor Judge's robe, nor mayor's mace. Nor towns that deck the royal race. These, all united, never can Avail to make a single man.

A truthful soul, a loving mind. Full of affection for its kind. A helper of the human race. A soul of beauty and of grace. A spirit firm, erect and free. That never basely bends the knee; That will not bear a feather's weight Of slavery's chain for small or great; That firmly speaks of God within; And never makes a league with sin; That snags the fetters despots make. And love for truth for its own sake; That worships God, and Him alone; That trembles at no tyrant's nod. A soul that fears no one but God. And that can smile in curse and ban. That is the soul that makes the man.

Look to your laurels and improve the school-house.

In Wisconsin they are discussing an educational qualification for the right to handle the ballot.

SOME localities in Kentucky are infected with the Kansas fever. It has recently made its appearance in Henry County.

THE Louisiana Constitutional Convention will be composed of 94 Democrats, 33 Republicans and 7 Fusionists and Nationals.

THE 23rd of this month is the time set by Judge McManis for a special term of the Franklin Criminal Court, for the trial of Buford for the murder of Judge Elliott.

TERRIBLE suffering is caused by the famine in Upper Egypt. People are reported to be starving in large numbers, while in many localities the survivors go about naked, digging for roots.

Good roads, good school-houses and good churches are three things a person generally wants to see in a county in which he expects to make his home. Boone could be greatly improved in all these respects.

It is the complaint of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat that Missouri, with a population of over two millions, has not a single college, outside of St. Louis, of even the third rank, after the standard of Eastern schools.

FROM estimates published in the Cincinnati Enquirer concerning the wheat and fruit crops of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, it appears that the wheat crop will be bounteous, and the prospect for apples and peaches is poor.

AN "International Normal Educational Conference" is to be held at the Thousand Islands Park from August 11 to the 16th inclusive. The addresses on educational matters will be given by teachers from this country and Canada.

We have heard it suggested that Frank Turner, the Grant County desperado, will be sent to this county for trial. Boone has been too lenient; hence her popularity when a fellow who is in a close place applies for a change of venue.

It is about time for another row with the Indians. These people have been comparatively at rest for some time. When the prairie grass commences to grow, the red men will become restless, and require Uncle Sam's fatherly attention.

THE times are getting better.—Ex. That is the way to talk. If everybody will commence talking after that fashion, the times will improve. Get the people to agree that the hard times are going away, and there is no estimating the great change in business that will be brought about.

In a few days the Democratic State ticket will be made up, and the contest turned from its present channel to that of opposing parties. This year we will have the Democrats, the Republicans and the Greenbackers presenting tickets for State officers. The latter, as a party, are almost entirely ignored in the canvass.

At a recent Concord, New Hampshire, election, many ladies voted for members of the Board of Education. They approached the ballot-box in groups of two, or three, or more, and perfect respect was shown to all by the interested crowd surrounding them. The ladies who voted included those of the highest social position in the city. Occasionally a man and wife were seen to walk arm-in-arm up to the box and vote together. Excellent order prevailed. Many men supported the women's ticket, and perhaps an equally large number of ladies voted against it.

Cheap Protection.

The profession and the public are rapidly coming to acknowledge the fact, that malaria is the most abundant source of disease, and to recognize in the fabled hydra of the ancients the typification of this manifold and protean poison.

In the antipodes and tomes we possess remedies which enable us to arrest or bring to a successful termination most of the malarial affections; but what the whole world needs, and what is certainly needed in this country, is some preventive for this malarial or some means for its destruction. The eucalyptus is said to possess the beginning power. The church of St. Paul, in the suburbs of Rome, has every summer till of late been closed by order of His Holiness, because the fatal virulence of the malaria thereabout. Groves of eucalyptus trees have now made it a healthful spot. Such is the statement current in medical and other journals.

In Algeria, in Corsica, in Italy, and in Cyprus millions of these trees are being planted as a protection to health, the various governments having taken the matter in hand. There are some two hundred species of eucalyptus, if our memory serves us; and according to Prince Troubetzkoy, a Roman gentleman who has investigated the subject thoroughly, the eucalyptus of any-where is the best variety of the tree.

It is said that this species contains far more essential oil in its leaves than the eucalyptus globulus. It grows equally well in damp and dry and exposed soils, and bears cold well. It successfully endures 21° Fahr. The eucalyptus could not stand the Kentucky winters, but in the Southern States it would probably do well, and in California it succeeds perfectly.

The eucalyptus tree is of marvelous rapid growth, its wood is valuable for many purposes, and its leaves in a room are said to drive the mosquitoes out. The plants that we have seen emit a strong but not unpleasant camphorous odor.

The Southern States should investigate this subject, for malaria is the South's greatest enemy.

The sunflower (helianthus) was recommended more than twenty years ago as a prophylactic against malaria, and he claims he had considered the same plant as the Washington Observatory comparatively, if not entirely, harmless by the growth of the sunflowers. This plant emits not an unpleasant aromatic scent, and is said to be an enormous absorbent of moisture.

We once heard a Mississippi planter jocularly declare his belief, when this idea was so much discussed in 1857, that if the drinking capacity said to be possessed by the sunflower many sunflowers as they proposed to do that the Yazoo and Mississippi rivers would be totally dried up, and the cotton bales would have to be taken to New Orleans by land.

The sunflower experiment has probably never been thoroughly tried, except by Lieut. Maury; and as the plant is not expensive to cultivate, and besides yields an abundant crop of nutritious seed, which are good food for poultry, and abound in oil, which is said equal that of the olive, the matter is not unworthy of attention.

In Louisville it is the poor people in the city's outskirts, who live in cottages and about the ponds and ditches, that suffer most from malarial diseases. It is chiefly from the poor people of America that Powers & Weightman have drained their half a hundred millions of dollars, and if the eucalyptus or the sunflower or the calamagrostis has been claimed, we have a possible protection against the pandemic poison called malaria, then most assuredly we should look into the subject at once. Sunflower seed are cheap, and Louisville offers an excellent field for the experiment.—Louisville Medical News.

A Level Headed Man.

The following is an extract from the will of a gentleman who was a citizen, and who died recently in Baltimore County, and which he directed should be read at his funeral. The leading traits of character throughout his life were honesty and truthfulness, and the extract shows how he, a dying man, viewed the popular and fashionable funeral pageantry of the day: "In view of the uncertainty of life, I hereby commit to writing, as my last wishes with regard to the manner and means used for the disposal of my mortal remains. First, I wish my body to be clothed in a plain shroud. I wish no flowers nor mock display. I object to my body being carried to the church. I wish it to be removed from my earthly home to its last resting-place, there to rest, unmarked, unless at some future time some child or children are moved so to do. Most earnestly I request that nothing be said, nothing shall be worn by my family, as I am persuaded this has become a solemn mockery. If the heart is not the fountain from whence these emotions flow, they never emanate from this source. Above all, I wish no undesired eulogies pronounced over my remains. If there was one trait in my character worthy of imitation, then imitate it;

The Butcher Boy and the Baker's Girl.

It was down in the yeast part of the city. He was a bulky butcher-boy—she was the pie-boss daughter of a German baker next door, with eyes like currants, and her yellow hair twisted on the back of her head like a huge cruller. They leaned towards each other over the back of the separating railings. He was casting sheep's eyes at her, and she was casting them on him with a provocative roll.

"Meet me to-night beef-forc quarter to ten," said he.

"Oh dough-nut ask it," said she.

"I make no bones about it," said he.

"You're not well-bread," said she.

"Only sweet-bread," said he.

"Don't egg me on," said she.

"I never sausage a girl. Don't keep me on tender-hooks!" said he, quite chaff-fallen.

"Why don't you wear the dear flour I gave you?" asked she.

"Pork-quor?" asked he.

"Oh, knead I say?" asked she.

"That don't suct me," said he.

"You're crusty. I only wanted to cracker joke," said she.

"You gave me a cut—the cold shoulder," said he.

"Ah, you don't loaf me!" sighed she.

"Veal see. I'll cleave to you, and no mistake—if you have money," said he.

"I can make a bun-entation," said she.

"The no more lamb-entations," said he.

"You shall be my rib!" said she.

"Well done," said she.

And their arms embraced like a pretzel. So his cake was not all dough; she liked a man of his kidney; and being good livers, they will, no doubt, live on the fat of the land, raising lots of children. This world is a queer smible, but love seems "bread in the bone."

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

Motto for the married—Never despair.

This maiden's band of hope—A husband.

Nothing was made in vein except human blood.

Go to thy aunt, thou sluggard, and if she is worth money, consider her ways.

Mexico is negotiating for a resumption of diplomatic relations with England.

The pope refused to accept the resignation of Archbishop Purcell, of Cincinnati.

No one ever sees a man angel in a picture, and it is giving the men folks the cold shake.

The Hindoos calculate it is 131,400,007,800,000 since the birth of Brahma or the beginning of the world.

The Italian government has prohibited the importation of American hogs, as a precaution against trichinosis.

In Michigan, etiquette permits a bride to marry without gloves—precisely the way she handles her husband.

VALUE the friendship of him who stands by you in the storm; swarms of insects will surround you in the sunshine.

In Syracuse a barefooted girl kicked a burglar out of the house, and an observing mule went behind the barn and wept.

LIFE is but a span: Marriage is a double team. You'll wedded to old age is a tandem. A cross old bachelor is single and all eulky.

TRUST him little who praises all; him less who censures all, and him least of all who is indifferent about all. In short, don't trust anybody at all.

"Do eagles give milk, mother?" "No, my son; what makes you think so?" "Because I've heard the eagles scream." The mother reached for her slipper, but the embryo paragraph had vanished.

A NAIL gun has been invented by a New Zealander, to be employed in nailing down flooring boards. It is not unlike a gun in shape and size. The nail is placed point downwards at the top, and slides on to the bottom, when the operator draws up a rod, and by one downward stroke of this, the nail is cleanly driven into the boards beneath. A practical hand by this simple contrivance can do the work of half a dozen men.

LO! the festive bumble-bee wheteth his poignard and lurcheth for the pie-nicker; the humble but inquisitive ant is athirst for the cool recesses of the early white pants; the corseted hornet twisteth his legs together, yea and winketh merrily and crieth ha, ha! the buzz of the baritone blue-bottle is heard in the land; the bass bullfrog chanteth his lay; the wicked wigglet tail wrigglet athwart the slant sunbeams in the cistern; the heart of the housekeeper is filled with gladness and her eustard with flies; the amorous cat bewaileth on the back fence, and the grim but undulous paragrapher pointeth his pencil and tumbeth about and deriveth grins; for lo! is the season of plenty at hand, and the spring joke cometh apace.—N. BURLINGTON, KY., APRIL 10.

The mud roads, the mud roads, oh how sloppy!

Iowa has recently had some experience with mobs.

This Clark County Democrat wants the Court-house sold.

Last week, the Democrats carried the city election in Chicago.

The Republicans elected their entire ticket in the Cincinnati city election.

That Hon. John G. Carlisle will make his mark in the council of the nation, there can be no mistake.

The School Commissioner was in town Monday, replenishing the purses and making glad the hearts of some of the pedagogues.

It is now understood that Buford will be defended by a eminent lawyer from the East, and who makes the insanity dodge a specialty.

Last Monday was not a very favorable day for the assembling of the Boone expanse, and not an immense number exposed itself to the inclement elements and the perils of a journey over the mud roads.

The Maupin murder trial was concluded in Richmond last week, and resulted in the conviction of accused whose punishment was fixed at confinement in the Penitentiary. Three other murderers were convicted in the Madison court.

The Holstein is a breed of cattle that is now attracting considerable attention in the dairy districts of New York. It is said that these cattle are large, handsome, easily fattened, and profitable for beef cattle. The Farmers' Home Journal, of last week, contains a lengthy history of these cattle.

The Kenton County Republican Convention declared last week that the children of the poor are the wards of the Commonwealth, and that every consideration of duty, of interest and of patriotism demands that the most liberal provision be made for their education, and to that end the Republican party will insist upon a firmer basis for our public schools, and upon dispensing with the extravagant machinery which has been recently introduced into its management, which so large a sum is taken from the children and squandered upon useless sub-officials.

The New York Sun has the following to say in regard to Hon. John G. Carlisle's debate with Robeson:

After Ketter came Carlisle, of Kentucky, an able lawyer and a clear-cut talker, a man who is direct, incisive and never superfluous in his speeches. In a few minutes he so clearly defined the respective constitutional powers of the army that his speech might, without any excitation, be incorporated in a textbook as a definition. Secor Robeson, anxious to make an exhibition of himself, interrupted Carlisle with questions which had neither point nor relevancy and could only have been put by a man who was either naturally or designedly ignorant of the fact that the amendments proposed to sections 2, 902 and 5, 528 of the Revised Statutes in no wise created new penalties. While, of Pennsylvania, put trivial questions and made unnecessary interruptions, apparently for no other purpose than to get his accustomed space in last day's Record. Frye, badly used by McLean, was ground to still finer powder by Carlisle, and in the vain hope of wriggling out, kept putting questions and making explanations until his courteous adversary had to insist upon continuing and concluding his argument as to the constitutional power of the President over the army.

It is probably generally remembered that some years ago—in 1873—Congress passed a law providing for the erection of durable headstones over the graves of soldiers of the regular and volunteer forces of the United States, whose remains are interred in the National Military Cemeteries. The law has been carried out, and the graves of the nation's dead in these cemeteries are now permanently marked. At the instance of the War Department, Congress has recently authorized the erection of similar headstones over the graves of the Union soldiers who are buried in private and village cemeteries. This will be done so soon as the necessary arrangements can be made. In the meantime, the Quartermaster-General, at Washington, will at once proceed to collect the necessary information as to these new headstones are required. All persons having any knowledge of the burial places of soldiers in private cemeteries whose graves are not marked, are requested to communicate the fact to the Quartermaster-General, and give regiment, company, and date of death of deceased if known. Similar information is desired from parties in charge of such cemeteries. Of course it is not intended to furnish headstones for graves over which monuments have already been erected by relatives or friends.

The Somerset Reporter is in favor of hanging Buford, sane or insane. To establish his insanity to the satisfaction of an intelligent jury will certainly be a considerable undertaking.

WANDERER, editor of the Falmouth Independent can now get his sour-mash at fifteen cents a drink and three beers for a dime.

—A handsome and intelligent young lady of Flemingsburg is studying law.

—The Adair Circuit Court allowed fox-scap claims to the amount of $100.

—Maysville imposes a tax of fifty-cent's a head upon all hogs kept in the city.

—Capt. J. E. Woodward, of Paducah, will have to pay J. B. Simmons $3,000 for slandering him.

—The Mercury says Am. Crouch, who died in Bethany aged 89, never saw a train of cars on a river.

—Cumberland Courier: The Kansas fever still devours itself. About fifteen negroes left this county within the past week.

—Courier-Journal: The Mormons have recently made over a dozen concessions their church near Paintsville, Johnson County.

—We are sorry to learn that J. R. Garrett, of the Mount Sterling Sentinel, has made an assignment. The paper will be continued as usual.

—Maysville Republican: John Ruggles, the boss fisherman of the Ohio River, made a catch this week of three catfish, which aggregated one hundred and nine pounds.

—Courier-Journal: Gov. Underwood's withdrawal recalls the singular fact that only one of all Kentucky's Lieutenant-Governors has ever been elected Governor.

—The Richmond Register says Prof. Mueller, the dancing master, has been placed in the lunatic asylum at Lexington. His wife is said to have been the trouble.

—It has leaked out that Jas. Alexander, aged 17, and Nellie Johnson, aged 15, both of Louisville, have been married over a month. The father of the young man has disinherited him in consequence.

—While blasting rock for a well in Hardin County, a young man named Charles Todd received fatal injuries by the premature explosion of a charge of powder. One leg was blown off close to the body.

—Blue-Grass Clipper: It is a noticeable fact that the clover which is not protected by stubble last winter has been killed by the severity of the weather, the snow not answering as a sufficient protection.

—Greenup Independent: There are six murder cases on the Pike docket, and the people think it time to hang somebody. The only person ever hung in the county was a negro, and that was thirty-five years ago.

—Falmouth Independent: A man in Bracken County has made the interesting discovery that there are 204, 24 separate particles in a table-spoonful of tobacco seed, and that a spoonful is sufficient to plant 400.

—In Wolfe County, Ku-Klux hung Miss Angeline Banks with a log chain to make her give up $80 she was suspected of stealing. The limb broke and saved her life. Three persons were arrested, but proved a "halibut."

—At Burgin, Ky., Sam Broolins, colored, employed on the construction train of the Cincinnati Southern Railroad, took the advice of a Voodoo doctor and for a cold bathed his body in boiled pork-rind, and this morning he was a dead rat.

—Mr. Sterling Sentinel: The Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of the First Appellate District has issued a call for a convention to be held in Owingsville, Bath County, on Thursday, April 24th, 1879, to nominate a candidate to fill the vacancy in said office.

—Mrs. John Horine, of Anderson County, is entitled to the honors. She is but 27 years of age, and has borne ten children at three accouchements. The first time she had twins; the second time triplets; and here, a few days ago, she fairly surpassed any previous effort by bringing forth five children at a birth, all of whom, at last reports, were alive and doing well.

—Falmouth Independent: J. L. Nichols, of Campbell County, was arrested by Constable David Bowling and lodged in jail at this place, on last Friday, charged with horse-stealing. The horse in controversy belongs to the prisoner's father, who lives in this county, on Sandy Branch. It is said that this is the second horse the young man has taken from his father without his consent.

—Courier-Journal: It must be gratifying to the friends of General John Hunt Morgan to observe impression he has made at Washington. The correspondents of all shades of political opinion speak of him in terms of genuine respect and regard, predicting for him a career of distinction and usefulness in the Senate. It is given out that he will presently take a house and establish a home in the Capital—an event which will add to the local society one of its most charming features.

—On the 12th ult., a body of men assembled in Jackson, Breathitt County, and, after consultation, proceeded to the jail, a wooden structure, and, beginning with the roof, proceeded to raze it to the ground. They completed the work of demolition thoroughly, after which they swore that another jail should never be built in the free county of Breathitt. They also threatened to burn the Court-house, and it is believed that they will execute the threat before the time of holding the June term of court comes around.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

St. Louis, Mo., April 3, 1879.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

About half past 9 o'clock last evening our city was visited by the most destructive fire we have had, probably, since 1840, when about half the city was consumed by the red storm. The work is nearly at the close, and we have but a few moments to spare, and our time will not admit of us going into details. The Republican and the Globe-Democrat have been 4 or 5 columns of incidents which we have not even had time to read, and we will simply state that what was yesterday evening at this time one of the handsomest blocks in our city, extending from St. Charles street to Washington street, and from 4th to 5th streets is now a mass of charred and blackened walls, and piles of bricks and mortar. The cause of the conflagration is not known, as yet, and neither can anything like a correct estimate of damages be made up to this time, but it will amount to millions, as almost an entire block of the finest buildings in the city were forced to yield to the demand of the flames. And this was not all; one of our best firemen perished in the flames, namely: William Smith and Fred Senn. The fire lasted all night, and in fact, the smoke has not entirely disappeared from the ruins up to this afternoon. It may be necessary for us to simply state that this great destruction of property is within one block of the entrance to the bridge, and only two blocks from the Linden Hotel, and, of course, it will be rebuilt at once, and we suppose on a more magnificent scale than the old.

Last Thursday was our municipal election, and it will only be necessary for us to state that the Democracy swept the platter, electing James T. Rowland and his niece, of Boone County, to the State and it was at that time thought the young lady was driven to the horrible deed from treatment of her uncle to her lover, as he had suspended the young man's rights. But since then a different phase is put on the already too affair. The coroner of the county, a few days thereafter, not feeling altogether satisfied about the matter, had the body of the young lady examined and taken to the nearest church and had a post mortem examination, when the horrible discovery was made, that the deceased, at the time she committed the awful deed, was four months pregnant. Further comment is unnecessary, and your correspondent certainly has no desire to say more before we close we may as well say Dr. Wm. Stepp, a former Blackburnian, is to the great shame of said State, was, on Thursday last, sentenced to the Work-house by our Court of Criminal Correction, for helping women out of such troubles. Only yesterday our grand jury found two more indictments against him of the same kind, and as soon as his time is out there, he is likely to serve a term in the Penitentiary. The poor old sinner is over 60, and his head is as white as snow; but the way of the transgressor was hard in the olden times, and we have never read of any repeal of said law.

—Hon A. Long.

Captain Boyton as a Floater.

To the Editor of the Recorder: As viewed by thousands who have had no experience in such matters renders him such praise as greenhorns and gossams always accord him, and he is a good deal of a float. He was up by 150 pounds of space, and he is what is to hinder his floating? But in reality it is the best floating coffin any person could get up; the face exposed and floating on the water, like that we would struggle any one but an expert. Ten men could not put a person in one of Boyton's Life-Saving suits in case of a fire on a steamer! He is afloat in the water, and he is a preserver at the same time. Boyton is a copyist. He stole his glory from babies and infant swimmers. The baby Moses, in his cot, was put to shame before him. Nero, with his basket, Leander floated across the Hellespont to see his sweetheart; Byron did the same, and the writer floated from Phared, Bond across the Ohio when the river was so full of ice the steamer could not run. But he never floated before kings or queens; that honor was reserved for Boyton, Moses and buffaloes. Big Billy, of the Ohio, says Boyton ought to be classed with

Mr. Ben Conner, an old and well known citizen, died at his late residence on Cincinnati street last night after suffering about twenty weeks of heart disease. When told by his physician that his heart was affected, he said he knew he had been troubled with an affection of the heart for the past twelve years, but had never said anything about it. The funeral took place from the Baptist church, Rev. J. W. Brown officiating. His relatives resorted to a large congregation of mourners and friends. The remains were buried in the Florence cemetery. The deceased was in the 60th year of his age.

THE LOUISVILLE COMMERCIAL.

LEADING REPUBLICAN PAPER IN THE SOUTH.

THE LOUISVILLE COMMERCIAL is now about to enter upon its fifth year. It will advocate in future, as it has in the past, the cardinal republican doctrine: equal rights under the law to all men; devotion to the union of the States; the maintenance of national authority; the growth of friendly feeling among the people of all sections. While staunchly adhering to the republican party, it will also be fair and just in its criticisms on public men and measures, and will withhold blame from its own party when deserved, or praise from its opponents when they are entitled to it.

The Louisville Commercial has the full telegraphic dispatches of the Associated Press, and gives a complete record of current events. Its weekly digest contains a summary of the news of the world, and is especially adapted to make it acceptable to a family newspaper. The Louisville Commercial is the only paper in the South that publishes the news of the world, and is the only paper in the South that publishes the news of the world.

PANCY'S CHILD.

(The following poem was written by Inez Letimer, daughter of Hubert Letimer, of Milton, Boone County, Mo., and who is not yet 10 years of age.)

Now come, my Pancy's child!

For him all Nature seems to smile.

For him how bright the summer day!

To him how sweet the wild bird's lay!

For him and bees and everything

That wanders on the blithe-sweet wind.

And everything that creeps through

And every shadow on the ground.

And every cloud that floats so fair—

Yes, everything that's in the air—

Companions all to him they be,

And teachers sweet of poetry.

What thought the world may hate his name,

And envy him his song, his fame,

And friendship turn to jealous scorn;

Think not that he is lonely-born.

Disgusted with the world he while,

He seeks Dame Nature's heavenly smile;

In her arms he seeks his friend and guide,

And, free from thoughts of care and strife,

In tuneful numbers flows his song.

At home 'mid Nature's blissful throng.

His soul, all framed for harmony,

Pours forth the sweetest melody.

And he forgets the groans of men,

While lingering in a bird's sweet ken.

Where Pancy, with her harp and train,

Tunes earth to Pancy's strain.

Where all the Muses, hovering high,

Like soft winds, play and sigh.

And linger round him breathing love,

Like whisp'ring zephyrs from above.

And he forgets the groans of men,

While lingering in a bird's sweet ken.

Where Pancy, with her harp and train,

Tunes earth to Pancy's strain.

Where all the Muses, hovering high,

Like soft winds, play and sigh.

And linger round him breathing love,

Like whisp'ring zephyrs from above.

And he forgets the groans of men,

While lingering in a bird's sweet ken.

Where Pancy, with her harp and train,

Tunes earth to Pancy's strain.

Where all the Muses, hovering high,

BURLINGTON, KY., APRIL 17.

FOR COUNTY REPRESENTATIVE,
REUBEN CONNER.

"It's enough," says Blackburn—814.
The real estate business seems to be getting some better.

ONE hundred and three colored emigrants for Kansas left Frankfort one day last week.

HON. JOHN G. CARLISLE is a member of the Committee of Ways and Means in Congress.

The Postmaster at Mount Sterling has had Maj. J. H. H. arrested for using a stamp that had already been canceled.

The name of Reuben Conner, as a candidate for Representative and which should have been hoisted last week, is now assigned its proper place in this paper.

The County Judge has ruled that he will disburse the tax collected on the vote of 1878 as directed by the dog law previous to the amendment voted on at the last August election.

KANSAS is destined to be the banner Republican State. The colored people have a particular fondness for homes in Kansas. Place no embargo in their way, and let them go as rapidly as they desire.

Some of the counties in which conventions were called for last Monday, had them postponed till they held conventions for selecting delegates to the convention which nominates a candidate to fill the vacancy on the Appellate bench.

JUDGE HUNT, in response to inquiries from the Madison grand jury, decides that the local option law is applicable to all alike, whether they have license ante-dating its adoption or not, and, therefore, persons who have continued to sell under State license must be indicted.

THIS is a good time for the Road Supervisors to mark those places in the roads that are desperate about this time, so they can give them the necessary attention. It is better for the public that one mile of the worst road in each district be worked well than to have three miles slighted. The road money should be put where it will do the most good.

THE Indianapolis Democrats have undertaken to hold off the Republicans in the contest for the colored vote in the approaching city election, and to accomplish this they have nominated a colored man as their candidate for City Marshal. In his speech accepting the nomination he expressed it as his opinion that the colored people will find that the Democratic party is their political friend after all.

It appears that Jacobs, who was elected Mayor of Cincinnati, last week, by a little over four hundred more votes than Harris, his most formidable competitor received, is not eligible on account of being an alien, he having failed to comply with the naturalization laws of this country, and was made a subject of this nation a few days before he was twenty-one years of age. The Judiciary will be called upon to settle the question as to whether Jacobs will be allowed the office.

It is said that Dr. Henderson complains because some of the papers in the State, and in which he saw proper to place his announcement as a candidate for Superintendent, did not espouse his cause. If the Doctor actually makes these complaints, and for no other cause than that assigned, viz: that the papers were under obligation to him, because he paid them for announcing him as a candidate, the Kentucky Press Association should no longer recognize him as one of its members.

If any of our readers feel any symptoms of Leadville fever, we recommend as an antidote, a careful reading of our Leadville letter. It is a lengthy article and fails to mention a single thing calculated to recommend Leadville to the public. It is certainly the most loathsome place, morally, in this enlightened nation. Its citizens, all accounts being correct, are principally the dregs from all parts of the United States. Leadville is certainly a good place to go if you are nothing for a long journey on this mundane sphere, and at the same time it is a very poor place in which to die.

In view of the threatened revolutionary action of the United South in Congress, it is well for the people of Rising Sun, living on the border, to keep their eyes open—there may be another rebellion at an early day.

Don't be alarmed, Brother Waldo; your town is in no danger from the people of this side of the Ohio. There is not a man, woman or child extant that would molest a hair of your people's head. Keep cool. There is no hostile feeling accumulating over here. That "revolutionary action of the United South" so much talked of is transparent. It is to make money in 1890. Keep cool, Brother Waldo; let us insist on your keeping cool.

Hart County Democrat: While Mrs. Henry Williams was going to church last Sunday morning, in company with her daughter, a dead tree on the roadside fell on her, causing instant death. The daughter barely escaped, being brushed by the tree while it was falling.

True Kentuckian: The amount of sod being plowed this spring is greater than for many years. Scarcity of feed for stock the past winter is the cause. Should the season prove favorable, the corn crop of Bourbon this year will be one of the largest ever raised in this country.

Bowling Green Pentagraph: Near Rockfield, Saturday, a negro whipped a horse from a plow, unhitched the horse from his arm and rode off rapidly to escape a shower. The horse threw him and dragged him against trees and over rocks until every bone in his body was broken.

Clark County Democrat: The number of lambs raised in Clark and adjoining counties, this season, will not be more than one-third as many as last year, and prices promise to be nearly double those paid last season. Sales are being made at five and six cents per pound for good ones.

—Owen News: The case of Walter Brown, of Warsaw, was tried at Frankfort last week, under a writ of habeas corpus before Judge Drake. The Judge decided that he had no jurisdiction, and dismissed the petition, and remanded the prisoner to the custody of the lessee of the Penitentiary.

The famous Buford farm in Henry County, where one of the litigation that resulted in Tom Buford's killing Judge Elliott, was purchased one day last week by J. D. G. by Hiram Barkley, at $40 per acre. The farm contains 425 acres, and on it is a brick residence in which are 25 rooms.

Some years ago it was reported that traces of gold had been discovered on a certain tract of land in Anderson County, combined with quartz. An examination of the locality showed that there had been, some years ago, a volcanic upheaval at the place designated, and experiments showed that there was gold there sure enough, combined with quartz, which would and did turn over several hundred dollars to the ton. A couple of Frankfort lawyers had so much faith in this "find" that they were willing to invest their money, and they proceeded at once to purchase "the mineral rights" to said 800 acres. With the past week or two an experienced miner from the West has been examining this mine and testing its productiveness, and although his investigation is not yet complete, it has gone far enough to satisfy the proprietors of said "mineral rights." Messrs. S. F. J. Trabee and George W. Craddock, through their investment will prove a richly paying one.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 12, 1879.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The great event with which our last report was the funeral of F. Nelson and R. Kuty, the two gallant framers who lost their lives in the discharge of their duty last Friday night. The services were conducted by the Rev. J. W. Lewis, of Central Methodist Church, at the Firemen's Headquarters, on 7th street between Pine and Olive streets, at 5 o'clock p. m., Sunday last. There is scarcely a doubt but what it was the largest funeral ever occurred in this city. The streets and sidewalks, during the services, were literally jammed and packed with people. For several blocks around some persons estimated the crowd around the Engine room, from which the remains were taken, at 60,000, and the streets, doors, windows of houses along the line of march were full of people witnessing the procession; and strange to say, amid this mighty concourse of human beings, everything was as still and solemn as if the great multitude were not there. 62 buggies in the funeral cortege, so there were not less than 600 persons at the graves of the two noble men. Of course, they were poor men, but the funeral was the finest and most costly metallic caskets our city could afford, and the same were deposited in mother earth, side by side, in Bellefontaine Cemetery. Nelson was married and leaves a wife and two children, who will doubtless be well provided for by the humane and generous of our city. His bravery amounted to almost reckless recklessness. He was one of the men who performed such daring feats in saving several valuable lives at the burning of the Southern Hotel, two years since. William Kuty, a single man, and an ardent brother of the law, was a man of her support, and he was to be married shortly to a young lady of this city, who was one of the chief mourners, and was perfectly broken down by the loss of her husband. They were about lowering his mortal remains to their last resting place, she caught hold of the casket with an almost death grip, and cried out as if her very life was being taken from her, and would not let some loose until she was pulled away. Having intimated that the family of the deceased will be cared for, we will be proper for us to now state that something over $1,000 was made up for them on Change, Monday morning, and the same organization appointed committees to solicit subscriptions and donations, and some of the men, pointing to something over near the walls of Armory Hall, and off went the crowd, and there was a man's boot protruding from a pile of brick and mortar. WE are under many obligations to Mr. Nathaniel Carpenter and son James, of Galatin County, for substantial favors they have recently extended to us.

ON day last week, Mrs. Matilda Huyen, sister of Robert Huyen, fell or was thrown from her horse and considerably hurt. She is recovering from her injuries.

THE Carrollton Democrat says: "S. P. Tilly, a teacher of fancy dancing, who has lately been having immense success in Vevy, will visit town in a few days, hoping to get up a class here."

THE Grant County Herald only makes semi-occasional visits to our office; but as Bradley is a candidate for the Legislature, we don't suppose he has time to issue a paper more than once a month.

A FRIEND, one day last week, told us of a lady on Garrison Creek who met with a painful accident which resulted in the breaking of her collar bone. The name of the unfortunate lady we failed to learn.

OUR Hebron correspondent says a couple of young men from Burlington started out last Sunday evening to take a drive, and getting lost turned up in Hebron. We are not positive, but suspicion that some of the boys like to get lost out that way occasionally, is not unfounded.

HAD we any influence with the fair sex, we would use it in behalf of our estimable young friend Frank—who is pining away on account of a certain young damsel refusing to cut his acquaintance because he is a good RECORDED recently failed to mention her appearance in Burlington. She was laboring under the impression that Frank is our society editor. That's where she was mistaken.

"GOLDEN YEARS ARE PASSING BY," a new song and chorus by Will L. Thompson, author of the famous song "Gather Ye Rosebuds," nearly half a million copies have been sold of our author's beautiful compositions. If you want his latest and prettiest song, order "Golden Years are Passing By." Any music dealer will send it for 35 cents. Published by W. L. Thompson & Co., East Liverpool, O.

LAST Thursday night, the Hebron Dramatic Club closed a series of successful performances of Satan Stings and Turn Him Out. The plays each evening, were witnessed by appreciative audiences, composed of persons from both far and near. It is not our purpose to speak in praise of any particular actor, but leave it to the reader to judge of the merits of the performers by saying the club is now in receipt of numerous letters, from D. L. O. Lutz, Lexington, and Burlington to visit these towns and present the above mentioned plays.

THE poem "Fancy's Child," which we present this week, from the pen of Inez Latimer, should be regarded as a most remarkable production, in view of her youth. It certainly exhibits evidence of the highest order of poetic genius in its authors.

WE are informed that the same lady has written and has about ready for publication, a volume of poems, which are said by good judges who have read them to be surpassingly excellent and among them are many gems of poetry. We hope soon to announce to the many friends and relatives of the Latimer family in this county that the book of poems "The Latimer's" is ready and that all may see it at intervals in history.

If there are persons who are not satisfied with the nomination made at Burlington on the 1st Monday in April, they had better trot out their man.

James Riddell's Young Squire (3-year-old) by Strader's Hambletonian is showing some very pretty trotting this spring. We think Jim has got the most promising colt (Lodge's excepted) in the State.

Snyder & Hume are going to Bullittville about the 20th of June to open up their dry goods and grocery house. The Co-operative will move their goods into the new building now being erected by Clure & Baily across the way.

We learn that Mr. Noah Rouse, an aged and respected citizen of our neighborhood, had his leg badly broken, which in due time was set by Drs. Terrell and brother. It is feared that the leg will have to be amputated.

Tickets were recently sent out in this neighborhood for a turkey (gobbler) dinner. We did not get an invitation, but think that our old friend Billy Ayler did. Pass around the turkey, Dennis. Have turkey, Billy.

Clint Snyder just received a letter from Orrin Beall, who lives in Montana and is a subscriber for the Recorder. He says in his letter, "Snyder is a fellow. I would not give a cent for the paper without the Hebron news."

IN an interview recently with Prof. Tasso, the celebrated violinist, we learned the following question—What is your favorite piece?

Q.—"What is your nativity?" A.—"My parents were born in Turin, the capital of Savoy, Italy, and I was born in the City of Mexico, North America. I am one of three children, and all spoke different tongues."

Q.—"How long have you been in this country?" A.—"I came here in 1820. I have lived here since."

Q.—"Where do you now reside?" A.—"I own a place at Latonia Springs, where I reside at present."

Q.—"How long have you owned this violin?" A.—"I have owned this violin 62 years. This is a genuine Cremona violin and I paid $250 for it."

Q.—"Would you sell it?" A.—"Yes, I would sell it if I could get what I paid for it, with compound interest. I have been offered $1,000. The conversation ended. The reason why your correspondent didn't buy the fiddle might easily be guessed."

 jons to try their luck. Every age, color, sex and class can be seen in these gambling dens either by day or night. Bankers, merchants, clerks, gamblers, "tender-feet," by the hundreds, carpenters, blacksmiths, miners, mill men, little boys, "soiled doves," the sturdy teamster, ex-convicts, (six to ten certain knowledge who have served terms in the Missouri Penitentiary are now in Leadville) the dirty "bum," negroes and white men frequent the Carbonate gambling-houses, and when the game is progressing all in turn, except the dogs and "bums," each of which would if they could, feel that they must "hit her a lick." Some lose and some win, but the majority lose, and after continuing the game until their last dollar is spent. Only one night this week, a well dressed sporting man, who had just struck the town, entered one of these gambling places for the purpose of bucking a place, but evidently he had his satisfaction when he quit. When he entered he had $100, but he lost the first cent before he quit, yet he coolly went on and continued to gamble until he had lost $100, and then he quit. We have also known other gamblers who were equally as lucky as this one, and we are lucky. We have seen them seated at card-table, and never get up until from $700 to $1,000 were counted out to them, for the return of the chips they held.

An endless variety of gambling games are carried on here; in fact all most every game known to the sporting fraternity is well represented in Leadville. But the most common are faro, high ball, poker, keno, hazzard, roulette and John and John, in addition to other games of minor importance, all of which have their idols. Sometimes you will see from 12 to 15 of these games under full operation at the same time and all in the same room. Every gambling-house has a high-sounding name, such as "City Hall," "Gold Room," etc., all of which are strung along on the left side of Chestnut street, the greatest thoroughfare in the town. Every house has its doors thrown wide open to the general public, and a string band is kept constantly employed to attract a crowd. Or, in fact, the music is furnished by different instruments. One house will have an organ and fiddle, another a fiddle, a flute and a horse-fiddle, a third a fiddle and a banjo, a fourth, a piano, fiddle and horn, and so on, until all are supplied with music.

Schools, gambling-halls, and dance halls are all Leadville's idols, and only for the amusement, money and music they furnish and bring to the town, the excitement would die out, and the place become dull and deserted by many.

FOURTEEN LEADVILLE.
 The Carbonate Camp is a very depraved place. There is scarcely any society here, although some efforts are being made to establish good society. Lust and corruption reign supreme, and will more than likely continue to for some time to come. The churches in Leadville, some six in number, are all in the background. You might travel round the principal streets of the city half a day, and not see a church, while on the other hand, the dens of prostitution, dance-halls, saloons and gambling halls occupy conspicuous positions on the most prominent streets in the city, and their alluring temptations are not only noticeable, but are flaunted in the faces of all who pass.

Chestnut street, the business center of the city, is lined on each side with saloons and gambling-houses, which extend on around to Harrison avenue and State street. The latter, while called State street, could be more appropriately christened Magdalen street, for the Magnolias of the city, all reside on this street. All along the right side of State street may be seen a number of small one-story frame and log buildings sandwiched in between saloons, restaurants and other business buildings, at different intervals, the whole length of the street, all of which are occupied by fallen women; from three to a dozen in each house, ranking in age from 14 to 65 years of age. Some are young and beautiful, while others are haggard and care worn from excessive dissipation. They are all here; from the veritable hags of 65, whose life sands have nearly run out, down to little girls 14 or 15 years of age, whose cheeks are flushed with the bloom of youth and who have not yet discontinued the practice of wearing short dresses. We will venture to say from our personal knowledge and our own observation, that there is not 75 truly virtuous women in the entire city of Leadville.

STREETS AND SIDEWALKS.
 Beyond a doubt, when it is muddy, this one of the muddest cities in the United States. While the city is located on a hillside, sloping south, and is extremely situated for draining, the streets have never been graded, as they should be, and not a street in the city has ever been macadamized, although there is an abundance of rock convenient. Worse still, there is very little guttering, and very little sidewalk throughout the city, and a street-crossing in the whole place. The snow has all melted, and while the ground freezes at night, it thaws out the next day. For the past two weeks the mud along State street, running east and west, and Harrison avenue (running north and south), and along Chestnut street, which also runs east and west, has been from four inches to a foot and a half deep. While thousands of loads of slag from the many smelters, which could have been procured for nothing, in the cost of hauling, and which would make excellent sidewalks and crossings, not a load of it was ever used until the present week. Then the street crossing had become to be almost a foot deep in mud, and something had to be done. Accordingly, at the more important crossings on Chestnut street, several loads of slag were dumped.

keep the pedestrians above and below terra firma; but the multiplicity of express wagons, stage coaches, road wagons and ponderous freight trains would soon bury the crossings out of sight, and every few hours more slag would have to be hauled. Previously, the slag was used on other street crossings throughout the city, which were equally as bad as these crossings had been made on Chestnut street, it was, and is now, nothing more than a nuisance for men of both sexes, wading through mud and slush almost knee deep. But, as the election of the new city officers will come off ere this is in print, it is to be hoped that the streets will be graded, and the crossings made safe and easy.

LABOR IN LEADVILLE.
 There is a noticeable scarcity for the demand of labor here, no matter what the people and the press say to the contrary. Four or five of the Jefferson City boys in particular have had their own experience in the matter, and with a handful of others who have been equally as unfortunate in finding employment, will come inside in what we say. Young man; if you have a sweetheart and a good home back in the States, "freize" to them if you only make your salt and borrow your pepper. While many have found employment here, and some few have been peculiarly fortunate in making rich "strikes," fully as many have been deceived and disappointed, while five times as many more throughout the States and Territories will not be contented until they too, shall have visited Leadville and met their inevitable doom—disappointment. Several parties who are employed at the saw mills and smelters in this city, who board with the writer, inform us that from twenty-five to thirty applicants for employment daily are turned off where they work, and you will find the case all over the city. There is not a city of any importance in the States but what offers better inducements to a poor man than Leadville does. A man without capital, and plenty of it, has no business here. Rents are high, and it is at present expensive to get goods shipped here. While there is plenty of carpenter work going on for the want of lumber carpenters are the half of their time. Hundreds of idle men parade the principal streets of the city both night and day, out of money, hungry and sleepy, unable to find employment, utterly dejected and what offers better inducements to a poor man than Leadville does.

Others who still have a little money left, finding it impossible to get employment and that they have been deceived, take to drinking, and in a couple of weeks the cold clay is shoveled over their deep and narrow bed, after which their earthly existence is soon forgotten.

EIK TACT.
 The practice of writing the husband's title before a lady's name, as to be rather funny when the title before is as weighty with honors as the following copied from a Washington contemporary: "Mrs. Commissioner of Internal Revenue Bureau, and Mrs. Second Assistant Secretary of State Hunter."

A YEAR-OLD baby is undoubtedly a joy and a treasure to his parents, and at a time seems to be a perfect cherub; but when he tries to rake the fire with the best comb, and sweeps the ashes with the Sunday hair-brush, he is not far from being an embury fiend.

"I don't miss my church so much as you suppose," said a lady to her minister who called on her during her illness, "for I make Betsy sit at the window, and as soon as the bells begin to chime she tells me what I want to wear."

The Cincinnati Enquirer has a very happy knack of finding excuses for the Democratic defeats in that city. The city of Cincinnati, for a city of its size, is pretty equally divided politically, and excuses on the part of a defeated party are easily found.

A kind father—a man well to do—took his sick son to a doctor last week, and told him if he could cure the boy for less than the cost of a funeral, to go ahead; but if he couldn't, the youth must take his chances.

"You are a smart fellow," yelled a lawyer to a witness the other day in Brooklyn. "I'd return the compliment if I was not under oath," said the witness.

Going to Church.
 Some go to church just for a walk;
 Some go there to laugh and talk;
 Some go there for speculation;
 Some go there for observation;
 Some go there to meet a lover;
 Some the impulse oft discover;
 Some go there to meet a friend;
 Some go there the time to spend;
 Some go to learn the preacher's name;
 Some go there to wound his fame;
 Many go there to doze and nod;
 But few go there to worship God.

Drunkness Cured.

Eli Perkins writes to the New York Sun of the discovery of a great cure for drunkenness as follows:

The physicians and temperance men of Chicago are very much excited over a new remedy discovered by Dr. Robt. D'Unger, which not only cures intemperance, but leaves the drunkard with an absolute aversion to spirituous liquors. Mr. Joseph Medill, the editor of the Chicago Tribune, is one of the strongest indorsers of the new remedy.

Mr. Medill has had many scientific articles in the Tribune about it, and has often devoted editorial space to make known to the drunkard that there is a simple remedy which can save him.

Yesterday I had a long talk with Mr. Medill about this wonderful discovery, during which he said:

"This is one of the most wonderful discoveries of the age. Dr. D'Unger has actually cured 2,800 cases of the worst forms of intemperance. He takes men debauched by liquor for years—takes a used-up, demented, loathsome sot, and in ten days makes a well man of him, with a positive aversion to liquor."

"You have seen the medicine tried, Mr. Medill?"

"Yes, repeatedly. Why, one of our first citizens became a common drunkard a few years ago. He fell to the lowest depths. He groveled in the dust. His wife, a lovely woman, got a divorce from him. But at the last moment, when ready to die, this man's friend tried this wonderful remedy. In four days his appetite came back, and in a week he gained the use of his tongue, hands and brain. Then color came to his cheeks, and in two weeks he was a cured man. He had no longing for liquor. He positively hates the sight of it. His wife and children are delighted, and to-morrow this reformed and cured drunkard is to be married again to the loving wife who had to leave him years ago."

"Is this medicine a secret?"

"No, not at all. Dr. D'Unger is a regular practitioner. He tells the secret to everyone, and many of our physicians are using his discovery. I will give you a note to him, and he will tell you about it."

Armed with Mr. Medill's note, I called on Dr. D'Unger at the Palmer House.

"You are just in time," said the Doctor. "I'm just going to call on a patient now who, though a rich man, has been a debauched drunkard for three years and a steady drinker for fifteen years. For six weeks he has been in bed as helpless as a child. His mind was even gone. He has been taking my medicine for four days."

"Is Mr. — in bed?" inquired the Doctor, as we gave our hats to the servant.

"Oh, no; he's in the parlor reading. Walk in."

And there was this drunkard, still weak, but mentally cured. When the Doctor asked him if he had any longing for liquor, he said:

"No, none whatever. I have eaten the best meal this morning that I have eaten in fifteen years. I am not mentally depressed. I'm strong and I wouldn't take a drink for the world, and—"

"Oh, Doctor!" interrupted his wife, as she took both his hands, "you have saved George and we are so happy!" and then her eyes filled with tears of joy.

"Will that man ever drink again?" I asked the Doctor.

"No. I've never had a patient cured by cinchona rubra return to drink again. They have the sight of liquor."

"Now, Doctor," I said, "what did you give this patient; or, in other words, tell me in plain English what your medicine is, how you prepare it, and how anyone may give it so as to cure a habitual drunkard—a man a drunkard with inflamed eyes, trembling hands, bloated body and intellect shattered by habitual drink?"

"My medicine," said the Doctor, "can be bought at any first-class drug store. It is red Peruvian bark (cinchona rubra). Quinine is from the yellow bark (calagaya). Now, there are eighty varieties of this bark. I use the bark from the small limbs of the red variety. Druggists call it quill bark, because it comes from twigs about the size of a quill."

"How do you mix it?"

"I take a pound of the best fresh red Peruvian bark (cinchona rubra), powder it and soak it in a pint of distilled alcohol. Then I strain it and evaporate it down to a half pint; so it is a pound to a half pint. Anyone can prepare it."

"How do you give this medicine?"

"I give the drunken man a teaspoonful every three hours, and occasionally moisten his tongue between the doses, the first and second days. It acts like quinine. The patient can tell by a headache if he is getting too much. The third day I generally reduce the dose to a half teaspoonful, then to a quarter spoonful, then down to fifteen, ten and five drops."

"How long do you continue the medicine?"

"From five to fifteen days, and in extreme cases thirty days. Seven is about the average."

"Now, please tell the philosophy of this medicine; why it will cure drunkenness and how you happened to make the discovery?"

"Well, first you must understand that intemperance, first a habit, finally becomes a disease. It becomes a disease of the nerve cells, or, if talking to a physician, I should say it becomes a disease of the sensory ganglia. I found by dissecting the brain of a man who had died of delirium tremens that the cells of the quadrigeminal body, or the cells that send a nerve to the eye, were in an unnatural state on the outside, while within the nerve cells themselves I discovered a yellow yeast-looking deposit."

"Now, I asked myself, what is this yellow deposit, and what causes this abnormal look of the cells? It is caused, I learned after much research, by the ethereal part of the alcohol going straight to the outside of these cells. Now if I drink milk," continued the Doctor, "it will take four hours to pass through the digestive organs, be taken up in the blood and be passed to the nerve cells from which the brain is fed, while if I drink alcohol, it will go straight to the nerve cells in three minutes. This shows that alcohol is not digested. It is not food. It is a poisonous fluid electricity, which goes over the sensitive nerves as electricity goes over a wire, straight to the outside of the nerve cells, which it stimulates artificially, when they should be stimulated naturally through the blood."

"If the spirit part of alcohol," continued the Doctor, "were digested like soup, the kidneys and liver would extract from it its poisonous properties, as they extract the injurious salts from our food, and this poison would never reach the brain. Once stimulated naturally by a poisonous substance like whiskey, the nerve cells for larger and larger doses, until by and by a man can drink two quarts of whiskey or seventy grains of morphine in a day. Cinchona rubra stops the call for alcohol."

"Do not red Peruvian bark and alcohol both stimulate the nerve cells? Then why can one cure the other?" I asked.

"Well, alcohol is a fermented, distilled stimulant, containing no poison; so my medicine stimulates the nerves, and, not being poisonous, always inflammation; that is, it holds the cells open until the morbid deposit is forced out and the cells accustomed themselves to receive their stimulus naturally through the arteries. It stops all craving for alcohol."

"Please explain the passage of food and poisoned alcohol to the brain again," I said.

"Well, when a man drinks alcohol, it goes, like electricity, straight to the nerve cells; thence to the eye through the optic nerve; thence to the brain through the spinal center, limbering the back; thence to the muscular system, and when it finally gets to the stomach, he vomits. Food goes just the opposite way. Food goes to the stomach first, then into the blood, then to the heart, and finally through the arteries to the brain."

"Then red Peruvian bark stimulates and builds up the nerve cells, and begin to receive nutriment from the blood?"

"Yes, that's it. The only credit I claim is making this discovery and discovering the location of the disease known as dipsomania."

"How did you discover that red cinchona bark will cure drunkenness?"

"Well, I first discovered it down in Maryland, twelve years ago. An account was published in the Sun at that time. I had a case of a drunkard, Bill Stevens, who also had intermittent fever. It was a hard case of fever, and so I tried red Peruvian bark instead of quinine. To my surprise, it not only cured his fever, but he never wanted to drink afterward. When he went into a saloon and the boys asked him to drink, Bill said: 'I can't, boys. That dog red bark the Doctor gave me not only killed my fever, but it spoiled all the whiskey in Maryland for me.'"

"What conspicuous cures in Chicago can you refer to, Doctor?"

"Well, Dr. S. B. Noble. He had the alcoholic disease. His nerves were poisoned. He was once President of the Illinois Dental Association. He got to be a hard drinker. His mind began to be affected, though a scholar and a gentleman beloved by everybody. He tried red Peruvian bark three weeks ago. He's a well man now, and everybody in Chicago looks at his cure as a miracle. Dr. Noble says in was a disease, and doesn't object being referred to."

I am satisfied that if the physicians in New York will use Dr. D'Unger's discovery, giving it a fair trial, they will do more good for temperance in a year than Gough and Murphy have done in all

WHO IS MY NEIGHBOR?
Thy neighbor? It is he whom thou Hast power to aid or bless;
Whose aching head or burning brow
Thy soothing hand may press.

Thy neighbor? 'Tis the fainting poor,
Whose eye with want is dim,
Whom hunger sends from door to door;
Go thou and succor him.

Thy neighbor? 'Tis that weary man Whose years are at their term,
Bent low with sickness, care and pain;
Go thou and comfort him.

Thy neighbor? 'Tis the heart bereft
Of every earthly gem;
Widow and orphan, helpless left;
Go thou and shelter them.

Thy neighbor? Yonder toiling slave,
Fettered in thought and limb,
Whose hopes are all beyond the grave;
Go thou and ransom him.

When'er thou meet'st a human form
Less favored than thine own,
Remember, 'tis thy fellow worm,
'Thy brother and thy son.'

Horse Talk, If You Please.
It is indisputable that Boone County numbers among its horse population many through whose veins courses the best blood known to the admirers of the noble animal. For several years some of our citizens have been giving the business of rearing blooded horses, considerable attention, and their efforts in improving the stock have been well rewarded, as attested by the numerous 'steppers' that can be found in every neighborhood in the county, not a few of the dashing young men being able to draw the ribbons over handsome and valuable steeds. Among the noted sires now in the county, with a single exception, are the following:

NEDEGORD, JR.
This horse is well known in this county, as well as in many other localities where he has been a successful competitor for prizes. Nedegord is a bay, 16½ hands high, 12 years old, sired by Young Drennon, dam by Old Red-Eye. Among the many valuable attributes of this horse is his kind disposition, being perfectly safe for any lady or child to ride or drive. He is a splendid saddle animal, and has but few superiors in harness. These three qualities make him a valuable horse in this section. Nedegord has many descendants in this county that are now developed sufficiently to give him rank among the best breeders. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in each week he will be at Burlington, and Thursday Friday and Saturday at the stable of James A. Ridwell—$10 to insure.

NORMAN CHIEF
Is a dapple gray, 16½ hands high, weighs 1,620 pounds, 8 years old, and was sired by a French Norman horse imported directly from France; dam, Farmers Delight. Norman Chief is a fine draft horse, and his offspring are represented as being the best all-purpose colts in this part of the State.
We believe this will be his first season in Boone, although many of the farmers will remember the horse when told he was exhibited at the Florence Fair last fall. This horse will be at W. A.
Tanner's, near Sagartit, on the Union and Florence pike, on Mondays and Tuesdays, and the remainder of each week at the residence of A. J. Utz, on the Rabbit Hash and Union grade—$8 to insure.

CLIFTON DENMARK
Is a beautiful bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1,800 pounds, sired by Star
Denmark, dam Jenny Lind. Clifton Denmark goes all the saddle grifts in fine style and has been exhibited at fairs in Ohio, Indiana, and Kentucky, and in nearly every exhibition has left the ring taking with him the premium tie. This young horse is a model in all his points, and when exhibited is universally pronounced a beauty. He is one of the most valuable animals in the county. Clifton Denmark will be at Bellevue on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in each week, and at the stable of John D. Norris, near Petersburg, the remaining days—$10 to insure.

JENKINS' ALMONT
A rich golden sorrel 16 hands high, sired by Almont, dam by Toledo, is one of the handsomest harness horses in the county. This fine young stallion combines the blood of three of the most popular trotting families in this continent, viz: Abdallah, Mambrinos and Pilots, and when but a colt he trotted his mile on Jacob Strader's track in 2:42½. With thorough training, Almont might have been one of the best trotters of the day. This fine animal will make the season at the stable of Geo. W. Gible, near Petersburg, at $10 to insure.

POST HAMBLETONIAN
A blood bay, 16 hands high, weighs 1,235 pounds, sired by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, dam the Corwin mare. Post Hambletonian has a national reputation, and is the sire of many valuable horses. He has many descendants that have made good time on the track, and though considered old, shows more vitality than many of his kind at half his age. He will be found this season at Gainesville, under the control of Robert Sandford, at $10 to insure.

CADMUS, JR.
Is the farmers' model horse, and is a rich bay 16 hands high, 14 years old, sired by Old Cadmus, dam a splendid bay Sultan mare. Cadmus has many colts in this section that will soon be on the market as matured horses. They are developing to suit the farmers or coachmen. Cadmus makes the season of 1879 the first three days in each week at J. J. Rucker's, and the last four at F. L. Gordon's at $10 to insure.

LAKE FORREST
Is a beautiful black 15½ hands high, 4 years old, sired by Ned Forrest, dam a Crowder, Diomed and Gray Eagle mare.
This horse is fine style and action, and makes a handsome appearance on the street. He is under good control, and will be found at the stable of Geo.
H. Walton, on the Park Walton homestead—$5 to insure.

CRIGLER'S DENMARK
One of the finest horses of this county, is owned by W. A. Crigler, and is at Springfield, Ohio, where he is attracting the attention of the lovers of fine horses. This handsome animal is but 5 years old, and has many uncommonly good points to recommend him to those wishing to improve their horses.

JOHN MORGAN
Owned by T. J. Lancaster, is a coal black, 15½ hands high, sired by Young Drennon, dam a Morgan mare. He is a nice harness animal, besides going all the gaits in a beautiful manner, and makes a fine show. He will make the season at T. J. Lancaster's stable, near Sagartit, at $7 to insure.

YOUNG ANNE HATHAWAY
Is owned by Mr. Joel D. Conner, and is a handsome specimen of horseflesh.
He has size, style and action equal to any of the older horses, and is a very promising young horse, which will be admired wherever he may make his appearance.

Shakespeare's Early Married Life.
(Harper's Magazine for May.)
The Hathaways had lived in Shot-tery for forty years prior to Shakespeare's marriage. The poet, then wholly undisturbed, had just turned 18, while his bride was nearly 26, and it is often said now that she did very wrong to wed this boy lover. They were married in November, 1582, and their first child, Susanna, came in the following May. Anne Hathaway must have been a wonderfully fascinating woman, or Shakespeare would not so have loved her; and she must have loved him dearly as the whole man, indeed, could help it; or she would not thus have yielded to his passion. There is direct testimony to the beauty of his person, and in the light afforded by his writings it requires no extraordinary penetration to conjecture that his brilliant mind, sparkling humor, tender and sympathetic spirit must have made him in his youth the very paragon of enchanters. It is not known where they lived during the first years after their marriage. Perhaps in this cottage at Shottery. Perhaps with Hamnet and Judith Sadler, for whom their twins, born in 1585, were named Hamnet and Judith. Her father's home would assuredly have been chosen for Anne's refuge when presently, in 1586, Shakespeare was obliged to leave his wife and children and go away to London to seek his fortune.

He did not buy New Place till 1597, but it is known that in the meantime he came to his native country once every year. It was in Stratford that his son Hamnet died, in 1596. Anne and her children probably had never left the town. They show her bedstead and other bits of her furniture, together with certain homespun sheets of everlasting linen that are kept as heirlooms to this day in the garret of the Shottery cottage. Here is the room that must often have welcomed the poet when he came home from his labors in the great city. It is a very homely and humble place, but the sight of it makes the heart thrill with a strange and incommunicable awe. You can not wish to speak when you are standing there. You are scarcely conscious of the low rustling of the leaves outside, the far-off, sleepy murmuring of the brook, or the faint fragrance of woodbine and maiden's-blush that is wafted in at the open casement, and chatwhistles in nature's incense a memory sweeter than itself.

The Western Style of Boy.
[Burdette.]
A woman gets on the train and says a very warm-hearted good-bye to a great cub of a 16-year-old boy, who sets down her bundles and turns to leave the car with a gruff grunt that may mean good-bye or anything else.
The boy is a little quiver on her lips
as she calls after him: "Be a good boy, write to me often and do as I tell you."
He never looks around as he leaves the car. He looks just like the kind of a boy who will do just as she tells him, but she must be careful to tell him to do just as he wants to. I have one bright spark of consolation as the train moves on and I see that boy performing a clumsy satire of a fox dance on the platform. Some of these days he will treat some man as gruffly and rudely as he treats his mother. Then the man will climb onto him and lick him—pound the very saddest out of him. Then the world will feel better and happier for the licking he gets.
It may be long deferred, but it will come at last. I almost wish I had pounded him myself while he was young and I felt able to do it.

FASHION NOTES.
The newest lace is the black Breton.
A new dress material is called Dam-asse bunting.
Black satin slippers are studded with small steel beads.
Robins' eggs, painted in soft, odd colors are among the Easter novelties.
The imported wraps are of light camels' hair, of peculiar shape and are trimmed with crepe fringe.
New walking boots for ladies have painted toes, and are much higher in the ankle than formerly.
In evening silks are many more varieties of white than is usual, the demand for that color being very great.
They are going to put gold ornaments on the newest thing in the trimming line for the girl of the period.
SATINS in even stripes of black and colors will be much used for dress trimming, and are so glossy that they wear well.
We have this season a reproduction of pale tints, more neutral and paler than ever, cloudy blues, whitish greens, purplish tints, etc.
WHITE morning suits, or white suits for morning wear, are very jaunty and pretty, and are almost invariably made with a waistcoat or vest.
PLAID handkerchiefs and dresses are made up for little girls to wear in the country in the morning. They are ugly enough to scare away the spiders.
DRESS models have a general similarity of character; the expression is reproductions of the old styles which were so fashionable several years ago.
A new fancy is to face the skirts of dresses with red silk, under which the lace balayuse is basted, making a very striking and dressy effect.
YOUNG girls who do not care especially about making "guys" of themselves will ignore the fashion of wearing feathers in the hair for full dress occasions.
The Princess Louise may be seen almost every afternoon on the covered bench to the right of the Speaker, listening attentively to the debates of the new tariff.
CLEAR crystal beads are used on some of the light mantles, and on other silk acorn tassels are set in thick rows on grounds of chenille fringe and moss trimmings.
The fashionable handkerchief is almost wholly of lace. The center is a small square, round or oval piece of fine linen cambric, over which is the owner's crest or monogram.
For black silk, there is nothing so much admired as the long-honored passanteries showing cut jets.
Fringes, also, are more generally chosen for black than for colored silk toilets.

An attempt has been made to introduce feather trimming instead of flowers for ball dresses, but young ladies object, because feather trimmed dresses make them look old. A feather tuft in the hair is, however, much affected.
Some of the new black scicillienne or cashmere mantles introduced this season, have shawl shaped trimming in the center of the back, embroidered with jet, and edged with marabou fringes. Others are embroidered with palm designs, outlined with gold.
Zulu cloth will be worn all summer in place of grenadine. In texture it is like tannin cloth, and is very wide.
It is in plain colors, such as mastic,
fawn, drab, blue and yellow gray.
Some checked Zulu cloth is clear cross-barred with white lines. It is not so expensive as grenadine.

The novelty in hosiery this season,
and it is a novelty in material only, for the style was introduced in the winter, has a medallion of lace upon the instep, in which the owner's name is worked. Many ladies buy the laced ribbed lisle thread and embroider monograms or vines on them to suit individual tastes. So also they emroider plain French hose and open worked cotton ones.

An evening dress for young ladies, called the rose-bud, has been exhibited in New York. It is a cream colored, in princess, trimmed with fine kilt platings around the lower edge of the skirt, and with a box-pleat flounce upon which lies loops of rose pink gauze, with its alternate stripes bro-duced in wreaths of rose-buds. On one side the overskirt is looped up by fringe scarfs embroidered with roses, and the trimming of the waist sleeves is satin shells from which depend rosebuds.

"It's bad enough," said the eldest Miss Crabapple to her seven sisters.
"It's bad enough for pa to talk about marrying again at his time of life; but when he excuses himself by saying that that pert, made-up young thing will help a girl out by attracting men to the house, it's a little too outrageous to stand, so it is." And they passed a resolution to enter a nunnery in a body.

Old Maids and Old Bachelors.
Old maids are useful. They can cook and take care of the children, nurse sick people, and generally play
the piano. Old bachelors are useless.
They do not even know how to drive nails or split wood.
Old maids are amiable. If one wants done that requires patience and kindness of heart, a single lady is sure to be the one to do it.
Old bachelors are ill-natured. They snub children, despise babies and despise young mothers, and are every-so busily employed in seeing that other people take good care of them that they have not a moment to give anyone else.

Old maids are nice looking, and always "maids for their years." Old bachelors generally have red noses, rheumatism in their knees, bald heads and mouths that turn down at the corners.

Old maids can make a home of one little room, and cook delicious meals for one over the gas-jet in canning litle kettles, besides making all their own wardrobes. Old bachelors need an army of tailors, waiters, cooks, distant relatives and landlords to keep them comfortable. When old maids are ill they tie up their heads in handkerchiefs, take homoeopathic pellets out of two bottles; alternately, and get well again. When old bachelors are ill they go to bed and send for four doctors; have a consultation; a manly-piece full of black bottles; all the amiable married men who belong to the club to sit up with him at night, besides a hired nurse; they telegraph to all their relatives, and do their best to impress the world with the idea that they are dying.

When an old maid travels she takes a sandwich, piece of pound-cake, a bottle of lemonade in a hand-basket, and luncheon comfortably in the carriage. When an old bachelor travels he orders a dinner in course at the station, and raves because he has no time to eat it before the "fifteen minutes for refreshments" are over.

Old maids drink tea and it cures their headaches.
Old bachelors drink strong liquor,
which gives them headaches.
Old maids are modest; they think their youth is over and their beauty is gone. If, after a while, some unat-tentional lover is given them, they then take it as a sort of miracle, and hope that people will not laugh at them for marrying so late in life.

Old bachelors believe that all women are in love with them, and that they must guard themselves from traps laid to inveigle them into matrimony.
They also fondly cherish the belief that should they eventually become married men the world, our doctors, to exhibit great taste in women by their choice, and that the other fellows will laugh if their portion be not tender beauty; also, that when they marry many women will expire of jealousy.—Rural New Yorker.

Married Without Shoes.
About twenty years ago a young fellow named Johnson, in the wilds of Cheat Mountains, in West Virginia, made up his mind to be married.
"But you have not a penny," remonstrated his friends.
"I have my hands. A man was given two hands, one to scratch for himself, the other for his wife," he said.
On the day of the wedding, Johnson appeared in a whole coat and trousers, but barefooted.

"This is hardly decent," said the clergyman, "I will send you a pair of shoes."
"No," said Johnson, "When I can buy shoes I will wear them, not before."
And he stood up to be married without any thought of his feet.

The same sturdy direction showed itself in his future course. What he had not money to pay for he did without. He hired himself to a farmer for a year's work. With the money he saved he bought a couple of acres of sandy land and a pair of sheep, built himself a hut, and went to work on his own ground.

His sheep increased; as time flew by he bought more; then he sold off the cheap kind and invested in Southdowns and French Merino. His neighbors tried by turns raising cattle, horses, or gave their attention to experimental farming.

Johnson, having once found out that sheep raising in his district brought a handsome profit, stuck to it. He had that shrewdness in seeking the best way, and that dogged persistence in following in which are the surest elements of success.

Stock-buyers from the Eastern markets found that Johnson's fleece were the finest and his mutton the sweetest on the Cheat. He never allowed their reputation to fall—the end of which course is that the man who married barefooted is worth a large property.

The story is an absolutely true one,
and may point a moral for the hordes of stout, able-bodied men who crowd the cities, complaining that they must starve for want of work.

When Texas sinners get themselves immersed they leave their pistols on the bank. The ministers do likewise.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL,
Editor and Proprietor.

BURLINGTON, KY., MAY 1.

FOR COUNTY REPRESENTATIVE,

REUBEN CONNER.

To-day the Democratic State Convention assembled in the City of Louisville for the purpose of nominating candidates for the various State offices to be filled at the coming August election. The struggle for the nominations has, as to most of the offices, been warmly contested throughout the entire State, but the candidates who go into the Convention in the lead have, apparently, so outreached their opponents before the people, that, with the exception of two offices, the fight is conceded to be settled, and the Convention will be a genuine Democratic lovefest.

For Governor, Dr. Blackburn goes into the Convention with about 900 instructed votes, being nearly 100 more than enough to secure his nomination on the first ballot. Mr. Jones has only 222 votes with which to meet Blackburn's overwhelming number, and it is said that Colonel Jones will, after the Convention is organized, make a speech in which he will withdraw from the gubernatorial contest, and move that the Convention nominate Dr. Blackburn by acclamation.

Cantrill, for Lieutenant-Governor, comes next with 688 votes, 96 votes short of the requisite number to nominate on the first ballot. His friends are jubilant, and entertain no fears of defeat, but, on the contrary, claim for him a victory on the first ballot.

Hewitt, for Auditor, has 756 instructed votes, being within 48 of the nominating number. He and his friends do not hesitate to say he will receive over 900 votes on the first ballot, placing his success beyond peradventure.

Hardin, for Attorney-General, has 801 votes, and his nomination on the first ballot is considered inevitable. The vote for Superintendent of Public Instruction is divided so it is impossible to surmise the result with any assurance that we are correct. Dr. Henderson leads the list with 252 votes. There is an abundance of doubt about this race, and the friends of at least four of the candidates are sanguine of their success.

The race for Register of the Land Office is also in such a condition as to make the result very doubtful, and in a shape we consider most favorable to Dr. Scott's nomination. If the first four offices mentioned be given to the men it is reasonable to suppose will get them, you will notice that nearly every section of the State—the northern, the central, and the southern—has been given a candidate. This being the case, the question of location will make its appearance, and Northern Kentucky will at once rise and assert her right to that candidate. The question assuming this shape, the chances are largely in favor of Boone's candidate.

The candidate who Northern Kentucky presented to the State as eminently fitted for the highest office with in the gift of the people, has not been as successful as we would be pleased to announce; but, while his friends bow in humble submission to his fate, they can point with pride to the honorable manner in which he demeaned himself in the canvass through which he has just passed. Though not successful, he emerges from the contest highly complimented from all parts of the State. Indeed, his mode of conducting the canvass was so exemplary that not one of his opponents dared to attack it, while on the other hand the remainder of the candidates who gave the State a thorough canvassing were assailed from every quarter. It is no exaggeration to say that in Colonel Thomas L. Jones is embodied the major part of the dignity possessed by all the candidates in the field; and, as to statesmanship, he is a giant when compared with either of his worthy opponents. We can but believe that Jones will yet be called upon by the people of this Commonwealth in a manner testifying to the high appreciation they have for a man of his ability and political worth.

The editor of the Aurora Independent rears up on his hind legs, and notifies the public historically, that he has closed his purse against any contribution for yellow fever sufferers this season, and he does not want any person to ask him to donate in the event of the reappearance of the yellow scourge in the South. He is riled about the city of New Orleans spending so much money on its Maridragas, when it could have been expended more advantageously in improving the sanitary condition of the city, and rendering the ravages of the pestilence less violent if it could break out again. It is a fact that such proceedings were not exactly in accord with the eternal fitness of things.

The Boyd County bar is undoubtedly anxious to get Buford out of the way, and to accomplish their desire the members of said bar have in circulation a subscription paper to raise money to assist in Buford's prosecution.

The Covington Press has again appeared, and will be published semi-monthly. Country has an abundance of determination, surely.

STATE NEWS.

The scarlet fever has broken out in Lexington. —Madisonville Times: Burglars, thieves and tramps are about to take the county.

—Democrat: The Kansas fever has not broken out among the colored people of Clark yet, and probably will not.

—Thomas Henry Clay, of Stony Point, Bourbon County, will put in 350 acres of corn this year—all first-class bluegrass land.

—True Kentuckian: Woodford, Clay, & Co., at Upper Blue Licks, have 4,000 head of sheep, and one of their shepherds claims to shear over 100 per day.

—A disease which puzzles the mind and baffles the skill of the physicians has been raging in Vanceburg for some weeks. Many babies have died of the disease.

—Clark County Democrat: Mrs. Florine, of Washington, who gave birth several weeks ago to five children, is getting along finely, and the children are all living and doing well.

—Falmouth Independent: Hayden Yelton has brought suit against the K. C. R. R. for $10,000 damages. Yelton is now playing on the turn-table of the company, at this place, got his leg badly injured.

—Trimble News: The short crop last year and scarcity of feed this spring will cause the farmers to make more than ordinary effort this year for corn, oats and millet, while tobacco will not be neglected by any.

—Owen News: Jamison Garnett assigned last Saturday to J. C. Stothert, Esq., of this place, for the benefit of his creditors. Liabilities, about six thousand dollars; assets, about three thousand dollars.

—Franklin Patriot: The wheat crop is looking well. That which was drilled is looking exceedingly well, while that which was sown broadcast is a little thin, and a great deal of it has been killed out by the cold weather.

—Harrodsburg Observer: A friend who has just returned from the upper counties reports the prospect for fruit flattering. The apples are not injured, and the crop of peaches will be good. The peach looks well in the bluegrass country.

—Trimble News: J. A. Barnett, our Assessor, completed his book on the 16th inst., and reports 1,537 males over 21 years of age, and 1,506 white legal, and 96 colored voters, which makes the total vote of Trimble County 1,602.

Transcript: Fayette County has a beautiful young lady of sixteen, who is equal to Dr. Curver on rifle shooting. With an old-fashioned rifle she recently shot two black birds out of the top of a tree, and two owls through the heads. As an exhibition of her skill, she yesterday centered the mark six times in succession at the distance of sixty yards.

Danville Tribune: Mr. Samuel Stone, who lives about three miles northeast of Danville, discovered in a cave on his place a large quantity of human bones. They were examined and found to be bones belonging to persons of both sexes, and all ages. It is supposed that they are Indian bones, and were deposited there a hundred years ago. The bones are in a good state of preservation.

Lexington Press: The announcement made on yesterday that Gen. Wm. Preston had gained his great land suit in Texas was received with real pleasure by his many friends. This recovery places him beyond the reach of envious criticism, and will stimulate an endless amount of fawning. The rumors of reverse which were discussed a short time since, had the effect of showing the high estimate which the great mass of our people had of Gen. Preston as a man.

John Preston, a half-witted man was murdered, eight miles from Nicholasville, on the Kentucky River, last week. He had a fight over some trifling matter with two negroes, when one of them shot him with a musket loaded with bird-shot. Preston ran toward the river as his only chance to escape, and plunged in. The negroes followed him to the water's edge, and flung rocks at him, finally striking him on the head when he sank. The negroes escaped among the cliffs.

—These Michigan immigrants who propose to settle along the Cincinnati Southern Railroad will find they have made a splendid selection of locality. Coal, iron, lumber, good grasses, &c., are to be found in any quantity. Sheep-raising will prove very profitable, and we venture the prediction that that region will become a great fruit-growing section of the State. All the talk about it being unsafe to settle in this State is a myth. Kentucky will gladly welcome into her borders any good, honest, industrious citizens of Michigan or any other State, who can assist in building up our material prosperity.

The fight for State offices is now reduced to a contest between the political parties. The candidates can work each other for the amusement of their friends.

WHAT IS IT?

In these times that should demand your most careful consideration? Is it how to live economically and keep out of debt? We think so, and have adapted the following plan: "Pay as you go"; spend your money where it will do the most good; buy your supplies where you can get the most for the least money; take care of the nickels and the dollars will be safe; and we believe this is the only

GOOD

Solid basis upon which you can successfully work. After carefully weighing the arguments for and against the Cash System, we adapted it as the basis of our business operations, and we believe this is the only system that is in / for the best / after. The credit plan is, in honor or later, almost certain to cause irreparable loss and financial ruin; we therefore say

Yourself of the habit of buying on time. Everybody knows that the merchant who buys on time or on credit can not afford to sell goods as low as he who buys for cash and sells for cash. He must, therefore, be sure you have found the best price before you buy. Remember, we have no sale, we do not sell certain well known articles or brands of goods for less than cost, and then charge you two or three profits on other things with the value of which you are unacquainted. We keep a good assortment on hand at all

FOR

Insuring to you full value for your cash, we don't propose to be excelled by anybody anywhere. Thanking our friends and customers for the liberal patronage bestowed upon us under our new system, we confidently solicit a continuance of the same; and to those who have not yet called on us, we would say, come and see what we can do for you. We invite you to a careful examination of our goods and prices. Although the times are

HARD

It is a fact that nearly all kinds of Dry Goods are lower now than ever before in the memory of a man; therefore, we are sure you will find it to your advantage to buy now. We have no sale, we do not sell certain well known articles or brands of goods for less than cost, and then charge you two or three profits on other things with the value of which you are unacquainted. We keep a good assortment on hand at all

TIMES

And receive fresh supplies of new goods weekly, consisting of Dry Goods, Notions, Hosiery, Fancy Goods, Ladies and Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods, Ready-Made Clothing, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Hardware, Queensware, Glassware, Table and Pocket Cutlery, Oil-Cloths, Window Shades, Wall Paper, Books and Stationery, &c., &c. Hog Cholera Cured. Wagstaff & Cantler,

Send $2 to S. McGuffin, Rising Sun, Ind., and get a Recipe for the Remedy.

Carriage Manufacturers,

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

This is to certify that I, Ferdinand Rue, bought of S. McGuffin the knowledge to cure hog cholera October 2, 1877. To that date I had lost 54 six-month-old pigs and three old sows. When I left home nine more were sick and two were not able to walk. I commenced giving the medicine, and in one week I had them all cured. I now have 84 fat hogs, well and hearty, and 47 pigs and shoats, which are all well, and have lost none since I got the cure. I was in June 2, 1878. I have raised hogs for the last thirty years, and several years I lost all I had by cholera. Now I know I have a sure cure, and do testify that it will cure as S. McGuffin represents, and has saved me, had I lost the 84 hogs, at 3 cents per pound, $750, and 47 shoats, $2 per head, $94, a clear saving of $840. My neighbors are still losing hogs with the cholera, and I give this notice for their benefit.

FERDINAND RUE.
Boone Co., Ky., Jan. 1, 1878.

On the 26th day of October, 1877, I purchased S. McGuffin's Hog Cholera Cure. Up to that time I had lost 80 hogs that would average 100 pounds, and 12 fat hogs. After got the cure I lost none. I give this notice for hog cholera. JAMES TAYLOR.
Boone Co., Ky., March 3, 1878.

Purchasers will be required to give a $200 bond to keep the recipe secret.

BOIL IT DOWN.

Whatever you have to say, my friend,
Whether witty, or grave, or gay,
Condense as much as ever you can,
And say it in the readiest way.
And whether you write of rural affairs
Or partier things in town,
To give your writing both pith and point—
Boil it down.

For if you go spluttering over a page,
When a couple of lines would do,
Your butter is spread so much, you see,
That the bread looks plainly through;
So when you have a story to tell,
And would like the author's reward,
To give quite size of your wish, my friend—
Boil it down.

When writing an article for the press,
Whether prose or verse, just try
To utter your thoughts in the fewest words,
And let them be crisp and dry.
And when it is finished, and you suppose
It is done exactly brown,
Just look it over again, and then—
Boil it down.

For editors do not like to print
An article last of its kind,
And the general reader does not care
For a couple of yards of song;
So gather your wits in the smallest space,
And win the author's reward,
And every time you write, my friend—
Boil it down.

Training Saddle Horses.

In answer to the question on training saddle horses—says the Country Gentleman, it's not a good rule to use a first-class saddle horse in harness, or vice versa, and horse-men all know that to use a trotter to saddle is to shorten his gait and get him in the way of cantering.

As soon as a horse finds it is easier to canter, or run, as it is commonly called, when going fast, he will invariably take the latter gait. But with the ordinary buggy horse, if properly trained, it will not make any difference. The writer has trained a great many horses for saddle and harness purposes, both in Europe and America, and knows that the best saddle horses in the world are never harnessed until their services to saddle are over. In England, when a horse has been hunted for four or five seasons, he is sold to some tradesman, and then he is good for four or five more seasons for dog-cart or gig. With regard to the development of the muscles of a horse undergoing training for either trotting or running, his muscles will all be fully developed. The horse of all work should be thoroughly trained to saddle and then to harness, as in my experience he will always work to those gaits; that is to say, when in saddle to trot and canter, but never to pace or single foot. When in harness, he will learn the latter too soon. Some people think that a saddle horse ought to pace, but this is a mistake, as the canter is by far the best for horse and rider. I speak from experience, as for the last twenty years I have been in the saddle six days out of seven. In traveling a long distance, the horse which trots or canters will take you over the road with more ease than the pacing horse. A good trainer can train a horse to saddle gaits so that these will never conflict with each other, and on the proper application of the bridle-hand and the legs, the horse will change his gait at any moment.

A Lively Row in Rockcastle.

The Courier-Journal of the 21st of last month, says, in a Mt. Vernon dispatch, for several weeks a party of men have been holding meetings on the Hansell Ridge, above town. They have effected an organization, the object of which is to kill certain persons in the town and county if they escape indictment by the Circuit Court. They have also made threats to burn Mt. Vernon, and to hang some of the county officials. A writ was issued and put in the hands of a special detective for the county, who summoned a posse of men, about twenty-five in number, and with them went to the house of Jess Pittman, near Pine Hill. The man they sought was not at home, and the party returned. Just as they passed Zack Hansell's, who lives on top of the hill above town, the officer and party were fired into by a party of bushwhackers. The fire was returned, and some two hundred shots were exchanged. Two of the officer's posse were wounded, neither of them seriously. One of the bushwhackers was reported seriously wounded. It is not known who the bushwhackers were, but suspicion is directed to certain parties, and by some it is thought to be right.

In a recent summary of political sentiment from 157 localities all over the Union, the New York Times showed that 130 out of the 157 localities indicate a strong following for Grant, while 96 out of the 157 Democratic inclinations showed a following for Tilden. Taking these figures of the Times they show that after all the villainous abuse of Mr. Tilden; after all the infamously falsehoods, and the prolongation of the suit for income tax, the Republicans can not destroy him. The Democratic party is determined to have the terrible wrong of 1876 avenged by the reelection of Mr. Tilden in 1880. That the Republicans find in Grant their only available candidate is sufficient proof that their sole reliance for success is in the fanning of sectional strife.—Courier-Journal.

CYRUS FIELD proposes erecting a monument to the English spy, Major Andre, and now it is proposed that one be erected to Nathan Hale, the first of American martyrs to liberty.

Gems by the Wayside.

The best thoughts are ever swift winged, the dull lag behind.

The love of public opinion is often mistaken for the dictate of genuine bravery.

To abstain from a small thing is more difficult than to undertake a greater one.

God is too merciful to let us have a full view of our character or a panoramic prospect of our vices.

The self-denial which vice extracts is greater by far than that involved in the struggle of virtuous endeavor.

He who dreads giving light to the people is like a man who builds a house without windows, for fear of the lighting.

The cultivation of the heart should be like that of a garden, where we prune and weed before we begin to plant.

The sweetest flowers are those which shed their odors in quiet nooks and dingles; and the purest hearts are those whose deeds of love are done in solitude and secret.

Every moral sentiment, every intellectual action, is to me a hint, a prophetic star of spiritual power to be expanded forever, just as a faint ray from a distant sign is significant or unimaginable splendor.

He can not be called an accomplished or polite man in company who is constantly betraying a fear to offend a desire to please—though his behavior ought to be regulated internally by both these motives.

Men who complain of the miseries of this life are, for the most part, such as are unwilling to practice self-denial or submit to those rules of their animal and moral economy upon which salutary and uniform happiness are based.

The man of knowledge lives eternally after his death, while his members are so reduced to dust beneath the tomb. But the ignorant man is dead even while he walks upon the earth; he is numbered among living men, and yet, existeth not.

Kansas Preparing for the Refugees.

A Topeka, Kansas, dispatch, dated April 21, says: A large meeting was held last night at the Opera-house to consider what shall be done with the colored immigrants from the South. Governor St. John presided. Resolutions were adopted asking citizens to contribute to keep such freedmen as come from suffering, and transport them to localities where they may enjoy rights and privileges with all other citizens, and requesting the chairman to appoint a Central Freedmen's Committee, of which the Governor shall be chairman, to receive such contributions, food, money, &c., as charitable people in all parts of the country shall send for distribution by said committee or its agents, as occasion may require; and this committee shall have authority to devise such other means as the urgency of the occasion and the needs of this people shall demand.

Over $500 was subscribed, and Judge McFarland was sent to Wyandotte to-day with $200 to assist the immigrants there. The Governor to-day appointed an Executive Committee, and a State Committee will be appointed Thursday.

The Turf.

A dispatch from London, dated 22d of April, says: "The American horse Parole won the City and Suburban handicap. An Epson correspondent writing last night says Parole created such a favorable impression upon the minds of backers generally that the final quotation at Tattersall's, last night for the City and Suburban handicap was only three to one against him. The next favorite was Elf King, who was taken at seven to one. Parole was one of the earliest arrivals at Epson, and did two canters yesterday morning, giving great satisfaction. On the Downs, to-day, the Americans cheered loud as Parole bore to the front the colors of Pierre Lorillard. Lord Roseberry's four-year-old, Rodolfo, was second, Lord Wilton's six-year-old Cradle was the third. The last betting was three to one against Parole; twenty-five to one against Rodolfo, and twenty to one against Cradle. There were eighteen starters. There was some heavy betting, last night, on Uncas, another of Lorillard's stable at one hundred to eight against him for the 2,000 guineas stake.

A Whopping Baby.

(N. Y. Sun.)
The largest infant at birth, of which there is any authenticated record, was born in Ohio on the 12th of last January. The new-born boy was twenty-three and three-quarter pounds in weight (the ordinary weight being about six pounds), and thirty inches in height (the ordinary height being about twenty inches). The circumference of the head was nineteen inches, and the foot was five and a half inches in length. Six years ago the same woman became the mother of a child eighteen pounds in weight and twenty-four inches in height. The size and weight of the babe, though extraordinary, are proportionate to the size of the parents. The mother, Mrs. M. V. Bates, of Nova Scotia, is seven feet and nine inches high, and the father, a Kentuckian, is seven feet seven inches high. The London Hospital Museum can boast no longer of its giant infant, which is only twenty-four inches high, with the head thirteen and a half inches in circumference.

Democratic State Ticket.

For Governor,
Dr. L. P. BLACKBURN, of Jefferson.
For Lieutenant Governor,
J. E. CANTILLI, of Scott.
For Auditor,
FAYETTE HEWITT, of Hardin.
For Attorney-General,
P. W. HARDIN, of Mercer.
For Superintendent of Public Instruction,
J. D. PICKETT, of Fayette.
For Register of the Land Office,
RALPH SHELTON, of Nelson.

COUNTY TICKET.

FOR COUNTY REPRESENTATIVE,
REUBEN CONNER.

Dr. Scott withdrew from the race before the race for Register reached a ballot in the Convention.

The State ticket being constructed, it now only remains to give it a rousing majority in August. Anywhere over a hundred thousand would sound right well.

The proposition to call a convention to revise the Constitution of the State seems to meet the approval of both political parties, and the convention will, in all probability, be called.

The Kentucky delegation in Congress, considered as a whole, is acknowledged to be the ablest State delegation in that body, and at the head of that delegation stands John G. Carlisle.

Our Plattsburg correspondent says that tobacco seeds that were sown in soil that is naturally of a dry character give no promise of plants. This may hold good in other localities, and materially reduce the supply of plants.

Candidates for Appellate Judge in this district will soon begin to loom up, and we do not believe that it can be successfully denied that Judge W. S. Pryor is decidedly the favorite in this section, his offering as a candidate for re-election.

Uncle Milt was at the Louisville Convention, and introduced his famous resolution which requires all the county to hold their meetings on the same day when a canvass is progressing. By this means many of the boisterous county meetings are expected to be avoided.

The National View prophesies that the hard-money Democrats and the hard-money Republicans will unite, while the National View will capture the entire soft-money element in the country, which will result in the National party obtaining control of the Government. This is only speculation on the part of the View.

It was a pity that Uncle Milt Hamilton was not permitted to turn himself loose on the plan of electioneering in the late canvass. He says what he thinks, thinks what he pleases, and was full up with interesting talk. That reference without debate clause caused many a great speech to die in the burning--Barnett Logan in Courier-Journal.

The Louisville Commercial says that clean shirt collars and bald heads were numerous in the Democratic Convention. The Commercial attempted to make sport of the ticket nominated, but could find no material upon which to work, and had to fall back on the bloody necker and cry out that the ticket is composed of "rebel soldiers."

Dr. B. W. McCarthy, whose affidavit was filed in the Terrell case at the last term of the Boone Criminal Court, and upon which the defense asked a continuance of trial, was languishing in the Work-House in Cincinnati. He has been in the Station-house, but through the influence of friends escaped his present place of confinement. Up to within the past few years he was respected by all who knew him, and commanded a large practice.

The Paris True Kentuckian gives the following as the amount of salary the several State offices have paid within the last twelve years: Governor, $5,000-$60,000; Attorney-General, $6,000 as perquisites, (estimated) $72,000; Auditor, at $2,500, perquisites estimated, $120,000; Treasurer, at $3,000-$36,000; Clerk of Court of Appeals, at $10,000, estimated $120,000; Register of the Land Office, at $2,000-$24,000; Superintendent of Public Instruction, at $3,000-$36,000; Lieutenant-Governor, at $1,000-$12,000.

It has been stated by some of the Eastern journals that Hendricks is very desirous that the Democrats nominate the ticket of 1876 for re-election in 1880; and furthermore, that he has written to members of the party in Pennsylvania on that subject. Mr. Hendricks has published a letter in which he emphatically denies the accusation, and says: "I did not, as is known, desire the nomination in 1876 for the Vice-Presidency, and do not think it would, in any contingency, be my duty again to accept a nomination for a position which I do not desire."

In another place will be found the result of the deliberations of the State Democratic Convention in Louisville, last week, and of which the party has no reason for not being thoroughly satisfied. The Convention was composed of about fourteen hundred delegates, who were truly representative men of this Commonwealth, and with Hon. John W. Stephenson at the helm as Chairman, the Convention was run with remarkable decorum throughout the entire session. Blackburn and Tatro were both nominated by acclamation, while Cantrill, Hardin and Hewitt each went through on the first ballot "a booming." For Superintendent of Public Instruction, and for Register of the Land Office, the candidates did not have such smooth sailing, and for these offices there was a sharp contest in the Convention. The reform of principles adopted are not as severe on the Administration as many expected they would be, but at the same time are conciliatory in language which is in no wise dubious leaving the different subjects noticed in no condition for a misconception.

The financial question, the Convention wisely ignored, while its feeling in regard to public schools was freely expressed.

The New Orleans Picayune says the whole country might as well stand the fixed determination of the white people of Louisiana upon this subject now as ever. Black supremacy will not be tolerated here. The experiment has been tried, and the record of its failure is the foulest and bloodiest chapter of the history of the State.

The conclusion, so far as the white people are concerned, has passed beyond the realm of debate—it is on the list of fixed and stubborn facts. They are not going to have any more of that sort of a thing, and that is all there is about it. It is not to be denied that these colored people are useful laborers, or under certain conditions they might become good neighbors; but they are not yet prepared to govern to their government. These people clamor for manhood suffrage, and yet, while they claim a vast majority, and propose to assert their manhood by running away from the State! The war has been over some fourteen years now, and the black people of the country have advanced so far as that.

About the most difficult question the next General Assembly will have to handle is that in regard to the Penitentiary. The convicts will be packed in the prison like sardines in a box in a few months more. The dimensions of the State prison are not sufficient to accommodate the rapidly increasing number of prisoners, and the coming Legislature will be compelled to do something with it.

Ohio is as deep in the mud as Kentucky is in the mire, so far as their bloody record is concerned. It was just the other day that two men were shot down like dogs and a third riddled with bullets. But then the criminals belong north of the Ohio River, and that is a palliation of the offense.

The Kentucky Democratic Platform. The following is the platform adopted by the State Convention last week. The Democracy of Kentucky, in Convention assembled, reaffirm their attachment to the Constitution of the United States and the union of the States as the best guarantee for the liberties of the people and their property and happiness. They rejoice in the fact that it is in their power to recognize that all the States are restored to the political autonomy. They hereby record their solemn protest that the popular verdict at the polls has been reversed by the action of an Electoral Commission; and they declare that, while in the interest of peace that result was acquiesced in, yet it shall not be held as a precedent for a future violation of right and justice. Though thus deprived of the control of the Executive power in the administration of the Federal Government, they congratulate the people of the country at large that the popular will expressed at the polls has secured the supremacy of the Democratic majority in both Houses in Congress. In further expression of our views, we resolve that we have viewed with intense interest the struggle between the Congress of the United States and the President, and contemplate with unfeigned anxiety and condemnation the unprecedented attitude assumed by the Executive in his message rejecting the supplies tendered by the people for the support of the army, upon the whole, a condition that no military force should be used at their elections.

Resolved, That we heartily indorse the position taken by our Senators and Representatives in Congress, in coupling with the Appropriation Bills now pending a demand for a redress of the grievances, by the repeal of the existing laws which tolerate the presence of soldiers at the polls, the continuance of test-oaths as a condition for jury service, and the employment of Supervisors and Deputy Marshals to control elections.

Resolved, That, in this great issue between the people and the partisan Executive, we have explicit confidence in our Senators and Representatives; and, indorsing their action up to the present, hereby insure them of our hearty support in whatever action they may take to maintain the fundamental principle that the military power shall be kept subordinate to the civil, and that elections shall be free from Executive interference.

Resolved, That we approve the action of the General Assembly in submitting to the people the question of forming a State Constitution, and we hereby commend the call to the favorable consideration of the Democratic voters of the State.

Colonel Breckenridge prepared the following resolution which was adopted by the Convention:

Resolved, That we approve the measures heretofore adopted to create a general and efficient system of common school education, and we, the Democratic party, to take such steps as from time to time experience may demonstrate to be wise to so perfect the system as to furnish every child in the State the means of a fair English education.

STATE NEWS.

—Both corn and hemp crop in the bluegrass region will be very large this season.

—The coming race for Circuit Clerk in Madison County is exciting great interest.

—There are 299 white school children in Union County between the ages of six and twenty years.

—Our exchanges are reporting the wheat crop in all sections of the State as unusually promising.

—Clark County Democrat: Much of the corn planted in Southern Kentucky has rotted in the ground.

—Flemingsburg Democrat: Last year's crop of tobacco in this county was sold at an average of $8 50.

—J. W. Ross, mail-carrier between Paris and Georgetown was run over and killed by a train on the Kentucky Central, Sunday.

—Burford's trial has been continued till June, when a special term of the Franklin Circuit Court will be convened for said trial.

—Shelby Sentinel: Sheep-shearing now furnishes profitable employment for experienced hands. It is said the yield of wool will be unusually large.

—Independent: Falmouth's tavern and saloon keepers, six or seven in number, will pay into the town treasury this evening $250 each, for license.

—Robert Anderson, a wife murderer, and Webster, the accomplice of George Washington in the rape of the Frances Otto, will be hung in Louisville, June 27th.

—Mayfield Monitor: A man with a big head was on exhibition in town this week. His head weighed thirty-four pounds, while his body only weighed twenty-seven.

—Somerset Reporter: So far, the fruit crop in this county is safe. Teachers in some localities were killed by the late severe frost, but in others they are abundant and doing well.

—The Danville Advocate wants ex-Governor John W. Stephenson for the next Presidential candidate, and says there is not a man in the nation who would make a better President.

—Frank Turner, the Grant County desperado, obtained a change of venue from Grant to Gallatin County, where the trial will take place this month. Turner is now in the Louisville jail.

—Somerset Reporter: The prospect in this county for a large crop of wheat is better than ever. The growing crop is in splendid condition, and more than the usual acreage has been planted.

—Cynthiana News: P. Kenney, of Rutland, gave five goose eggs to Mrs. Stewart, her hen hatched out seven goslings, and there were no geese in the whole country, either, although it's rather a tough story.

—Georgetown Times: Mr. Thomas Burton told us that his entire family, save himself, have either the whooping cough or the measles. Some of his children, five in number, have both diseases, while his wife has the whooping cough.

—Danville Advocate: The most remarkable revival of religion that has ever been held in this city among the colored people is now in progress at the Baptist church on Green street. The converts number nearly a hundred, and the excitement is intense.

—Danville Advocate: The remains of a lady who had been interred in the old graveyard over forty years ago were taken up the other day for removal to our cemetery. It was found that while her flesh had crumbled to the dust, the bones were in a fine state of preservation, and what appeared to be remarkable, the hair on her head looked as though the body had just been committed to the tomb. It was neatly and securely held in position by a large comb, that was also well preserved.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to the Recorder.
WASHINGTON, May 1, 1879.

I am far within bounds when saying that there has not been the same excitement among Congressmen since 1876 as on Tuesday and yesterday, over the veto of the Army Bill, sent to the House by Mr. Hayes. Rather, I should say, it was sent to the newspapers, for it was for sale on the streets before it was known in the House. The manner of its publication, however, or the intention of Mr. Hayes in so sending it to the country, is of slight importance compared to the matter of the message.

Prior to this astonishing veto, though a veto had been expected, there was a general agreement among Democrats that, let Mr. Hayes veto or approve, as he chose, they would vote supplies up to the 4th of December, which the regular session commences. I do not know what may yet be determined on, and there may be enough Democrats in the House and Senate to carry out that programme, but on veto day, and during yesterday, I failed to find one Democrat who favored such a course. The general opinion seemed to be that there was no course open to conservative men except to pass the Legislative Appropriation Bill, and adjourn.

The lesson taught by the act of a man whose title has always been honest, is especially to be remembered by those Democrats, who have all along maintained that Mr. Hayes, however defective his title might be, was still a well meaning, honest, patriotic man. They will not forget their experience of the past two years.

The House to-day passed a bill to do partial justice to Capt. James R. Eads, of the Mississippi jetties, and also, at the same time, to relieve the Government. The Captain's contract provides for his payment in certain bonds which are now above par. The present bill, while paying him for work actually done, directs payment in cash. The work Captain Eads has done in the interest of navigation of the Mississippi is of a magnitude not generally understood. I shall refer to it more at length in a future letter.

Hog Cholera Cured. Wagstaff & Cantler,

Send $2 to S. McGuffin, Rising Sun, Ind., and get a Recipe for the Kennedy.

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

This is to certify that I, Ferdinand Rue, bought of S. McGuffin the knowledge to cure cholera, October 2, 1877. To that date I had lost 64 six-month-old pigs and three old sows. When I left home nine more were sick and two were not able to walk. I commenced giving the medicine, and in one week I had them all cured. I now have 84 fat hogs, well and hearty, and 41 pigs and sows, all well, and have lost none since I got the cure, and this is Jan. 1, 1878. I have raised hogs for the last thirty years, and several years I lost all I had by cholera. Now I know I have a sure cure, and so testify that it will cure all who suffer with cholera, and has saved me, had I lost the 81 hogs, at 2 cents per pound, $160, and 47 sows, $2 per head, $94, a clear saving of $250. My neighbors are still losing hogs with the cholera, and I give this notice for their benefit.
FERDINAND RUE.
Boone Co., Ky., Jan. 1, 1878.

On the 6th day of October, 1877, I purchased S. McGuffin's Hog Cholera Cure. Up to that time I had lost 60 hogs that would average 100 pounds, and 12 fat sows. After I got the Cure I lost one large fat hog, and I know it to be a good PREVENTIVE for Hog Cholera.

Teachers WANTED

A GREAT many women are going into the law business—the mother-in-law business.

Love rules the court, the camp, the grove and the field and the heavens above, but it never loved a gray patch in the seat of your husband's black trousers. That isn't love. That is revenge.

Very often we find women who make an everlasting treadmill of their life—one continual strain of body and mind from morning till night, and when night comes, the time for renewing and regaining strength for the coming day, the limbs are so weary and the head throbbing with such pain that the night is passed in restless tossing and moaning. Morning dawns, but not to find her fresh and ready for the day's duties, but peevish and weary of her work, and sometimes weary of the world.

We speak of those who, by circumstances, are compelled to do their own housework; who have no thought beyond they were born for work, and they must work their life away in cooking and overseeing the rations for hungry, dyspeptic creatures, who have been made so only by her (speaking of one of this kind in particular) own ignorant hands. She has placed choice dishes before their gourmandizing eyes until they have fallen into the habit of complaining if she deviates a trifle from her accustomed indulgences. After a heated round of cooking over a scorching fire, she takes her seat at the table with her family, who come in the cool dining-room, feeling in perfect humor for a dainty, well-cooked dinner, while she is warm, out of humor and tired. She sits down, not to eat with the others and converse pleasantly, but to pour coffee, heat and thus replenish the dish and then that cut a new supply of bread. Is she doing her 16-year-old daughter, who sits quietly eating her dinner, an act of honor, reverence, or what? Nothing, but spoiling her for after years and wearing her own life out. A chance visitor, dropping in for a meal goes away with this idea: "Mrs. A. is so unrefined-looking with her red face, and really I do not think capable of carrying on an intelligent conversation." "Oh, for less spice in our cooking and more in our wives' conversation!" cried a truly sensible man. We would far rather sit down to a clean, tasteful table with very few dishes on it, and a sweet-faced, pleasant-spoken little woman presiding over it, than to a most elegant repast with a tired, over-heated face, tormenting us with the idea that "I have to eat, rather than live." Give your family good, plain food, if you are compelled to prepare it yourself, and take the time wasted on delicacies and improve your own mind, and give your body rest by systematic rule and work, and thus your daily duties may be made a pleasure in place of a wearisome task.

Comfort on Small Salaries.
To the young man who contemplates asking that all-important question, the probable expense of living is an interesting matter. Unless he indorses the romantic theory advocated in story books, that two people can live more cheaply than one, he has doubtless used pencil and paper frequently in contemplating the subject. Below we give the opinions of two lady-correspondents of a Western paper. One writing from Colorado, says: "I think an industrious young man ought to marry and live on eight hundred dollars a year. I have a good home with plenty of flowers, books and pictures; dress well; have an abundance to eat. We owe no man, and are laying by a small sum for a rainy day. All that on a salary of six hundred dollars a year. And please remember that we live in a country where fruit and vegetables grow as easily as in the South and East. We buy everything we need. Surely in the East where almost every one has their little garden spot and a few fruit trees, eight hundred dollars a year ought to be almost a fortune to a sensible young couple with lots of love to help over the rough places."

The other letter comes from Michigan, and is as follows: "Can a young man marry and keep house comfortably on $800 a year? Yes, and quite happily, too. To be sure, there will be nothing left for parties, but all the necessities and luxuries of life may be enjoyed by economizing a little. Here are a few facts and figures: Harvey and Ella live in a large town, a house of ten rooms which they, with their savings, have furnished quite elegantly; they set a good table at all times, dress rather stylish, keep their own horses and carriage, and give much to the poor; this is all done on $750 per year. How do they do it? When Ella buys a dress she gets the best, such as will bear making over, does all of her own sewing and much of her own millinery work. She keeps no servants—prefers to be maid-of-all herself, that nothing be wasted. Neither she nor Harvey drink tea, and Harvey does not use tobacco. They take a good weekly paper and a fashion magazine; buy good books, and never indulge in cheap novels. A pleasant house would be hard to find."

Love rules the court, the camp, the grove and the field and the heavens above, but it never loved a gray patch in the seat of your husband's black trousers. That isn't love. That is revenge.

A BUSINESS TRANSACTION.

Mrs. W. purchased a horse of a neighbor one day. And, lacking a part of the gold (as they say), made a call upon Fritz to solicit a loan. To help him to pay for his beautiful roan.

Fritz consented the money to lend, and gave the required amount to his friend; remarking—his own simple language— "quote— 'Berhaps it was better to make us a note.'"

The note was drawn up in their primitive way—the amount, and from debt, he said: "You give me, says Fritz, 'and den you give me no dot money.' Says Hans, 'Dot hab so;'

Dot makes the removers I had dot to bay, Und I prings you der note und der money some day.'

A month had expired, when Hans, as agreed, paid back the amount, and from debt, he was freed.

Says Fritz, "Now, dot settles us." Hans replies, "Yaw; Now, who dakes dot baper accordings by law?" "I gees dot new, sind 'it' says Fritz, 'den you see, I always removers you bid dot to bay.' Says Hans, 'Dot ish so; it was too chumt so blain. Dot I know wat to do ven I porrows again.'"

KANSAS LETTER.
CLAY CENTER, KAN., MAY 10, 1879.
To the Editor of the Recorder:

We can't say that we people of Kansas are very grateful for the recent contribution from the Southern States, so generously and profusely given, and which still continues to flow from that open-handed land with unchecked abundance. True it is, our streets will bustle with pushing crowds, our soil will teem with ebony richness, and our stormy breezes will odorously remind us of the generous gift. Truly, "Republics are ungrateful." In plain words, "The darkies have come." What is to become of them? Is a question which time alone can answer. We are inclined to think that those who come to work, and will work and stick to it, will be benefited by the removal. They will meet with great encouragement and will be assisted in many ways, owing partly to the well-known Western sympathy with the needy, and partly to the peculiar causes and circumstances of the so-called "exodus."

Quite a strong society has been organized in the State for their relief and assistance, in which our new and popular Governor St. John takes a prominent part. An agent of said society visited our city this week, and after consultation with the citizens, she (she is a woman) concluded that this point should take care of fifty of the "wandering refugees," and they are expected to arrive next Tuesday. That number of good farm hands and house servants can easily find employment in and around Clay Center, but any great excess of that number would overstock the market.

Our District Court is now in session, and has its usual quota of divorce and other civil cases, and a very unusual number of criminal cases to dispose of. There were several prosecutions against the liquor dealers of Clay Center for illegal selling of their wares; i.e., one for sale to minor and two for selling on election day. Only one conviction; defendant plead guilty and was fined $25 and costs, and forfeits right to license for two years from date of conviction. There were also two prosecutions for horse stealing, in which it was brought out that some time in March last, three young men of this county formed themselves into a horse-stealing society. One of them went into the arrangement reluctantly, but was plied with whisky by the others until he consented. On the 15th of March they made their first venture. The reluctant one, under the persuasion of the others, about dusk mounted and rode away a horse which had been hitched to a post on the main street of Clay Center. He sold the horse in Cloud County, and afterward divided the proceeds with his comrades. When first arrested he denied any knowledge of the matter, but finally weakened, plead guilty and "peached" on the others. The most guilty of the trio skipped, "and who shall declare his habitation?" The other comrade was taken, tried, and found guilty, and sentenced to hard labor in the State Prison for three years. The penitent one received a little lighter sentence—two years at hard labor. Both received their fate with apparent indifference, the one meekly confessing his guilt, the other stubbornly protesting his innocence. Their ambition for a hasty fortune will doubtless cool by the time they are at liberty. They will, perhaps, both learn to trade. But our word for it, neither of them will ever steal horses again. The parents of these young men (both respectable farmers) have the undivided sympathy of all; but justice must prevail and its insults must suffer.

Yours truly,
C. C. C.

All that on a salary of six hundred dollars a year. And please remember that we live in a country where fruit and vegetables grow as easily as in the South and East. We buy everything we need. Surely in the East where almost every one has their little garden spot and a few fruit trees, eight hundred dollars a year ought to be almost a fortune to a sensible young couple with lots of love to help over the rough places."

The other letter comes from Michigan, and is as follows: "Can a young man marry and keep house comfortably on $800 a year? Yes, and quite happily, too. To be sure, there will be nothing left for parties, but all the necessities and luxuries of life may be enjoyed by economizing a little. Here are a few facts and figures: Harvey and Ella live in a large town, a house of ten rooms which they, with their savings, have furnished quite elegantly; they set a good table at all times, dress rather stylish, keep their own horses and carriage, and give much to the poor; this is all done on $750 per year. How do they do it? When Ella buys a dress she gets the best, such as will bear making over, does all of her own sewing and much of her own millinery work. She keeps no servants—prefers to be maid-of-all herself, that nothing be wasted. Neither she nor Harvey drink tea, and Harvey does not use tobacco. They take a good weekly paper and a fashion magazine; buy good books, and never indulge in cheap novels. A pleasant house would be hard to find."

Love rules the court, the camp, the grove and the field and the heavens above, but it never loved a gray patch in the seat of your husband's black trousers

LONGING IN VAIN.

BY JOHN M. THURSTON.

Longing for rest and peace and bliss,
Longing for lips that I used to kiss,
Longing for love for only this;
Longing in vain.

Longing for something to "hasten my way,"
Longing for pleasures that fade not away,
Longing for the morning of endless day,
Longing in vain.

Longing oblivion's deep repose,
Longing, alas! for a cure I do close,
Longing release from deadly woes,
Longing in vain.

Longing for what I never could claim,
Longing to utter a cherished old name,
Longing, ah, me! but ever the same,
Longing in vain.

Human Thorns.

There are certain disagreeable people in this world who seem to take a special delight in annoying others by reminding them of things they would willingly forget. They are human thorns, forever torturing their fellow-men for the sake of torture. Has a man met with misfortune in his business, they are forever recalling the fact. Has a man, in times that are gone, wandered into devious paths, they are forever reminding him of it, often by congratulating him that it is past. Has a man blundered, they are forever telling him what "might have been." When the thorn is of the masculine gender there is one way of getting rid of it. He can be knocked down and taught manners. When the thorn is of the feminine gender, the case is different and not so easily disposed of. But Causar hears of one such scourge in petticoats who goes to her deserts the other evening. "It was a little party, where some score of people were gathered together. The thorn sat near a young man, who, in days gone by, had been guilty of follies that cost him dearly. He had put them all behind him. But the thorn took occasion to recall them, in a subdued and confidential tone. The victim, who had suffered the same torture before, spoke up so all could hear him.

"Madam," he said, "for five years I have been trying to forget all that. You have been trying to remember it. You have succeeded better than I. I congratulate you."

Too Much Sleep.

"God bless the man first invented sleep." So said Sancho Panza, and so say we. But there are those who will not feel like blessing the man who has discovered that there is danger as well as health and happiness in slumber. The Golden Rule rises up to warn us that there is such a thing as too much sleep. It says: "The effects of too much sleep are not less signal than those arising from its privation. The whole nervous system becomes blunted, so that the muscular energy is enfeebled, and the manifestations are obtained. All the bad effects of inaction are developed. The memory is impaired, the powers of imagination are dormant, and the mind falls into a kind of heliotele, chiefly because the functions of the intellect are not sufficiently exerted, when sleep is prolonged too much or is often repeated. To sleep much is not necessary to be a good sleeper. Generally they are the poorest sleepers who remain longest in bed; that is, they awake less refreshed than if the time of rising were earlier by an hour or two. We commend this to those who cry, 'a little more sleep and a little more slumber.' It does not affect newspaper men who go to bed late and get up early."

How the President Wrenched Himself.

On the morning following the signing of the veto message, the President's family were horrified to see Mr. Hayes slowly crawling down stairs on his hands and knees.

"What in the wide world is the matter?" exclaimed Mrs. Hayes.

The President continued his painful descent on all fours, shook his head and mournfully made reply:

"Next time I have a veto like that to sign, I'll let the job out. My spinal column hasn't had such an infernal wrench since I used to attend log rollings in Sandusky County."

"Well, I told you not to sign it!" screamed his good wife.

"I know you did, I know you did!" groaned his Excellency, "and if you forgive me this time I'll never be so foolish again. I know I shan't be able to stand alone for six months." And, literally walking on his stomach, the President proceeded to the breakfast room, imploring his wife to get him a sling to carry his backbone in.

"GEMMEN" said brother Gardner, as he glanced at the clock, "we are out of de pint of refrigerant" to our homes. Let de spirit of harmony dat allus prevails heal follow us into de outer world. De wind-mill costs no more'n de humble, quiet-working older press. It is an empty hog-wash dat gins out de loudest sound when struck with a club. In you dealings wid men, do as you say an' save your bief for de buck-saw and wood-pile. — Free Press.

It makes a mother's heart revert to her young days when she comes into the parlor the next morning after her daughter's beau has been around and finds only one chair in front of the fire-place, and all the others sitting along by the wall as if they hadn't been touched for three years.

When to Skim Milk.

[New England Farmer.] Under certain conditions, we would prefer to have cream soon when taken from the milk, or certainly very soon afterward. There is, probably, no month in the year when dairymen are so much annoyed by bad behavior in cream as in November, and at a time, too, when the milk may be kept in a definite period without souring. We might answer that, when milk inclines to keep sweet for a long time, we would prefer to have the conditions changed so that it should sour, and when it sours too readily, we would endeavor to keep it sweet.

In July and August milk set in open pans without ice, and to a warm room, inclines to sour too soon. As the cream has time to rise completely. At this time we would change the conditions so that it should keep longer. In cold weather the cream rises so slowly that it often becomes bitter on the pans. Here more heat is wanted, even though it tends to sour the milk. So, we would say, in cold weather keep milk where it will tend to grow sour in forty-eight hours, and in hot weather keep it from souring in less than twenty-four hours.

We prefer to have milk that is set in open pans ready to skim in from twenty-four to thirty-six hours the year round, and just ready to sour when the cream is removed, but not really sour nor thick, like curdled milk. We prefer to have cream slightly acid when it goes into the churn, summer and winter, because it usually comes to butter more readily, while the quality is equally good as from perfectly sweet cream. Milk that has become so sour as to curdle and remain in insoluble flakes, will be caught in the butter in the form of white specks, much to its injury both in flavor and keeping qualities. Simple souring, in its early stages, is not injurious to cream for making good butter.

How to Get Rich.

The Michigan Farmer reports a conversation with one of the progressive farmers of that State, in which are presented some thoughts which are just as applicable to this latitude. Being asked what the farmers of Michigan needed to increase the value of their lands, crops and herds, "They want," said he, "just what the merchants, the manufacturers and mechanics want; they want labor, capital and brains. There is not a farmer in the State who will stand an application of this trio, work, money and thought." We asked him again what simple and easy methods he would recommend to the farmers from which they could get the quickest returns, and he replied: "First, I would recommend that every cow in the State be crossed by a thoroughbred bull. I calculate that this would add over half a million dollars to the wealth of that State in two years and that it would double the value of the cattle of the State in four years. Second, I would cross every breeding ewe in the State with a thoroughbred ram of approved pedigree, and I calculate that it would add one pound of wool to every shearing in two years, besides improving the flock in many ways. You can calculate the gain yourself. Third, I would have every farmer select the seed of every grain, especially of wheat and corn—that is, to pick out the best and discard the inferior. The profit would be immense, for there is no telling how much can be gained by the selection of seeds."

Now here are three things within the reach of nearly every farmer. They require a little money, some work and a good deal of will power. Was the old man right? Let every farmer adopt these precepts, and then contradict them if you can.

A Few Hints.

Whatever is done on a farm, let it be done well, but not too well. That is, we must act understandingly. If we fail of the largest crop that circumstances admit of, then there is a blame to be attached to us, the planners and executors. If the large crop is produced at a disproportionate expense to a smaller crop, then we are doing poorer than we should desire. That minimum of labor and expense that gives the most profit per acre is what we should desire; and whenever we stint our expenditures so that our crop falls below this point, we are suffering a loss. It is well for the farmer to educate himself to become a calculator. Let him calculate the expense and the profit of all he does. Let him scheme continually to decrease the expenditures and increase the profits. Above all, let him plan his work sufficiently beforehand, so that the labor of the farm shall always be usefully employed. There is many a spare moment—as during a shower, or at the completion of a job—when time is wasted to the detriment of the laborer and the employer. The laborer who is kept up to his duty is the better for it; and the wise employer can always, by consulting the note-book, in which work is entered as noticed, find constant work for all. It may be but driving a nail; but if the nail needs driving, it is better to drive it at the proper time than to neglect it. The wastes of the farmer are immense. Poor calculation, or none at all, is at the bottom of the wastes; and if forethought can be made to take the place of afterthought right then and there is a better farmer.

BONNETS are not worn in heathen lands. Hence churches are not popular there. It requires a new spring bonnet to develop the latent Christianity in a woman. —Norristown Herald.

A LIQUOR SELLER TRULY PAINTED.

BY WILLIAM REE ROBINSON.

I will paint you a sign, liquor seller,
And hang it above your door,
That every passer-by shall see
That you are a liquor seller.

I will paint you a sign, rum-seller,
As you wait for the fair young boy
Just in the mood of mischief—
A mother's pride and joy—
He has no thought of stopping,
But you greet him with a smile,
And you sell him a drink of rum,
That he passes to chat awhile.

CAL. JOHN HANNAH died on Sand Mountain, Jackson County, Ala., a few days ago, aged 136 years. He was born Feb. 12, 1743, and died March 20, 1879. He served under General Wash. in the Civil War and obtained the rank of Captain.
He knew the great American orator, Patrick Henry, when he was but a mere boy in Virginia. Capt. Hannah had never been ill until he was a century old, and his eyesight was perfect at the time of his death.—Knoxville Tribune.

LOUISVILLE COURIER-JOURNAL: Deputy United States Marshal R. A. Burns and a posse of six men returned from a trip to Clay and other mountain counties, where they had been on the hunt of moonshiners. They reported the destruction of eleven houses and about 10,000 gallons of beer at Bush's Store, in Clay County. Some malicious persons entered the pasture where the posse's horses were grazing, one Friday night, and cut the throats of three of their best horses. They were supposed to be moonshiners, or parties in sympathy with them.

On the 15th of March, 1811, the American Republic, published at the capital of this State has this today:
"The President of the United States has exercised his constitutional prerogative of refusing to sign a law passed by Congress. The subject of the law was the incorporation of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the town of Alexandria; the reasons given for his refusal will be found on Thursday's proceedings. This is, we believe, only the third time that any President has thought fit to exercise this right. Gen.
Washington on two occasions refused his approbation to bills presented for his signature; neither Mr. Jefferson or Mr. Adams, we believe, ever withheld their signatures from any law passed by Congress."

SEVERAL years ago, the late Charles Bodman imported from the desert a handsome dapple gray stallion, that is now the property of his legatee, Mr.
H. H. Hoffman. When the horse reached this city, in his oriental wrappings and saddle shoes, he had no other swiftness than that of a snail, and under the manipulations of Colonel G.
Carter Graddy, of Boone County, Ky., he has developed into a splendid saddle horse. He shows all the saddle gaits, including the running-walk, the rack, the pace, and the canter, shifting from one to the other with graceful ease. He gives evidence of becoming a graceful rival in the Kentucky fair rings, of all the saddle-bred stallions to the market. Born. Moreover, his color not only shows his exquisite finish, but uniformly have good troting action.—Cincinnati Commercial.

The following is an extract from the speech made by Hon. John G. Carlisle in New York one night last week:
"I make no assault upon the veto power itself; I make no complaint of its existence or of its proper exercise to accomplish the purpose for which it was granted in the constitution; but I denounce this abuse of it as the most flagrant and inexcusable crime that was ever perpetrated against the liberties of the American people. In these charges made by our fathers against the King of Great Britain, in that ringing declaration which aroused the slumbering spirit of liberty in every civilized land, they put in the foremost and most conspicuous place the assertion that he had refused his assent to laws most wholesome and necessary to the public good, and they did not omit to arraign him also for having affected to make the military independent of and superior to the civil authority. No graver accusations than those were contained in that grand declaration to the maintenance of which three millions of people pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor. They pledged good by seven years heroic warfare, and we are living to-day under the principles for which they fought. [Applause.]
Unless the spirit which animated them has died in the bosoms of their descendants, we will right this great wrong, and the year 1880 will witness the closing scenes in the career of that political organization which has inflicted it upon us. [Great applause.] We have peaceable means of redress, which our fathers did not have. We will not resort to violence or to revolution in any form; we will not hold the Government itself responsible for the wrongs committed by those who assume to be its agents; we will not destroy or impair the constitutional powers of any of its great civil departments—but we will change the administration of its public affairs by an orderly exercise [great applause] of all the rights which belong to us as citizens. [Renewed applause.] We will do it by the assertion of American manhood and courage;
by the exercise of the American right of suffrage, though surrounded by Federal police and spies, and menaced by Federal bayonets and bludgeons [Long-continued applause.]"

Facts from the State Auditor.

(Courier-Journal.)
The report of the State Auditor is always a most interesting document.
It reveals with tolerable accuracy the evidences of either prosperity or adversity. Things of which we may be proud, as well as the things of which we may be ashamed, its columns of stalwart figures and its manifold aggregates are potentially suggestive of what may be reformed and what may be accomplished by a liberal and progressive policy. The report for the year ending October 10, 1878, is before us, and we will, as rapidly as possible, give a partial resume of its contents.

The total amount received from all sources into the Treasury during the last fiscal year was $2,089,954.68; the balance on hand October 10, 1877, was $588,903.93, making $2,678,858.61.
The warrants paid by the Treasurer during the same period amounted to $2,425,639.62, leaving a balance in the Treasury at the beginning of the current fiscal year of $253,218.99. The estimate for expenses the present fiscal year is $1,874,690, and the estimate of receipts from all sources is $1,833,204.78, leaving an estimated deficit of $41,485.22 on the 10th of October, 1879. The number of acres of taxable land is 24,316,255, and the net income is $206,747,187, the average of 1877. The valuation is reported at $192,197,668, showing a decreased valuation of $13,453,031. Value of town lots, $75,461,405, a decrease of $7,372, 000 from 1877. Horses and mares, 366,061, valued at $1,548,807; decrease in valuation, $1,705,079. Mules, 109,171; decrease, 11,808; value, $4,
839,883; decrease, $760,056. Cattle,
565,606; increase, $2,471; value, $4,

The complaints of the drought were coming up from every section of the State, and will be observed by reference to the State News.

There is no doubt but the pine are set up for making Senator Thurman the Democratic candidate for Governor of the State of Ohio.

As yet, there has been no rain in the central part of the State, and the condition of the crops in that section is deplorable.

This general tone of correspondence to the Department of Agriculture is hopeful of a revival of industry, and the surplus of unemployed laborers is growing less.

A TWENTY mile foot race for $500 and the championship of America was run in New York on the 24th inst. John Wild, the successful party, accomplished the feat in two hours, eleven minutes and ten seconds.

The trial of Thomas Buford for the murder of Judge John M. Elliott has been, on a change of venue, transferred from Franklin to Owen County where a special term of the Owen Criminal Court will be convened for its trial, commencing July 8th.

The Southern Hotel which was destroyed by fire in St. Louis about two years since is to be rebuilt on the original site. The ruins are now being moved to make room for the new structure, which will be commenced at once. It will be remembered that when this hotel was destroyed quite a number of persons perished in the flames.

It will not be long till the Grangers of this county will begin to cast about for the time when and the place where to have their annual Harvest Feast. Now, if they will be kind enough to allow us the floor, we will propose they invite the P. of H. of Kenton County to unite with them and have a grand time at Woodside Park. That place is easy of access, and a rousing time can be had there.

The New York Times says of the crops in this State that the hopes of an unusually large wheat crop, which were seemingly justified by the increase in acre devoted to that grain have been lessened through the effect of the long continued drought. The yield may be equal to that of last year, however. Oats and rye have been injured by the drought also. The fruit crop will prove almost a total failure, but the tobacco crop, it is believed, will be unusually large. The Times says the general characteristics of the season were the same throughout the country.

The long wished-for and greatly-needed rain has come at last. A few more days drought and vegetation would have been compelled to succumb. As it is, the pastures, meadows and small grain have been materially injured. The corn that had succeeded in making its way through the dirt with which it was covered was doing no good, and the country began to wear a sad appearance. The tillers of the soil were downcast, but ceased not to labor. The rain which commenced falling Sunday night came down very decently, thoroughly soaking the ground and giving the farmers great mental relief, and Monday, about 10 o'clock, when the rain ceased, vegetation had assumed a healthy appearance, and everything seemed to renew the battle of life.

From the Auditor's Report for 1878 we learn that Bourbon, Fayette, Jefferson, Kenton, Madison, Mason, Scott, Shelby are the only counties in which there is a larger total valuation of land than in Boone. There are twelve counties which have a larger total valuation of taxable property than Boone, viz. Campbell, Daviess, Woodford, Warren and the eight first above mentioned. Boone raises 8,405 tons of hay while Jefferson produced 8,699 tons, these are the largest hay producing counties in the State. The report as regards the increase and decrease in the valuation of property shows that only nine counties have increased their taxable wealth; that eleven counties increase the taxable value of their lands, while Boone drops her total valuation to the extent of $431,248.

COMMENCING with last week, the advertisement of the North Kentucky Agricultural Society will appear bi-weekly until the Fair, which will begin August 29th and continue five days. A long list of special premiums is advertised this year, and it is now only reserved for the producers to make the contests for these special prizes interesting as well as a credit to themselves. The original object of the society was to inject a spirit of neighborly emulation into the farming community of this county, and at the same time extending an invitation to all who desired to take part in the annual exhibitions. It can not be denied that these annual exhibitions have to some extent improved the farm productions in this county, but, as yet, perfection is far beyond the point reached. The farmers by commencing now can, with but little exertion, make the Fair, this year, surpass any past exhibition. Will they do it?

We have before us Special Report No. 18 of the Department of Agriculture at Washington. The report extends to the 1st of April, and from it we compile the following: The acreage of winter wheat now growing is about 1 1/2 per cent. greater than last year. In the Southwest, and especially in Texas, the area has been reduced since 1875. Unfavorable growing conditions, especially drought, have caused many wheat fields to be plowed up for cotton or other crops. The Atlantic Coast States, from Maine to Georgia, as a whole, show a declining area, though some of the smaller ones have increased. Of the Southern States only Mississippi reports a diminished area. The Western and Middle States, Michigan, Minnesota, and Kansas fall off from last year; the other great wheat growing States, however, show a great enlargement. In the West and the Northwest it is evident that the increase in winter wheat area is largely due to the transfer of wheat growing enterprise from spring to fall sowing. The crop of 1879, then, will show still greater preponderance in winter-sown grain. The condition of the crop, taken as a whole, presents a promise of at least 2 per cent. below an average. The New England States reach a full average. In the Middle States conditions of growth were generally unfavorable; fall drought prevented the seed from obtaining an early start. Very little or no injury from freezing is reported in this section where the crop was protected by snow.

The area of rye has fallen off about 4 per cent. from last year. Its condition very closely follows that of the wheat crop in different sections, and taken as a whole, it is 4 per cent. below an average.

April reports show that live stock generally, came out of winter quarters in a remarkably fair condition, considering the severity of the winter. Horses especially, are in unusually good health and plight. The great majority of counties rejoice in the absence of all maladies, and of those reporting forms of disease a very large number state that the infection is not at all severe, and generally confined to very limited localities.

The condition of sheep throughout the country is very good, and very encouraging in the Middle States. In some localities the foot-rot is reported in a mild form. An occasional note of dissatisfaction is heard over the ravages of the dogs. The condition of sheep on coming out of winter quarters was remarkably good in States north of the Ohio River.

In New England, the condition of cattle is reported as from fair to good; no localities being graded as poor. Feeding has generally been sufficient in quantity and judiciously managed. In the Middle States the condition is reported the same as from the above named locality, while in many of the South Atlantic States, this class of animals are in a poor condition. Of the five States north of the Ohio, about 5 per cent. report cattle in bad condition, and in some sections the cattle are afflicted with the black-leg, while in other localities murrain and hollow-horn prevail. In the States west of the Mississippi, less than 1 per cent. of the counties grade the condition of their cattle as poor. In some counties in Missouri the Texas fever appears, as well as in several localities in Kansas.

In the New England and Middle States, and on the Pacific coast, sections in which but small proportions of our hogs are raised, diseases of this class of farm animals are comparatively insignificant. But in various sections of the South, and especially in the great hog-producing regions of the West, great destruction is reported in a large number of counties from malignant contagious epizootics.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to the Recorder.

WASHINGTON, May 29, 1879.

The papers here unite in saying that Secretary McCrary is to leave the War Department, and will accept a Circuit Judgeship. Mr. McCrary has been exceedingly popular here, both as a public officer and a citizen. His record in Congress was good also. He has been a consistent radical Republican, though not an offensive one, and some of the backbone lately discovered in Mr. R. B. Hayes is no doubt due to him. The Star says John A. Logan is mentioned as the coming Secretary, but that probably a Southern man will be chosen. Can this mean Madison Wells? It is not a longer step from McCrary to Wells than from the position Mr. Hayes occupies when he proposes to rule over "States not provinces" to his position in retiring acts to prevent Federal interference at the State elections.

The Committee, generally, are not acting on measures referred to them. The Ways and Means Committee, two days since, decided not to examine any subject at this session relating to revenue or finances. This, and the fact that the House, on Saturday last, adjourned over Monday, "bill day," indicate a wish for an early final adjournment.

The Pension Office is, to use the expressive but mixed language of the Commissioner, "swamped, blockaded and flooded" with letters from claimants under the area of pension law. The reason for this is, of course, that Secretary Sherman will furnish but $2,000,000 per month for such payments, while the claims are prepared for payment at the rate of $5,000,000. The Congress should inquire into the course of the Secretary in this matter. The political situation is this. The Legislative Bill on Tuesday passed the Senate, and on yesterday was referred to a committee in the House, because of Senate amendments. It will get to Mr. Hayes on Friday or Saturday, and be vetoed on Monday. It is understood, pretty generally, that both the Army and the Legislative Bills, without the clauses to which Mr. Hayes objects, will be passed, or that the appropriations from the present year will be extended by resolution. There are Democrats who favor adjournment without passing either, and more who wish to pass a Law, we Bill, but not an Army Bill; but there is little probability that any branch of the Government will be left without supplies. Whether it would be the fault of Mr. Hayes or of Congress if the Appropriations should fail is not the main question. The Democrats have made a good fight for honorable safeguards to elections and to justice. It is no fault of theirs if a weak Executive, first promising support, deserted, and now effectually opposes them. They have done what they could. It is now practical patriotism on their part to keep the wheels of the Government going, and I doubt not they will so do.

STATE NEWS.

—The city of Lexington is again flooded with spurious quarters and half dollars.

—Courier-Journal: Eight or ten doctors have been nominated for the Legislature, and some five more are candidates.

—Breckenridge News: Bob Ingersoll and Henry Ward Beecher would make a nice team for the Devil's family carriage.

—The Eddyville Mirror says scarcely any tobacco will be raised this year in the richest section between the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers.

—The taxable property of Mercer County is $3,583,506. The number of voters is, white, 2,493, colored, 666. There are 2,478 white males, and 664 colored males.

—Farmers' Home Journal: Mr. Danlag Gay, Sideview, Ky., sheared this season 106 fleeces of wool that averaged 104 pounds, and for which he was offered 23 cents per pound.

—Clark County Democrat: Geo. Williams, an old soldier of the war of 1812, and the father of Nelse Williams of this county, died at his home in Powell, Saturday, aged 87 years.

—Mr. Jesse Moore, who lives near Milford, Bracken County, says the Cynthiahans News, has a cat that took possession of some young rabbits and is caring for them with her kittens.

—Somerset Reporter: The recent rains have been rather destructive in some parts of the Fishing Creek valley, whilst other parts of the county are still suffering from the drought.

—Tribune News: Wm. Anderson, father of C. C. C., who was so foully murdered at Northville, Carroll County, some two years ago, died at his residence near that place on the 8th.

—Newport Local: The new legislature to be introduced in the coming legislative campaign is for the creation of a new county composed of portions of Campbell and Pendleton counties.

—Clark Democrat: The apple and pear crop has been injured to a considerable extent by the late freezes, but there will be a fair yield notwithstanding. Small fruits will be up to the average.

—Shelby Sentinel: We have before us a sample of wool recently sheared from the flock of Mr. Ed. Shoen in this county. From 120 head of sheep he obtained an average of 11 pounds from each sheep.

—Lexington Transcript: Farmers tell us that hogs are not more than a foot high, and heading out. The heads are very small. Even with a good rain now, which is not probable, the small grain crop will be very short.

—Cynthiana News: John R. Padgett, who was the oldest citizen of this county, was buried Sunday the 11th inst., at Salem church. He was ninety-five years old, and left a numerous progeny, his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren populating almost that entire section of the country.

—Tribune News: The weather has been very dry for some time; crops of all kinds are suffering for the want of rain. Corn that is up is dying; oats and meadow are up and short and will not make half a crop should it rain now. The farmers are very much discouraged.

—Captain James W. Cluke, of Princeton, committed suicide by discharging both barrels of a double-barreled shot-gun into his head. It is supposed he was laboring under a fit of insanity at the time the rash act was committed. Cluke was a cousin of Senator John S. Williams.

—Owen News: The small grain and grasses have been severely injured by the continued dry spell, and the plant-beds are almost ruined. The oat and grass seed sown this spring have almost entirely died out, while many of the farmers have been compelled to furrow out and replant their entire corn fields.

—Mt. Sterling Sentinel: A Mr. Kash marked and turned in the woods in Morgan County, in 1854, two pigs which he has never seen since. A few days ago some trappers discovered two wild hogs in the woods, one of which escaped; but they pursued the other two days, and finally succeeded in killing it. Mr. Kash identifies this by the color and marks as one of the hogs he turned out 24 years ago.

—Broken Chronicle: Scarlet fever is prevailing in our midst, and carries a little girl of Robert Smith, a little girl of Constantine Steffeder, and little Willie Wilson. The violence of the attack baffles the skill of our most efficient physicians. It is a fearful malady and woefully dreaded by parents on account of its wonderful fatality.

Taken Up.

The undersigned, on Saturday, the 24th took up 6 hogs, 5 of which are black with white belts, 1 sandy color; 2 of the hogs are marked with a slit in the left ear and a swallow fork in the right. The owner can have same by paying all costs having accrued at the present. CHAS. E. WHITE, C.B.C.

WHAT IS IT
In these times that should demand your most careful consideration? Is it how to live economically and keep out of debt? We think so, and have adopted the following plan: "Pay as you go;" "place your money where it will do the most good; buy your supplies will be safe; and we believe this is the only

GOOD
Solid basis upon which you can successfully work. After carefully weighing the arguments for and against the Cash System, we adopted it as the basis of our business operations one year ago. Indeed, this is the only system that is safe for both buyer and seller. The credit plan is sooner or later, almost certain to cause irreparable loss and financial ruin; we therefore say

Yourself of the habit of buying on time. Everybody knows that the merchant who buys on time or sells on time can not afford to sell goods as low as he who buys for cash and sells for cash, for "time is money" (out of your pocket) and "Cash will Buy Goods Cheap." We know what and where and when and how to buy, and

FOR
Insuring to you full value for your cash, we don't propose to be excelled by anybody anywhere. Thanking our friends and customers for the liberal patronage bestowed upon us under our new system, we confidently solicit a continuance of the same; and to those who have not yet called on us, we would say, come and see what we can do for you. We invite you to a careful examination of our goods and prices. Although the times are

HARD
It is a fact that nearly all kinds of Dry Goods are lower now than ever before in the memory of man; therefore we say investigate and be sure you have found the bottom price before you buy. Remember, we have no bait; we do not sell certain well known articles or brands of goods for less than cost, and then charge you two or three profits on other things with the value of which you are unacquainted. We keep a good assortment on hand at all

Hog Cholera Cured.

Send $2 to S. McGuffin, Rising Sun, Ind., and get a Recipe for the Remedy.

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

It is to certify that I, Ferdinand Rue, bought of S. McGuffin the knowledge to cure cholera October 2, 1877. To that date I had lost 54 six-months-old pigs and three old sows. When I left home nine more were sick and giving the medicine, and I commenced to cure them. I now have 84 fat hogs, well and hearty, and 4 pigs and sows, which are all well, and have lost none since I got the cure, and this is Jan. 1, 1878. I have raised hogs for the last thirty years, and several years I lost all I had by cholera. Now I know I have a sure cure, and do testify that it will cure as S. McGuffin represents, and has saved me, had I lost the 84 hogs, at 8 cents per pound, $768, and 47 sows, $2 per head, $94, a clear saving of $860. My neighbors are still losing hogs with the cholera, and I give this notice for their benefit.

FERDINAND RUE,
Boone Co., Ky., Jan. 1, 1878.

Or the 30th day of October, 1877, I purchased S. McGuffin's Hog Cholera Cure. Up to that time I had lost 80 hogs that would average 100 pounds, and 12 fat hogs. After I got the Cure I lost one large fat hog. I know it to be a good PREVENTIVE for Hog Cholera. JAMES TAYLOR,
Boone Co., Ky., March 8, 1878.

Purchasers will be required to give a $200 bond to keep the recipe secret.

 Reply to Rev. L. D. Shaw.
 The Editor of the Recorder.
 There was one, we are told, "who, when was reviled, reviled not again." As an humble follower and laborer in behalf of His cause, I have no disposition to tell my brother what he should do, but I will say that I myself, in no puffed up, doth not despise myself. I fear Mr. Shaw is exalting himself to be humbled. (Matt. xxi. 12.)
 He tries to make good my statements.
 He says: "He tells us the honest man (and save by the spelling-school and wine), yet he says they (the Universalists) furnish the good people of the world with wine, from religious worship to spelling-school, and so on even open" to the wine we have occupied and repaired it, as (if they were not out of possession of the house they came by the keys), it has been wisely occupied by the wine. It has been better purposes. "Rev." Mr.
 Shaw has even been guilty of saying "fuel" our lights! What I said was true of any of good sense, who wished, could do so, and I intended it.
 Rev. Shaw would question my truthfulness as, "if his statement is true," the statement concerning fuel was not made by me, the suggestion of another, but of the gentleman has even misrepresented statement about fuel, lights, etc. I ask reader to look at my own statement, and see how he knows I am right to be true to the truthfulness of it. I would not say, the truth to your humble brother is of the grandest things in the universe, and he always speak "words of truth and sobriety."
 There is an analogy between claiming the to pasture indefinitely, after having laid out the land, and not right to a church having repaired it. Granted that I laid in at first that "the supposed case laying up a rail) is exactly parallel" to repairs on the church. "I deny," and the word is better said, "I deny," and commend to the brother the study of of non sense and honesty. I have told him we are not right to the church. Why, Mr. Shaw tries to cast odium upon me. I willing to bear it, and would rather be cast it upon me than upon the cause of the church. I need not say anything other than from the very hearty and encouraging from the friends with whom I mingle to anyone to whom it may seem to be self-righteous sat in judgment the Saviour, and they will sit in judgment on the friends who will say "all or of evil against them false." I have into the world, "none of these things me." I shall ever press onward.

 nation. I stand by everything as truth and, and can only say to Mr. Shaw that the "self-righteous" authority ("I think the father to the church") authority ("I think community, rather of the Methodist authority, who knows the facts, and says

 ment concerning "the only day" to be false

MARY'S WILLIAM GOAT.

Mary had a William goat.
And he was black as jet;
He followed her 'round all day,
And liked her? you just bet!

He went with her to school one day;
The teacher kicked him out;
It made the children grin, you know,
To have that goat kicked out.

But, though old Whack'em kicked him out,
Yes still he followed near;
He waited just outside the door
Till Whack'em did appear.

Then William ran to meet that man—
He ran his level best;
And met him just behind, you know—
Down just below the vest.

Old Whack'em turned a somersault;
The goat stood on his head,
And Mary laughed herself so sick
She had to go to bed.

A Foul Deed.

[Mayfield Democrat.]
Last Tuesday evening Deputy Sheriff Perkins, of Livingston County, and a Mr. Young, from Arkansas, arrived in our city with one T. B. Edmonds, of the above mentioned county, who is charged with the murder of a woman and child in Arkansas. The history of the crime, as learned from Mr. Young, the agent sent from Arkansas with a requisition for Edmonds, is about as follows:

About two years ago Edmonds, who had a wife and children and lived within five miles of Smithland, Livingston County, left his family and ran away with a young woman to Washington County, Ark., where they lived together as man and wife. Shortly after their arrival there a child was born to them. They lived in Washington County until August, 1876, when they started back to this State. The last time Edmonds was seen with the woman and child was in Johnson County, and a few days afterward the bodies of the woman and child were found on a sand-bar in the Arkansas River.

Their bodies were identified as those of the woman and child seen with Edmonds, and an indictment was found against him for their murder. No clew to his whereabouts could be obtained until a short time since, when it was ascertained he was living with his former wife in Livingston County, where he had been since September last. He confesses to having started back to this State with his so-called wife and child, but says they died on the road near Poplar Bluff, Mo., and that he paid a farmer $30 to have them buried. He strongly denies his guilt, but very strong circumstances point to him as the guilty man, and as they have a prompt way of dealing out justice to murderers in Arkansas, it is more than probable that he will have to pay the penalty for the crime charged to him.

Mr. Young, after getting the proper authority from Judge Robertson, left our city yesterday evening with the prisoner for Arkansas.

An Interesting Reminiscence.
A New York lawyer thus tells how President Pierce made an enemy of James Gordon Bennett, the founder of the New York Herald:
"I was in Pierce's room when Bennett got his tongue. He had been to Europe and tried to get into society there, and was given the cold shoulder. He made up his mind that he would control the United States Government and compel England to receive him. He came to Washington soon after Pierce's election. When the campaign began he favored 'Sevot, but turned about for Pierce as soon as he saw how things were drifting. After Pierce was inaugurated, Bennett came to Washington and spent his money lavishly, and made a claim for the English mission. The Southern element declined to have anything to do with him. One morning when I was sitting with Mr. Pierce, Bennett came in and said: 'Mr. President, I insist on having an answer to my petition.' Pierce replied: 'Mr. Bennett, I will be unable to appoint you to any office whatever.' From that time forward the Herald published editorials headed 'Poor Pierce.'

Is this day, when all the world is going crazy upon the subject of short and long distance female walking fests, one would suppose that the good old art of horseback riding had been entirely lost. Not so in our neighboring county of Scott. On the farm of Mrs. Duval, near Stamping Ground, there has been laid off an elegant track, where the belles and beaux daily practice the graceful and invigorating art without their meretricious trappings. In trial races new beginners are frequently brought in sudden contact with terra firma, but they never mind such trifles, and by the assistance of a gallant knight are soon in the saddle again, determined to profit by experience and enjoy the escape of the next luckless rider.—Midway Clipper.

Your daughter has treated me very cruelly. And the young man was lifted up by the parental boot from the door of his girl's house to the middle of the horse-car track. He arose as quick as he could, and mildly explained that he hadn't finished the work, which was "courtship," and Alphonso was taken under the unobtainable roof once more, and had his pantaloons mended, was done up in salve, and then sent home to his mother. This is true greatness rewarded and impudence rebuked.

The Newspaper Law.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered willing to continue their subscription.
2. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their periodicals, the publisher may continue to send them until all arrearages are paid.
3. If subscribers neglect to pay for their periodicals from the office to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bills and orders are discontinued.
4. If subscribers more to other places without informing the publisher, and the papers are sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.
5. Any person who receives a newspaper and makes use of it, whether he has ordered it or not, is liable in law to be a subscriber.
6. If subscribers pay in advance, they are bound to continue the publication, if they do not wish to continue taking it, they may return the paper to the publisher, and the publisher is authorized to send it on, and the subscriber will be responsible until express notice, with payment of all arrears, is sent to the publisher.

Care of Harness.

The Harness Journal has a very useful article on this subject, which the Farmers' Review condenses as follows:

A harness that has been upon a horse's back several hours in hot or rainy weather becomes wet; if not properly cleaned, the damage to the leather is irreparable. If after being taken from the horse in this condition, it is hung up in a careless manner, traces and reins twisted into careless knots, and the saddle and bridle hung askew, the leather when dried retains the shape given it while wet, and when forced to its original form, damage is done the stitching.

The first point to be observed is to keep the leather soft and pliable; this can be done only by keeping it well charged with oil and grease; water is a destroyer of these, but mud and the saline moisture from the animal are more destructive. Mud, in drying, absorbs the grease and opens the pores of the leather, making it ready prey to water, while the salty character of the perspiration from the animal injures the leather, stitching and mountings. It therefore follows that to preserve harness the straps should be washed and oiled whenever it has been soiled by sweat or soiled by mud.

If harness is thoroughly cleaned twice a year, and when unduly exposed, treated as we have recommended, the leather will retain its softness and strength for many years.

Truly Rural.

A lady who wanted a dozen of eggs fresh from the country was among the farmers' wives at the market yesterday, and the sight of a small bundle of grass in one of the vehicles at once roused all the sentiment in her nature. Snuffing at a handful of it she said to the farmer:

"The country must be beautiful on these spring mornings."
"Yes, so she is," he slowly replied; "coming in this morning I saw two wagons stuck in a mud-hole, a dead horse and more'n fifty crows."

"The same must be beautiful out there," she continued.
"Yes, they are. At sunrise this morning me and Jim were getting a hog out from under the hen house. Puttist sunrise I ever saw, but that hog won't never do no more good in this world."

"I suppose the grass looks very beautiful," she said as the last egg was put in her basket.
"Oh, I s'pose so, but I have bin so rushed gittin' that big ditch finished, that I haven't hardly noticed. Do you folks want to buy any dried pumpkin?"

Josh Billings on Marriage.
Some marry because they think matrimony will be scarce next year, and live to wonder how the crop holds out.

Sum marry to get rid of themselves and discover that the game was one that two could play at, and neither win.

Sum marry for love without a cent in their pocket, nor a friend in the world, nor a drop of pedigree. This looks desperate, but it is the strength of the game. Sum marry in haste and then set down and think it carefully over.

Sum, it carefully think over first, and then set down and marry.
No man can tell just exactly where he will fetch up when he touches calico.

No man can tell just exactly what calico has made up her mind to do. Calico don't know herself. Dry goods of all kinds is the child of circumstance.

Marriage is a safe way to gamble if you win, you win a pile, and if you lose you don't lose anything.

Postal Zoological Garden.
German Postoffices are Zoological gardens on a small scale. According to the Tribune, in the course of a year as many as 40,000 live animals are sent by post, and if crabs, frogs, bees, and snail insects are counted, the total will be among the millions. The Postoffice authorities have the privilege of excluding such animals as may be deemed either dangerous or disagreeable; but, within the last six months, only 30 packages of living animals were refused, among which were an alligator, done up in a box considered so fragile; a lot of dogs whose persistent barking could not be quieted; and a number of pigeons loosely tied in a sack. On the other hand, during the same period, a crocodile, scores of birds of prey, monkeys, serpents, a leopard, and four living barbed-wire were transmitted by post.—Scientific American.

The difference between a man and a house in the winter is, that one is colder when stripped and the other is warmer.

SNAKES IN THE GRASS.

Snakes are lurking in the grass. You must not go very far past. They will strike you as you pass. Who knows what they will do to you? They will strike you as you pass.

What though birds are sweetly singing, Snakes are lurking in the grass; They are watching for your coming; They will strike you as you pass.

There are other snakes more poisonous than these lurking in the grass; And, in spite of all your caution, They will strike you as you pass.

There is a green-eyed, jealous serpent That is lurking in the grass; With its high fangs of Love combined, He will strike you as you pass.

There is hatred's black snake lurking In your neighbor's meadow grass; Oh! be careful how you treat him Or he'll strike you as you pass.

There is Bladder's spotted viper Ever lurking in the grass; Though by great good completely hidden, He will strike you as you pass.

So be watchful on Life's journey— Snakes are lurking in the grass; And, in spite of all your caution, Some will strike you as you pass.

Kentucky Baptists.

[Courier-Journal.]

WINCHESTER, KY., May 23.—The General Association of Kentucky Baptists, which represents a constituency of 120,000 members, assembled in this place at 10 o'clock this morning.

The chair proposed the acting Secretary as a Committee on Enrollment.

The count showed that there were in attendance 125 delegates. The chair appointed A. C. Graves and M. M. Riley to assist in taking the vote for officers for the ensuing year. The count resulted in the choice of Rev. Green Clay Smith for Moderator; Hon. J. W. Haynes, of Elizabethtown, and Prof. Leslie Waggoner, of Russellville, for Assistant Moderators; Rev. C. E. W. Dobbie, of Bowling Green, and Mr. E. W. D. Sealey, of Woodford County, for Secretaries.

On taking the chair, Mr. Smith said that he fully appreciated the honor conferred on him; he would try to be governed by the highest principles of Christian propriety, and would look to the business of the Association. He then called for the reading of the constitution and order of business.

Waggoner and Dobbie were invited to seats. Rev. W. H. Felix referred to what has tacitly become a custom of the Association to recognize ladies as delegates to the body, saying he wanted the Association to settle the question of their eligibility. Mr. Felix then introduced a resolution declaring ladies to be ineligible to seats in the body.

Dr. Graves, of Lebanon, said that the custom of recognizing ladies as delegates was originally introduced as a matter of expediency. Dr. W. M. Pratt made the point that there is nothing in the constitution prohibiting the admission of ladies. He was in favor of ladies preaching or teaching in churches, but we were not here in church capacity. On motion of Dr. Manly, of Georgetown, the resolution was referred to a committee of five. The following gentlemen compose the committee: B. Manly, Wm. Felix, Thos. Rodman, A. C. Thomas and R. H. Buckley.

In the absence of Dr. Boyce, of Louisville, a communication from the Trustees of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville was read by Dr. Manly and referred to a committee of sixteen, as follows: L. Waggoner, M. M. Dudley, Thos. Hall, B. Manly, Jr., S. L. Helm, W. H. Felix, J. M. Weaver, George Hunt, E. H. Black, Cleon Keyes, A. C. Chennault, A. C. Graves, J. C. Freeman, R. S. Henderson, A. D. Rash and T. M. Vaughan.

John L. Smith, A. D. Rash, A. F. Baker, J. H. French, Jesse Gordon, T. C. Stackhouse and A. Fleet were appointed a Committee on Divine Service.

The report of the State Board was read by Rev. John R. Ware, Secretary. The report shows that there had been during the year 1,200 days labor, 1,300 sermons preached, 157 persons baptized, 402 conversions, 112 persons received into the church by letter, sermons preached by the missionaries, $4,482 money collected and expended, $5,493.43. This is what was done directly by this body, but it is not a title of what the Baptists of Kentucky have done through other organizations, there being in the State some fifty District Associations, which have boards and agents of their own. An individual named Lord, a preacher, the $5,000 contributed every year to the support of the Baptist Orphan's Home in Louisville, and the thousands contributed for the current expenses of the Theological Seminary not being included.

When the Secretary had read his report, Dr. Cad Lewis read the following resolutions:

"Whereas, It is obvious that under our present system of collections for missions the work is becoming less efficient, and the people, becoming less interested, need more information on the subject; therefore be it

Resolved, That we now invite the written pledge of all the ministers here present that they will bring this subject before their churches and make collections at stated times during each year for the various missionary objects now committed to agents, or any other such objects as the church may deem proper.

"That a list of all who thus pledge themselves shall be published in the Western Recorder, and that the Forward Association be furnished with the same by our State Mission Board, so that they need not send nor employ any agents in the field thus to be worked up by the pastors."

Dr. Lewis offered the following resolutions, which were referred:

"That those whose names are here-to signed do hereby agree, as officers of our respective churches, that we will at stated periods selected by them bring before our churches the different missionary objects which are sustained by the General Association of Kentucky Baptists, and by the boards of the Southern Baptist Convention; that we will endeavor to collect and impart to them authentic information upon the subject of missions, that they may be incited to a higher zeal in behalf of the spread of the Gospel among all people, and brought to act more intelligently in all their donations. In short, that we will make the work of the left to agents a part of our official duties, and that we will send our stated collections, without compensation, to the Secretaries of the different boards, to be applied directly to mission work. And to this we solemnly pledge ourselves by affixing hereto our names, recognizing the obligation to do all that we can to send the Gospel to all mankind."

"That the State Board be requested to appoint a Corresponding Secretary at a salary not exceeding $500, whose duty it shall be to correspond with such ministers and churches as may undertake to carry out the plan set forth in the first resolution, to superintend the labor of all agents and missionaries appointed by said board, and to make reports to the same as often as deemed necessary."

The chair announced the following committees:

COUNTY TICKET.

FOR COUNTY REPRESENTATIVE,
REUBEN CONNER.

How many of the citizens of the county are advised as to how they are going to vote on the proposition to have the constitution of the State renovated?

Every section of the State has, within the past fortnight, enjoyed refreshing showers, but the rain was delayed till the crops were greatly damaged all over the State. From the tone of our exchanges, we are satisfied that this section of the Commonwealth was suffering no worse from the want of rain than any other portion.

The Republicans of Ohio nominated Charles Foster as their candidate for Governor. The race between Foster and Judge Taft was close. John Sherman's name was not before the convention. It is claimed that Foster's nomination is a victory for that portion of the Republican party now portended at Washington.

The Southern Indiana Teachers Association which convened in Lawrenceburg last Thursday, was strictly a business affair. The attendance was not large, but the members buckled down to their business with an earnestness truly commendable. Such conventions as the one herein referred to will redound to the interest of the publishers.

The platform of the Ohio Republicans is to be found on our first page this week. It is a very remarkable document. Those who constructed it charged the Democratic party with the paternity of everything disastrous, except the recently prolonged drought, which they no doubt forgot in their eagerness to get a resolution in endorsing Mr. Hayes' new policy.

SOME portions of Missouri and Kansas were visited by a very destructive cyclone, one day last week, which demolished houses, barns, fences, killed stock and many of the inhabitants of the district over which it swept. One man was carried to the height of one hundred feet, and after being carried a considerable distance he was killed by being dashed against the ground. The loss of property was very heavy.

FROM the information gathered from the farmers who were in town last Monday, we conclude that the present crop prospects in Boone are not very flattering, but there is no reason for anticipating a scarcity of provender this fall. When harvest time comes we venture all the farmers will find that they have nearly their usual amount of produce to dispose of. On this statement we are willing to risk our reputation as a prophet.

It is currently reported that Judge W. S. Pryor of the Court of Appeals, has advised Judge Hargis, who was recently elected to fill the vacancy occasioned on the Appellate bench by the murder of Judge Elliott, to institute a suit against those who have assailed his character. Hargis, it will be remembered, is charged with having changed the record of his birth, some years since; in order to make it appear that he was old enough to hold an office to which he aspired. Judge Pryor recognizes the gravity of the charges, and sees the necessity of having them investigated. Hargis' contempt for the charges will not satisfy public opinion, which demands that the charges preferred be disposed of. If the accused is innocent, he should not fear an investigation; if guilty, he has no business occupying any place of trust.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

St. Louis, Mo., May 29, 1879.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

In the neighborhood of Cave Ridge, Bourbon County, this day fifty years ago, there was quite a commotion. It was an interesting period in the history of your correspondent. Just exactly what was said and done on that day, I do not now remember, but well authenticated history says I was born on that day, and in the aforesaid neighborhood did I make my debut on the world-wide stage. I know I was born on that day, for my mother told me so. But from that day to this I have never been able to determine, to my perfect satisfaction, why I was born or for what grand purpose was I created. Jobsays I was born into trouble; at least he says man was born into trouble, and the sparks fly upward, and I suppose I am no exception to this rule. Now, be it known, that there is not a man or a woman, at this day, that can go on the stand before a just Judge and an intelligent jury, and of his or her own knowledge affirm as to what would have been the exact status of the world at this day, had I not have been born, while history is replete with wonderful changes in the affairs of nations and men since then. One generation has passed away, and another has come upon the stage of action, since then, and amid the mighty upheavals of society, since the 29th day of May, 1829, I venture the prediction that from that day to this, there has not been a human being that would form the least idea as to why he or she was created.

no am I? from whom, and whether goes I? are problems that the wisest philosophers, as yet, have been unable to solve. It is quite probable, however, that there have been as great changes in the habits and customs of the people in old Boone, within the past fifty years as any part of the inhabitable globe; yet there have been many changes in that staid old community. Fifty years ago there was not a turnpike road in the entire county, and such a thing as a railroad at that day was not even dreamed of by the wildest imagination among her people. The writer, himself, remembers well when it was a two days' journey from the Ohio River to Georgetown or Paris, and what would your people think of such travel at this day? Fifty years ago, the man that would dare stand on your street corners and proclaim that the colored man, at this day, would be a citizen and a brother, would have been fortunate if he was allowed time to get out of your quiet little village with a head on his shoulders. And the man that would at that day have declared that the people at this day could breakfast in the Queen City, and sup in St. Louis, would have been set down as almost fit for the lunatic asylum. And the man who would have dared to predict that people at this day could, with the use of a simple little wire, set down by a nice freddie in the city of Cincinnati and carry on a conversation with his friends throughout the civilized globe, would have been set down as a crazy man, or something worse than a fool. Now, by the way, I have heard many a joke about the telegraph at its first introduction, but one of the most amusing incidents connected with same, to my mind, at least, happened in a school in your county, and by your permission I will try and report it just as it occurred. It will not be polite, at this day, to mention names, but in the fall of 1844, the writer was attending school at Point Pleasant, taught by a pedagogue whose christian and surname express fully the name of a distinguished Confederate general as well as the name of the inventor of steam. And in said school there was another young man about the same age of myself, whom we will call, for brevity's sake, Squire S. We had the same studies, and, in fact, we were a class to ourselves, and somewhat father advanced than the rest of the school, and it may not be improper for me to say that Squire S. was preparing to teach. Our worthy teacher, would each afternoon give us a lecture on some scientific subject or other, and it was the opinion of the school, that the self, that our pedagogue was very fond of telling us what he knew &c. &c. He had been in the Legislature of Indiana, had been through college, and had done many wonderful things. Squire would frequently mention to me, when we were alone that he thought the old gentleman rather overdone the thing, or was working on our ignorance. And now for the joke. On a certain Friday evening it fell to the lot of our teacher to give us a lecture on electricity, and it was just about that time that the first telegraph wire was put up in America. It was stretched from Washington to Baltimore, but neither Squire nor myself had ever heard of such a thing. But our learned pedagogue knew all about it, and undertook to explain its workings to our dull comprehensions. Said he: "Gentlemen, if I was in Washington City at this time, and you were in Baltimore, with this simple strand of wire and battery, I could converse with you 44 miles away as intelligently and fluently as I do standing before you." Squire rolled his big eyes up at me, and I looked at him, but not a word of what the learned gentleman was trying to teach did we believe. No, not one word of it. School was dismissed shortly thereafter, and Squire went to gathering up his books in earnest. After we had gotten from the school-house a short distance, I remarked: "You seem to have all your books. What are you going to take them home for?" "I guess I have," said he, "do you think I would go to school another day to that old liar to save his life?" Said he, "Did you ever hear such nonsense in your life?" He ripped out an oath that "the old pedagogue must think that we are nothing more nor nothing less than two d—n fools, to swallow such stuff as that." He took his books home and never returned again. If memory serves me correctly, the aforesaid young man commenced teaching about two weeks thereafter down on Gunpowder, only a few miles from your town. Now, if it will not be forgotten that I have already stated that there is not a man or woman who can go on the stand at this day, and affirm of his or her own knowledge, as to what would have been the exact status of this world had I not been born. Your readers will pardon me if I give it as my candid conclusion that everything here mentioned would have occurred, whether I was or was not born, but this last incident. Time and space would fall me in an elaborate notation of events and circumstances of the past fifty years; but, before I quit this subject, permit me to remark, that fifty years ago there was not a place in all Kentucky where the poor boy, without friends or money, could procure an education, and at this day, may be found pedagogues at nearly every road-crossing in the county, and I verily believe it will not be more than another fifty years, yea, I believe it will not be more than five years before the good people of that county will have public school-houses that will be in keeping with their known liberality and good taste. They must and will, will you not say? I say on this subject, and if at the expiration of the next fifty years this should be otherwise than herein stated, you may whisper it in my ear softly and tenderly that I was mistaken in the liberality and good sense of the people of old Boone. It can hardly be called liberality, but it is expedient that it should be so, and I am satisfied that the good people of your county will not rest easy till they have better school-houses. Well, there have been many great things and good things done by counties, cities, States and nations, since I became an actor on terra firma, but I claim none of the glory for myself, and as my letter is long enough already, I desire for the present, at least, to drop this train of thought.

There has been considerable excitement, as well as amusement, within the past week in financial circles. The Government has, each day for several days, been paying out $10 certificates at the U. S. Sub-Treasury and at the Post Office, and as $100 was as much as any one individual would be allowed in a single day, it is perfectly wonderful to see the pull, push and rush each morning for each institution. And it may be proper to state here that both institutions commence paying out at 10 A. M. each day, and as not more than $100 a day will be sold to a single individual, the premium of same on the streets has, within the past few days, run up 4 per cent, which is generally paid by bankers and scalpers and bondholders and so on. The rich banker himself can not get more than $100 each day from the Government at par, and the consequences are, one banker will probably employ fifty persons each day to visit these places and get him $100 each. But right here comes another trouble, the first at the counter is the first served, and so on, as going to mill in the country. But in this instance Uncle Samuel is not as well off as the miller, as he is not able to serve more than 25 per cent. of the demand, and by 3 o'clock each morning before daylight even, great rows of persons are filed into both Post-office and Sub-Treasury, and these files or rows (two of them, one male and one female) are composed of all shades and grades of society. In the file of males may be seen the bootblack, the vagabond, the old half-breed negro, and now then a fair specimen of bank-rupt respectability. Each and all these parties crowd in, in the file; many of them never had, and never expect to have as much as $10 at a time; but they get their place in the file, and along they go, and the man of money will come along and these fellows will get their places to them. Sometimes the bootblack, with a dollar in his pocket, will get as much as three or four dollars for his place in the file. But when we come to view the file of females, we are all most struck with horror, and there are generally about as many in this file as in the other. Here we see the gray haired old matron (hired by the banker), the sweet little miss of 10 or 12 summers (probably hired by the banker), and the young lady who is getting in the file with the hope of selling her place, and probably next to her will be the brazen-faced harlot, there for the same purpose, and many of them will stand there from daylight to dark, or until the Government agent announces he is without funds, or the last certificate is paid out for the day, and many of them go home without having sold their places, or making a nickel by standing in the sun for 7 or 8 hours.

Our city, within the past few days, has been favored with another first-class sensation in the way of another bank failure. The Broadway Savings Bank, heretofore considered one of the very soundest banking institutions of the west of the Mississippi River, collapsed a few days since, and great was the fall thereof. My letter is too long and I can not go into details, as each an every one of our daily papers, for the past five or six days, have had from one to four columns of speculation on the part of J. Phil. Kruger, the Cashier, and one M. Golds, a patron. The long and the short of the whole matter is, the Cashier and the last named scoundrel, made way with $300,000 of the bank's money, without a dollar's security for the same. The first named scoundrel is now looking from behind the bars, and the latter has left for parts unknown—and that's the way the money goes.

There is great complaint just now and for the past two weeks, throughout the farming districts, of drought and grain bulls on 'Change are more than happy in anticipation of short crops and higher prices. Business men generally are complaining of dull times; but mechanics are greatly encouraged, as there is a prospect ahead of work for all the artisan labor around us at

CRYSTAL BAKING POWDER.

MANUFACTURED AND SOLD BY A. W. SMITH, OF BURLINGTON.

It is better and healthier than ordinary Baking Powder.

The cost of raising Bread, Biscuit, &c., with it is only about half as much as by ordinary Baking Powder, and the result is much better.

It restores the nutritious elements which are taken from the flour in bolting. No ordinary Baking Powder or anything else used for raising bread does this.

Put up in packages containing 2 ounces, just enough for 25 pounds of Flour.

You hear the people all over the county,
Shouting loud and louder;
And what are they shouting for.

Hog Cholera Cured.

Send $2 to S. McGuffin, Rising Sun, Ind., and get a Recipe for the Remedy.

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

This is to certify that I, Ferdinand Rue, bought of S. McGuffin the knowledge to cure cholera cholera, Oct. 2, 1877. To that date I had lost 64 six-month-old piglets and three old sows. When I left home alone more were sick and two were not able to walk. I commenced giving the medicine, and in one week I had them all cured. I now have 64 fat hogs, well and hearty, and 47 pigs and shoats, which are all well, and have lost none since I got the cure, and this is Jan. 1, 1878. I have raised hogs for the last thirty years, and several years I lost all I had by cholera. Now I know I have a sure cure, and do testify that it will cure as S. McGuffin represents, and has saved me, had I lost the 84 hogs, at 2 cents per pound, $768, and 47 shoats, $2 per head, $94, a clear saving of $860. My neighbors are still using hogs with the cholera, and I give this notice for their benefit.
FERDINAND RUE.
Boone Co., Ky., Jan. 1, 1878.

Or the 18th day of October, 1877, I purchased S. McGuffin's Hog Cholera Cure. Up to that time I had lost 80 hogs that would average 100 pounds, and 12 fat hogs. After I got the Cure I lost one large fat hog. I know it to be a good PREVENTIVE for Hog Cholera.

"THE BOYS."

BY OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

Has there any old fellow got mixed with the boys?
If there has, take him out without making a noise.
Hang the Almanac's cheat and the Catalogue's spite!
Old Times is here! We're twenty to-night!
We're twenty! We're twenty! Who says we are more?
He's sixty—young jackanapes!—show him the door!
"Gracious! at twenty?"—Yes! while it we please;
Where the snowflakes fall thickest there's nothing can freeze!
Was it snowing I spoke of? Excuse the mistake!
Look! here will not see a sign of a flake.
We want some new garlands for those we have shed,
And these are white roses in place of the red.
We've a trick, we young fellows, you may have heard,
Of taking (in public) as if we were old—
That boy we call "Doctor," and this we call "Judge."
It's a neat little fiction; of course it's all fudge.

That follows the "Speaker"—the one on the right.
"Mr. Mayor," my young one, how are you to-night?
That's our "Member of Congress," we say
He's a good fellow, but what's his name?
There's the "Reverend" What's his name?
don't make me laugh.
That boy with the grave mathematical look
Made believe he had written a wonderful book.
And the Royal Society thought it was true!
So they chose him right in—a good joke. It was, too!
There's a boy, we pretend, with a three-decker brain,
That could harness a team with a logical
When he spoke for our manhood in syllabled fre.
We called him "The Justice," but now he's
"The Spouter."
And there's a nice youngster of excellent Fate tried to conceal him by naming him
Smith;
But he shouted a shout for the brave and the free.
Just read on his medal, "My country," 'neath
"the Spouter."
You hear that boy laughing? You think he's all fun;
But the angels laugh too at the good he has done.
The children laugh loud as they troop at his call,
And the poor man that knows him laughs loudest of all.

Yes, we're boys; always playing with tongue
and pen;
And I sometimes have asked, Shall we ever be men?
But I always have youthful and laughing and gay,
Till the last dear companion drops a smiling away.
Then there's to our boyhood, its gold and its gray!
The stars of its winter, the dew of its life!
And what have we done with our life-long toys,
Dear Father, take care of thy children, Tux Boys!

[Deferred from last week.]
WILLIAMSTOWN LETTER.
Crop Prospects—Circuit Court—Accidents—Politics, &c.

Special Correspondence to the Recorder.
WILLIAMSTOWN, KY., May 27.
THE REFRESHING RAINS
Of last Monday saved us from what many feared would be a drought. Farmers were very gloomy over the prospects. The oats were about ruined.
Wheat, which had been looking well, was sickly. Corn had been planted by some two or three times, and in the tobacco beds the small plants were looking badly, and many of them ruined.
Taken altogether, the outlook was very unpromising; but the rain has changed the face not only of the farmer, but of nature as well, and at present the promise of an average crop in everything but oats is very good. The meadows are going to be short, but as they are very heavy, it is thought the hay crop will be a fair one.

CIRCUIT COURT.
Is in session at present, Judge Drane presiding, this being the second week of the term. A large number of cases have been disposed of so far, but the slander case of Nix vs. Caldwell, it is supposed, will occupy the balance of the week. This is one of those cases which which gains it will be the loser.

In a society trial where charges were preferred against Nix, Caldwell and a man named Hoffman testified that Nix's reputation for veracity was nix, as a Dutchman would say, or in plain English, no good. This ruled Nix, and he sued them for damages, estimating the hole made in his character to be worth $20,000, or $10,000 in each case. In the case against Hoffman, the jury, being a subtracting one,
gave the plaintiff one cent and costs, thus reducing the claim slightly. Last fall the jury in the case of Nix vs. Caldwell disagreed, and it is now on hand for the second time. There are about forty witnesses on each side, some of whom are among the best citizens of the county. To listen to those on the side of the plaintiff, one would suppose that Nix never told a lie, and always carried his little hatchet with him to do so; while those on the side of the defense, equally numerous and equally upright, have no hesitation in saying that they would not believe him under oath, nor do they know of anyone who would; in fact, that he is a package of concentrated lies. It is easy to see the dilemma in which such a contradictory testimony

Places a jury, and it is no wonder that the other jury disagreed. There are about a half dozen lawyers, aged on each side. Hoffman, who is a farmer, was, previous to the suit, in comfortable circumstances, but lawyers' fees and costs of court have about ruined him financially. It will be the same with the present litigants; the lawyers will about swallow up all they have got. The case has excited great interest here.

JUST HALP.
New Hogan got a judgment against John A. Turner, the father of young Turner the exterminator, for $500 for legal services rendered his son. Newsaddled for $1,000, but the jury gave him only $500. They would have given him $2,000 if he had had young Turner hung.

POLITICAL RUMBLINGS.
The great topic of interest now in the county is, who is going to be the next Representative from Grant to the Legislature. There are two old "wax-horses" on the track—O. P.
Hogan and Wm. Poyntz. Judge Hogan has a reputation as large as the State, while Mr. Poyntz is but little known outside of his own county, where he is known as an upright, energetic, wealthy farmer, not much given to wind, but a good worker. There is a resemblance in the men in this, that they both started in the world without anything, and both have accumulated wealth by steady, energetic hard work, and are looked upon as two of the best citizens Grant has got. Poyntz represented the county last year and gave satisfaction to his constituents by his attention to his duties while at the capital, and was complimented by his party with a re-nomination. Two years ago he was called upon very suddenly by his party to carry the colors, responded with alacrity, and, although he had but a week to canvass the county, he went to work so energetically and did it so thoroughly that he beat Blackburn, his Republican opponent, badly. Hogan was an INDEPENDENT CANDIDATE

Two years ago, and after a warm canvass of several months, consented to withdraw on condition that Jeff Hogan, who claimed to be the Democratic nominee, would do likewise, and therefore was not the nominee, and therefore was not entitled to the support of the party. The Executive Committee then gave the nomination to Poyntz, who was elected. If Hogan and Gouge had kept on the track, Blackburn, the Republican candidate, would have been elected without a doubt. In a conversation with Judge Hogan, he told me that the reason he was an independent candidate again was that the people wanted him to run, and they desired him to run independent of cliques of all kinds, and that he was running in accordance with their wishes. On

THE DAY OF THE CONVENTION.
It is said that Poyntz went to the Judge and told him that he did not want the nomination, and if Hogan would allow his name to go before the convention, he (Poyntz) would withdraw. This the Judge refused to do, preferring to run independent. There is a large number of Republicans in the county, more than one-third of whom will go solid for the independent candidate. This gives the Judge a good showing in the race, and many predict his election as certain. A large number of good Democrats see that he is the Representative, and did more for the county than any man they ever sent to Frankfort, and will support him this time. It is hard to tell how the cat will jump. A prominent citizen told me with regret that the county was politically a commercial one,
and there is a large number of the citizens, some of good standing, who don't know how they will vote until they see the candidates or their friends, and will probably get their votes. A prominent official said that if he had the money that was spent on both sides of the Sheriff's race last year, it would be more profit to him than to hold the office for ten years; so it is hard to tell what the result of the coming election will be. Both men are ambitious, good workers, and have hosts of friends who will do all they can for their men, and the prospect is that this will be the hottest race ever run in Grant County.

The only feature in the affair is the election was announced himself a candidate some time ago. The old coons have cast such a shadow over him that he can't be seen.

PREPARING FOR THE FAIR.
The many patrons of the Florence Fair will be glad to hear that Mr. Elie
Hogan will probably be at the next Fair with some fine stock, as he is again handling horses, having built a half mile track on his farm and the finest stable in the county.

SKERIOUS ACCIDENT.
Mr. John Leary, of Zion Station, while riding home, in a Cincinnati shyster buggy, one day last week, had a breakdown which scared the horse, causing him to run away, and Mr.
Leary was nearly killed. Uno.

Bob Ingersoll at his Brother's Burial.

My FRIENDS—I am going to do that which the dead promised he would do for me. The loved and loving brother, husband, father, friend died where manhood's morning almost noon, noon, and while the shadows still were falling toward the west. He had not passed on life's highway the stone that marks the highest point, but, being weary for a moment, he laid down on a pillow, fell in that dreamless sleep that kisses down his eyelids. Still, while yet in love with life and raptured with the world, he passed to silence and pathetic dust. Yet, after all, it may be best. Just in the happiest, sunniest hour of all the voyage, while eager winds are kissing every sail, to dash against the unseen rock and in an instant hear the billows roar above a sunk ship, for whether in mid-air or among the breakers of the farther world, a wreck must mark, at last, the end of each and all, and every life, no matter if its every hour is rich with joy, and every moment jewelled with love, will at its close become a tragedy as sad and deep and dark as can be woven of the warp and woof of the mystery of death. This brave and tender man in every storm of life was oak and rock, but in the sunshine he was vine and flower. He was the friend of all heroic souls; he climbed the heights and left all superstitions far below, while on his forehead fell the golden dawning of a grander day. He loved the beautiful, and was with color, form and music touched to tears. He sided with the weak, and with a willing hand he gave aims. With a loyal heart and the purest hand he faithfully discharged all public trusts. He was a worshiper of liberty, a friend of the oppressed, a lover of the weak, and he heard him quote the words: "For justice all place is temple and all seasons summer."
He believed that happiness was the only good, reason the only torch, justice the only worshiper, humanity the only religion, and love the only priest.
He added to the sum of human joy, and were every one for whom he did some loving service to bring a blossom to his grave, he would sleep tonight beneath a wilderness of flowers.

Life is a narrow vale between the cold and barren peaks of two eternities. We strive in vain to look beyond the heights; we cry aloud, and the only answer is the echo of our wailing cry;
from the voiceless lips of the unreplying dead, there comes no word; but in the night of death, hope sees a star and listening love can hear the rustle of a wing. He who sleeps here, when dying, mistaking the approach of death for the return of health, whispered with his latest breath, "I am better now."
Let us believe, in spite of doubts, dogmas and tears, that these dead words are true of all the countless dead.

And now, to you who have been chosen from among the many men he loved to the last sad office for the dead, we give his sacred dust. Speech can't contain our love. There was—there is—no gentler, stronger, manlier man.

A Steam Carriage.
To persons of small pecuniary means,
and also to invalids, says an English magazine, there seems to be a pleasant and valuable luxury in prospect, which will be, within their reach at comparatively little cost. To keep a carriage, however small, involves considerable expense; to hire cars, nearly as much so, and very unsatisfactory; and to make an excursion and obtain the benefit of the air in an omnibus would be decidedly a miracle. No horse nor coachman will be required for this new vehicle, which is sufficiently large to hold three or four persons. It will be propelled by steam, yet without the noise and disagreeable smell or the danger of an explosion, which have hitherto attended locomotives moved by such means. The only burner is a modification of the benzine lamp, and only one pound weight of water is heated at a time;
so that such a small quantity would do no harm, even could it burst the strong half-inch pipe. After filling and lighting the burner there will be nothing more to be done during the drive but to guide the course of the carriage by the reins, and vary the speed, start or stop, by sliding the foot on the pedal.
The small vehicle at present in question goes at the rate of about eight miles per hour on level ground, and about four up moderate hills; but it could be so arranged as to go at a greater speed.
The weight of the steam-power does not add more to that of an ordinary dog-cart than about one hundred and eighty pounds. As to the benzine used in the burner, it amounts to about three half pence a mile. These locomotives make no smoke nor objectionable noise, and are much more under control than a horse; and thus, on account, it is to be hoped that an amendment will be obtained next session in the "High Act," freeing carriages of this description from the inconvenient restrictions still, yet very properly hitherto, imposed on traction engines, on account of their noise and unsightly appearance.

How to produce a telling effect—
Communicate a secret to a woman.

Noah's Mule.

Noah was a good old man, and the tribulations he experienced when he started out with his "grandest aggregation of the world's wild beasts and floating menagerie" could not be told in a week. Not that the crew of the ark were not attentive to their duty, and cheered the old man by spinning yarns on the spar deck and dancing hornpipes, but the season was bad and the animals, somehow, could not settle down and become a happy family, as they do in all well-regulated modern menageries. No act in the old man's life shines out so luminously as his consideration for the mule. There was no long-earred native of the towpath aboard the ark, and it was on this account that he ever held in cherished remembrance that hybrid cross of ass and horse. He recognized how desirable it was to have a mule to make the collection complete, even if it were not a trick mule, but he hoped in vain.
If one had been aboard, some such record as this would have been found in the log:

"Friday, fourth day out—Gray, meditative mule broke loose on the second deck and worked the baby African elephant into a jelly with his hind legs.
Mule feels much better."
"Thursday, third day out—Heavy sea. Ham, Shem and Japhet parted with everything except kneecaps. Bay mule feeling his oats all day. At 4 p.
m. gaily inspected mule's off leg. Convulsions in rear part of mule. One gaily 'missing' and seventeen feet of skylight gone."

But the mule was not there and hence it was that the old man always respected the beast. One of the boys drove a self-opinionated, extra long, eared specimen down to the gangplank, but there he stuck. The boys had never driven a mule before, and were deficient in the language necessary to inspire the beast to move, and it is said that Noah wished within his heart of hearts that one mule driver had been spared to express his turgid feelings. After delaying the ark for two days, and the mule showing no disposition to lift a leg, all hands were piped aboard and the ark sailed.

The log of the voyage, which can be found in almost any European collection of antiquities, shows that a raven was sent out in search of dry land.
That raven was never heard from until some years since, when he tapped upon the lattice window of Edgar A.
Poe's bed-chamber and announced himself as old "Nevermore." That raven is still to be seen in any side-show, and can be detected by his voice.
The general dampness that prevailed gave him a bronchial affection, and he can be spotted, sure pop, by the crosscut saw intonation in his remarks.

But the mule. Some time before Noah ran the nozzle of the ark abaft Mount Ararat, Japhet was reeving the fore-mast, and almost lost his grip when he descried in the distance the self-same opinionated mule astride the summit of the mountain, gazing afar out upon the stretch of waters, evidently thinking that the day of omnibuses had been numbered, and tow-paths would be obliterated evermore.
With surprising unanimity all the gnats, gadflies, horseflies and mosquitoes moved in a body to the mule and held a jubilee on his sloping hind quarters. In the log sixteen pages are devoted to a graphic description of what followed. It is the opinion of some naturalists that from that time the mule became docile, and showed a spirit to have his hind legs fondled by little boys or colored men in search of everlasting rest.

Bodie's Foremost Citizens.
(Virginia Chronicle.)
Scene, Main street, Bodie. Distantly personae. An old resident and a new arrival. Time, 4 p. m.

O. R.—There goes Jack Dalling.
N. A.—Who's he?
O. R.—Why, he killed Tom Wilkins.
He's a prominent saloon man. There's Bill Thompson stepping up to speak to him.
N. A.—Who's Thompson?
O. R.—One of our leading citizens.
Hav'n't you heard tell of him?
N. A.—No.
O. R.—That's queer. Why, he killed Sandy Sowers and Aleck Haggis and put Peter Scagg's eye out in one night.
He's a prominent, saloon man, too.
Hullo! they're stopped to speak to Abbie Dickey!
N. A.—Who's Dickey?
O. R.—Oh, he don't amount to much.
N. A.—Never killed anyone, I suppose.
O. R.—He kill anyone! Pshaw!
He wouldn't kill nobody. Hullo! By thunder, them three's having a re-pull. Hunt yer hole, stranger, they're pulling their pops.

[They hunt their holes. Rapid firing ensues and ceases. Old Resident and New Arrival emerge from under the stove and seek information.]
Time, 8 p. m.
O. R.—I tell you the camp ought to be proud of that feller, Abbie Dickey.
He's got the nerve. I hope the boys will turn out big at the double funeral.
I used to know Abe's father, the States. He comes of a gritty family.
Wonder what his bail'll be?

BURLINGTON, KY., JUNE 12.

AT THE GATE.

And where were you just now, Mabel?
Where have you been so long?
The moon is up, and all the birds
Have sung their evening song;
I saw you loitering down the path,
So lonely and so late,
Beyond the well and the lilac bush,
And hanging by the gate.

I have to hear the birds, mother,
And see the rising moon;
And oh! the summer air is sweet
Beneath the sky of June.
My cow is milked, my hens are cooped,
And washed are cup and plate,
And so I wandered out awhile,
To hang upon the gate.
The gate is by the road, Mabel,
And idle folks go by,
Nor should a maiden brood the glance
Of every stranger eye.
Besides, I thought I saw a cap—
I'm sure you had a mate;
So tell me who was with you, child,
Just hanging at the gate.

Now you know just as well, mother,
That only Harry Gray.
He spoke such words to me to-night,
I knew not what to say;
And, mother, oh! for your dear sake
I only hope he will wait;
And mayn't I run and tell him now?
He's hanging on the gate.

Diseases of Swine.

We agree with the Department of Agriculture at Washington in its suggestion that it is desirable that more correct ideas on the subject of swine disease be disseminated among the people, and that swine raisers should learn to distinguish more accurately between different forms of disease to which their stock is subjected. It is not encouraging to the efforts of science to admit that in a hundred years of practical and theoretical teaching so many farmers are only able to define so many different and apparently distinct diseases of swine under the general and meaningless term, cholera. One has his pig swell at the throat, refuse food and die of "cholera." Another lumps away, first on one leg then on another, and at last limps into eternity of "cholera." And yet another, after a certain wringing and twisting of the head, falls in a fit, and his death is attributed to "cholera" again. The intestinal organs of one refuse to act, and he falls dead of "cholera." The intestinal organs of another act like water pouring over a dam, and, strange to say, he too is a victim of "cholera." With such an indefinite knowledge of the diseases to which swine flesh is heir, it is a wonder that a knowledge of remedies is so limited? Give me some hog cholera medicine," says the farmer to the grocer, and the latter dips him up a proportion of logwood, copperas, sulphur, etc., etc., never asking if the disease is of that character, thousands of dollars have been uselessly expended in this way, and perhaps more hogs have fallen victims to ignorance in medication than to the combined diseases which affect them. An interest of such proportion should certainly be lifted from such a position. The first great step in this direction is the appointment by the Department of Agriculture at Washington of a committee of investigation, whose special duty it was to sum up all the information that a complete investigation of this subject gives. This has been accomplished, and in due time will no doubt be put within reach of the people. The report may be too scientific for many, but it is probable someone in almost every neighborhood will acquaint himself with the diseases, that at end will be put to this calling a dozen different diseases by the one name. Let us in this generation at least, get so far as to be able to say what affects our swine, if we do not know how to cure them.

Conditions of Idioty.

In the annual report of the Pennsylvania Training School for feeble-minded children, for 1873, two interesting facts are noted. The statistics of the institution show that a larger proportion of males than females are admitted, the ratio being greater than can be explained except on the presumption that idioty, like other infirmities, strikes with the most severity the male; also, that in the order of birth nearly half the idiots are first-born children, a fact strongly suggestive of a special line of inheritance to which the first-born are peculiarly liable, and to which they so often succumb either in death or in chronic disease. These disadvantages, the superintendent remarks, are often a sad recollection of the young mother's unfitness for nourishment, or intelligent care of her offspring. It is also noted that of the whole number, 238, present in the institution at this date, 130 are half orphans and 74 whole orphans. The startling fact would seem to prove the assumption of some writers, that idioty is one of the results of a race, by which, after a long exposure to debilitating influences and excesses, it ends in premature death, in scrofula, idioty, or sterility.—Scientific American.

A rich old man was jealous of his young and pretty wife. Falling sick in due time, and feeling that he was about to die, he instructed his wife to his bedside and bequeathed her, as a last favor, with tears in his poor old eyes, not to marry the object of his jealousy, a neighbor, whom he was gone. "I will not," said the beautiful woman—"I will not, my dear husband; be in no concern for me; nay, I could not, for I have for some years past, been engaged to another."

FASHION NOTES.

Pictures of dress materials are favored. The Carmen and Capello are the latest bonnets.

The taste for black silk mittens is on the decrease.

BELTS are much worn with all the styles of costumes.

If the panier is not becoming to the figure it is not adopted.

OLD gold braid edges the brims of the new black clip bonnets.

SLEEVES for thin material are either shirred or lengthwise pleated.

A NEW and pretty design for a lace-pin is a sheaf of wheat in dead gold.

WALKING skirts, when plain, are made from two to two and a half yards wide.

THE stylish shoulder-capes are made of Bengaline, and are trimmed with jet lace.

VESTS with basque models are very popular; sometimes lace is used instead of a vest.

CUFFS to sleeves are all made small and lie close. They are trimmed to match the dress.

FASHION calls for colored gros grain silks in the make up of a rich trowsers for a model summer resort.

"HAVE you cleaned house yet?" is the first question ladies are required to answer in an intelligence office.

LONG sacques for house wear are called matinees. These are worn in preference to the elaborate morning robes.

HANDSOME stockings are of cotton, of British Balbriggan manufacture, and sprigged all over with embroidered blossoms.

SLIPPERS are more fashionable for house wear than sandals. They are trimmed with satin bows, set with crystal buckles.

CREPE lisse lingerie is more worn this summer than ever, and nothing is more becoming than this soft material at throat and wrist.

MAUVE color is much in favor this spring; that is, as much in favor as color not becoming to all styles and complexions can be.

It is the fashion to have the stems show in the bouquets worn in the belt. The new holders are ornamented with fans of Rhine pebbles.

BLACK and white sashes are worn with black dresses. They are draped under the back of the sacque with long broad loops and fringed ends showing.

MUSLIN handkerchiefs embroidered in colors are caught into a little puff in the center, held by a cluster of flowers, and worn either at the throat or on the head.

SNOUT veils at the back of the head are preferred by American brides; the snout veils to the bonnets always worn by the English ladies who appear in the same capacity.

YOUNG men who intend having their hair cut close to the scalp or shaved this summer might produce quite a picturesque effect by having their heads frescoed.

APPLIQUE work is quite conspicuous in dress designs. This fashion of toilet beautifying has a rich expression, superior in many respects to other costly garnitures.

THESE are a number novel conceits in fancy breakfast caps. Those arranged with silk handkerchiefs are very pretty. "Mob" caps are made of lace and Swiss muslin.

THE standing collar around the neck of a dress is now covered with shirring to match the trimmings. The drawing strings pass around the collar, not up and upon it.

WHAT are called cheese-cloth suits are dresses made of unbleached muslin, and trimmed with rows of woolen skirt braid, or else bias red and yellow plaids in handkerchief patterns.

THE sashes that have been laid aside for many years are seen again, and the overdresses of last season are all being remodeled by merely making the long row draperies shorter and higher.

THE newest breakfast sacques have insertions of Breton lace down the front between rows of tucks, and are trimmed around the collar, sleeves and bottom with gathered or plaited Breton lace.

WHILE very gay colors are again fashionable in costumes for the street and for day wear, it is a subject of remark that white and black toilets predominate in the evening when full dress is worn.

THE black dresses so much worn in the evening by older ladies have usually satin for a foundation, as its luster is needed to brighten the effect, and white lace is again in favor for trimming black.

LAWNS coming with floral borders are made up into dressy toilet designs for watering place wear. Some of the patterns are wonderfully artistic, and the models are rich with lace trimmings and ribbon bows.

PLAIN-COLORED raw silk stockings are now selling cheaper than the lisle thread stockings. They are cloaked on the instep and ankle in self and contrasting colors, and sell readily to ladies who like soft and cool hosiery.

BARELY and grenadine dresses are partly of the plain fabric and partly striped or broadened. They are trimmed with knife pleatings of the material, or else with blonde lace which is sometimes beaded. They are invariably made up over silk.

JUST THE SAME.

The girls are planning to get a beau—
They dress for party, ball and show,
And the old folks tell us it's no use.
When they were young and used to get
But the difference is really no more or less Than a little change in the style of dress.
And human nature itself, you see,
Lost the same it used to be.

After the verses and prayers are said,
The old folks light the boys to bed,
And they, as still as the boys were dead,
Till daddy goes off in his dreams instead;
Then down the back stairs they steal and show
With their boots in their hands, away they Go.

The old man laughs in the morning to see
It's just the same as it used to be!
These good old maids are waiting yet;
Our love affairs they and I fret—
Of girls they never saw such a set—
Every one is a silly coquette;
But if backward something like forty years
They would carry their middle-aged eyes
And ears.

In fits and franks of their own they'd see
It's just the same as it used to be.
Of course to the age, 'tis right to hold
The years they were happy the best that Could.

But the truth is plain and ought to be told,
That the world grows better in growing old;
And only love in its show and flame,
Is ever changing and yet the same—
Freaks of fashion and change, you see,
But it's just the same as it used to be.

A TRIP TO NIAGARA FALLS.

PORTSMOUTH, O., June 4, 1879.
To the Editor of the Recorder:

It is not our purpose to write a descriptive letter; that would be an endless and thankless task; but, if your kindness will permit, through the medium of your excellent paper, we will give a short account of our visit to Niagara Falls.

We were a jolly party of excursionists, consisting of about 400 souls, who left Portsmouth, Ohio, on Thursday,
May 29th, at 12:15 p. m., for Niagara
City, N. Y. Passing through Delaware, Columbus, Cleveland and Buffalo, we arrived at Niagara on the following morning at 5:15.

Our party was accompanied by the excursion agent from the train direct to Prospect Park, where ample time was given to partake of refreshments, after which we got our packages checked at the Pavilion free of charge. We then proceeded to visit Goat, Luna and the Three Sisters Islands, which are on the American side. These islands are connected by foot bridges. The finest rapids in the world are those at the Sister Islands, on the back of Goat Island, a short distance above the great falls. At the farthest point of the Sister Islands, the view which spreads out before the eye of the traveler is one of magnificence and grandeur. The visit to the islands occupied until noon, when we returned to Prospect Park for dinner.

After dinner we rode down the "Inclined Railway" to the river through the American Falls. Looking up from the "Shadow of the Rock" dressing-room at the water as it comes over the fall, the observer appreciates a grandeur that has no parallel. We then returned to Prospect Point, where much time was spent in carefully studying the wonders of Niagara. The roar of the water is incessant, sometimes being heard at a great distance. Clouds of spray are constantly rising, and from one to three rainbows are visible at any hour when the sun is shining.

We next visited Canada by crossing the Upper Suspension Bridge, which is the largest span in the world, being a quarter of a mile in length and 200 feet above the water. The falls from the Canadian shore are viewed in the distance, and one can but be inspired with this great and wondrous work of Nature. Three of our party, W. C.
Ward, S. Shelly and myself, passed under the fall while on the Canadian side.

At 5 o'clock we returned to Prospect Park for supper, and left at 6 o'clock for Portsmouth, where we arrived on the following day at noon.
THETA.

COL. MEERS lived by himself in Hardin County, Iowa, and his neighbors supposed he was a bachelor. Last winter a woman and a boy arrived in the place, announced themselves as "Meek's wife and son," and were received by him with seemingly joy. He said he parted from his wife many years ago in England, but was glad to get her back. She was immediately installed as mistress of his household.
A month ago a woman registered at the village hotel as Mrs. Meers, and explained that she was the wife of Colonel Meers, who having married her while at the hotel. This over supply of long-lost wives does not seem to cause him much trouble. One wife remains in a contented possession of the home, while the other is apparently as happy in possession of the man.

I've a letter from your ma,
Mary Jane, Mary Jane,
She is coming here to stay,
And she'll never go away,
And the best will be to pay,
Mary Jane, Mary Jane.

A CORSET-MAKER out of work thus ventured her complaint: "Shame that I should be without bread—I who have stayed the stomachs of thousands."

Counterfeiting Silver Coins.

Coin counterfeiters direct their attention chiefly to the quarter and half dollar silver pieces, though they by no means confine themselves thereto. The outfit for the work consists of a few genuine coins, some antimony, lead, type metal, pulverized glass, a small galvanic battery, a crude milling machine and a moderate supply of plaster of Paris. With the plaster of Paris they make models (very perfect ones) of the coin. Sometimes in one mold there will be cavities exactly the size of all the silver coins, with the impression of one side on one-half the mold, and the other bearing the facsimile of the reverse. The base metal —antimony, lead, type metal and pulverized glass (though tin is sometimes used)—is melted and poured into the mold. When sufficiently cooled, the metal is taken out. The coin has dingy, rough and not at all deceiving look. It is smoothed with a knife as far as possible, the rough edges being cut off. It is next run edgewise through a small milling machine, which generally consists of two small cogged wheels. This makes the notches around the edges. All that is now left to give the coin the appearance of genuine money is a coating of silver. This the counterfeiter secures from genuine coins. The genuine coin, submitted to the action of the battery, soon loses some of its silver. Before it is sufficiently dissolved to totally deface it, the coin is taken out. Enough genuine silver is in this way obtained from a single coin to plate a dozen counterfeits, and the original, after the operation, looks as if it were but a little worn, and can be readily passed. This process is called "sweating." The work is very simple. A good hand at the business can make his molds from plaster of Paris and begin turning out the spurious pieces all in two or three hours. In counterfeiting gold coin the same method is pursued, a genuine gold coin substituted for the silver one in the sweating being the only change. It is much more difficult, however, to get a decent looking gold counterfeit than it is one of silver; therefore there is not much doing in that line of business. The use of pulverized glass in the composition of the counterfeit coin is for the purpose of giving them a "ring" something like that possessed by the genuine metal.
They can always be detected, however,
by their weight never being as heavy as the genuine.—Exchange.

The Jews in Russia.

[Jewish World.]
Not the least among the many abuses which have combined to bring Russia into her present state of social and political disorganization are the unjust laws and restrictions under which the Jews in that country are still laboring —laws, the bigotry and intolerance of which is sufficient to rouse the indignation, not only of the sufferers themselves and of their brethren throughout the world, but also of all liberal and right-thinking men, whatever their creed and nationality. In Russia there are not less than 3,000,000 Jews, living under a regime and enduring a condition of things which is a disgrace to any civilized community. The Russian Jew is compelled to pay taxes and is liable for military service, and yet he has no chance of enjoying the same privileges as his more fortunate fellow-subjects; though, certainly, he may purchase his freedom at the expense of his conscience by renouncing the religion of his fathers and joining the "orthodox" church, for all governments have one end in view, viz., proselytism.
There is a law still existing, though, fortunately, it is not enforced, which declares that even if there be a criminal charge against a Jew, he may wipe out his guilt and free himself from punishment by becoming a convert to the Russian church. The crime(?) of Judaism is the one of all others to be most heavily punished; justice on the one hand, should be quite secondary consideration. According to the Julische Presse, a Jew who gets converted may marry a Christian woman without being divorced from his Jewish wife, if he has been previously married; while the deserted Jewish wife must support herself and her children and does not possess the right of marrying again. The Jewish subjects of Russia have, through their industry and talents, become necessary to the State; where they have been banished (as by the law passed in 1864, forbidding them to own land in the Western provinces) industry and commerce have invariably suffered; and for this cause alone, even were there no other, the Jews of Russia have a right to claim something more than the bare toleration which is afforded them throughout this gigantic and misgoverned empire.

Does Marking Their Location.

I am a "beekeeper" on a small scale, and handle only Italians. I consider them better than the blacks in every respect, for this latitude. I have, for the last two years, been very closely confined to book-keeping, and in order to pay more attention to my bees placed the hives above my office—in the end of the store—and bored holes through the planks to let my bees go out. They have done finely, and I have found them profitable.

The latter part of the summer the house was whitewashed and the workman did the work on the end of the house where my bees were early in the morning, thinking he would be annoyed by the bees if he waited till they commenced working very rapidly, later in the day. He did not finish until late in the morning, and most of the bees were out at work. I noticed that they did not go in at the holes when they came back from work, but flew around in circles in front, and seemed very much distressed. I found that the longer I waited the worse they behaved, until there were only a few swarms (in numbers) on the wing.

I threw water on them and waited some time, but it did no good; then I went to my office, and out five blocks of thin wood, about four inches square, and painted them all different colors;
put a ladder up to the end of the store and nailed a block about three inches above each hole, and in less than ten minutes my bees had settled down to their regular stream of workers, going and coming with their loads of honey and pollen.

Now, if any of the readers of the Bee Journal are not convinced that the bee can see, and can mark the hive in which it belongs, let them try experiments, and see how quickly they become confused and bewildered.—F.
P. Turner in American Bee Journal.

A Pair of Recipes.

Here is a recipe which, if carefully followed, will do all that is claimed for it.
Take a handful of a weed called run-about, the same of the herb rabbit-tongue, a sprig of the herb blackbit, a tablespoonful of don't-you-tell-it, six drachms of malice and a few drops of envy, which can be bought at the shop of Miss Talbatha Teatable and Miss Nancy Nightwalker. Stir them well together for half an hour over the fire of discontent, kindled with a little jealousy. Then strain it through the raged conscience of a corkscrew in a bottle of malice, and hang it upon a skewer of street-vandalism; shake it occasionally for a few days and it will be ready for use. Take a few drops before walking out each day and you will be able to speak all manner of evil, and do it continually.

If the above recipe is too strong, the following will cure the worst cases.
Take a little good nature, a little mind-your-business, a little keep-your-tongue-between-your-teeth, cook them all in a vessel called conspectation.
The symptoms are a violent itching of the tongue when in company of a class of people called gossips. When you feel a fit coming on, take a dose and keep your mouth shut till you get home.

A devoted husband says that the phonograph is simply a machine that "talks back," and he has had one of that kind in his house ever since he was married.

Here is a poor rule, because it will not work both ways: When a man dies and leaves a lot of property, his relatives are willing to take charge of it;
but when he dies and leaves a lot of debts, they will have nothing to do with them.

This favorite stockings of the moment are of French Lisle thread, lace-wrought in stripes their entire depth.

Hon. John G. Carlisle.

[Breckinridge News.]
The more we come to think of it, the more satisfied we become that John Carlisle, of Kentucky, is the man for the Democracy to nominate for the Presidency. He has more brains than Tilden, Thurman and Hendricks combined. He is not an average man for the democratic cause (as the saying is), but he has no doubt of double-barreled record on any public question; he has abundant nerve, will and decision of character; on a question of right, all the persuasion of leaders or powers of party could not induce him to pursue the wrong; his private life is irreproachable and his public career wins commendations even from his opponents; honest as the day is light, clear-headed, clean-hearted and clean-handed, he is that manner of man whom the patriotic people can rely on in any emergency. There is no redundancy in his language; his speeches are bar-ren of sounding, glittering but meaningless rhetoric as the palm of his hand is of hair; and when he gives expression to his opinions, his declarations are clear, incisive, to the point, and couched in terms as perfectly intelligible to the unlettered multitude as they are confounding to and unanswerable by the keenest and most adroit debaters among the opponents. He reminds us more of Jefferson in his cast of thought and straight-forward, unadorned but convincing reasoning than any statesman we have had in the last thirty years. Is it too much to hope that the National Convention will possess sufficient vision, will be sufficiently free from the coils and plots and intrigues of Tilden, Thurman et al., as to take up such a man for our next year's need?

It is a curious illustration of the per-versity of many of the female sex that husband—with this fondness—for always doing little useful things is held among wives to be even more an undesirable than the kind of husband who is perfectly useless. He is charged not only with a fendish fondness for late hammering, but is constantly upbraided because he makes so many chips. In vain does he explain that planning a board necessarily results in chips, and that saw dust is the inevitable result of the use of the saw.

He is told that he ought to be ashamed of himself, and that no decent man would think of making chips all over the floor. These things, however, never dissuade a husband of an active disposition, who can not possibly find enjoyment in sitting at home and doing nothing at all. To him the little domestic jobs are a relaxation, especially when the nature of his daily routine business is of another kind, and we earnestly implore wives who happen to have such husbands, to be indulgent toward them, and they are really of more value to them and their children than those who, when at home, do nothing but fill the room with tobacco smoke.

Two young men of this place, just about sixteen years of age, lately fell desperately in love with the same girl, a bright young lady who lives about two miles east of this place. A few Saturdays ago they thought they would go to pay a visit to the object of their love. It was not a mutual arrangement, as they each thought to "head the other off." The first arrived at due time, and the second arrived at the object of the visit, and taking the young Adonis by the arm, led him to the crib, gently lifted him in, set him to shelling corn, and, after locking the door, departed, leaving the young man to meditate and shell corn. In due season lover No. 2 made his appearance. He was put through the same process, and was much surprised on being thrust into the crib to find his rival engaged in shelling corn. They were thus kept at work until sundown when they were released and wended their way home. On the following Saturday they again paid a visit to the home of their lady love, when the father utilized them by making the heavier of the two mount a harrow, and sitting the other astride a horse, compelled them to harrow a very rough piece of ground all day, while the object of their affection sat in the window commanding a view of the field, and rather enjoyed the discomfort of the gallant pair.—Oldham Era.

In a noteworthy case, the disease of diphtheria was spread among the members of a household by kisses bestowed upon the patient. The lesson to be derived from this not exceptional case is very clear.
It is no uncommon thing for adults to have diphtheria so mildly it is taken for ordinary sore throat resulting from cold; yet such a person can easily infect a child, and the child become the center of a malignant infection. In view of the fatal prevalence of diphtheria, therefore, the kissing of children upon the mouth by a person with a sore throat is hazardous, if not criminal, and scarcely less so in the practice of allowing children to kiss their ailing playmates. It would be wise to exercise great caution, if not to discontinue the practice of kissing upon the mouth altogether, in indiscrete cases.

What You Will Not Be Sorry For.

You will not be sorry for hearing before judging.
For thinking before speaking.
For holding an angry tongue.
For stopping the ear to a tale-bearer.
For disbelieving most of the ill reports.

For being kind to the distressed.
For being patient toward everybody.
For doing good to all men.
For asking pardon for all wrongs.
For speaking evil of no one.
For being courteous to all.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

BURLINGTON, KY., JUNE 19.

THE RACE OF LIFE.

Life is but a span—of hours—
One is "Age"—the other "Prime."
Up and down the hill the race is,
Go it, ponies, make good time!
Boyhood plies the whip of pleasure,
Youthful folly gives the stroke;
Manhood gonads them at leisure—
Get 'em rip—they're tough as oak.
On the sunny road to Bly
"Prime" is drowned in pleasure's stream,
"Age" jogs on, haw, old, untidily, Life then proves "a one-horse team."
"Age" jogs on, grows quite untidily,
Ruels and slacks in his pace;
Kicks the bucket, always ready,
Gives it up—Death wins the race.

Theory and Method.

There is coming to be great danger, the American Cultivator thinks, that our farmers will be killed by theories. Great many writers for the agricultural press—some of the journals as well, it is feared—most of the so-called agricultural lecturers and speakers, and large numbers of farmers themselves, are so completely filled with notions and theories that they are forever kept from doing the good they might do and from becoming the successful, forlorned farmers they might become if they would throw theories to the dogs. "Well," said a farmer, conversing with a neighbor about his achievements, "I went into the field this morning and I began to calculate and plan." "Yes," replied the one addressed, half interrupting him, "I went into the field and went to work." And if there were more who did the same, we should see smoother fields, better buildings on the farm, and more general thrift.

Now theories are all very well, and a study of theories, where they are based upon and studied in connection with facts, may become of great service to the practical man. By this means real knowledge is advanced and the better performance of many useful matters is understood in a truer way. But the pushing of theories to a useless extent; the crowding of particular hobbies upon the minds of farmers till they are uncertain as to what to believe, or which course to adopt, or what to do, only leads to injury, disaster and disgust. How many farmers have been discouraged at some plan or experiment or new way of doing a thing which they have tried, and which has only brought loss and disaster, because it was recommended by some presuming writer or lecturer, or based upon some theory which the party who recommended it thought was a very important theory, sure to be correct and in practice to uniform success. Run your mind back over the last twenty years and see how many delusive theories in agriculture have been demolished by the real test of experiment, and how many disappointed champions of such theories are forgotten. In those theories may have been some grains of truth, some elements of value; and in many of the theories now uppermost in the minds of the teachers of agriculture, as well as those which occupy the attention of thoughtful farmers, there are principles not to be despised; but the great danger is that theory will take the place of method; that good practice will be sacrificed to ideas; that useless scheming and "calculation" will supersede work and tangible results. To a certain degree theories are well; but theories should never go before good practice. And American farmers, in their aimless desire for novelty and love of being thought learned and scientific, have allowed men who are not half as capable of instructing them in the management of their own farms as they are themselves, to lead them a hard jaunt after some petty theory, which ends, very likely, in the pocket of the "guide."

Now, when our farmers follow theory blindly, and base their farm operations upon formulas which relate to lots of other things than fertilization, take our word for it, they are on the wrong track. Good practice, in all our farm operations, should go first; and the great majority of our farmers are woefully deficient in good, thorough, profitable farm-management, methods and practice. Improve the practice, make the methods better, and let the theories take care of themselves, or follow afterward, as they properly should. The farmer whose methods are first-class, whose practice is such that he receives a good income from it, can afford to give a little of his time to study theories; but till his methods of culture, of stock husbandry, of manuring, of fruit growing, of generalship, are perfect and at his fingers' ends, he would better let theory alone. The old writers on agriculture—the foundation authors about which our modern agricultural book-makers revolve—in all their writings put practice first and foremost, theory last. Modern teachers have reversed this order, forcing theory ahead and neglecting practice and methods; and thousands of farmers are following, or trying to follow, some theory which they have had set up, when they should be at work improving the details of their practice, their farm management, that profitable crops and independence may follow.

Origin of Wheat and Corn.

The origin of wheat is a subject of much speculation. It is not certainly known in a wild state. Some suppose it descended from extinct wild species, others, that it is the cultivated form of what are now regarded as wild species. About 1855, a Mons Fabro claimed to have developed wheat by careful cultivation, during twelve years, from erglops ovata, a grass common to the South of Europe, but the assertion has been greatly discredited. Wheat has been a cultivated plant since long before historical times; and the number of varieties is very large, one Frenchman having cultivated as many as 392, and many suppose that there must have been three or four original species of the plant, but the entire subject of its origin is mere conjecture. Corp, according to Alphonse de Candolle and Darwin, is of American origin, and seems to have been introduced specific change since the earliest ages, Darwin having found in South American heads of maize imbedded in a beach which had been raised at least eighty-five feet above the sea.—Rural New Yorker.

The Cattle Plague.

The reports of the prevalence of the pleuro-pneumonia in a contagious form among the dairy and farm cattle along the Atlantic Coast should cause more alarm among the owners of valuable herds of Shorthorns in Kentucky than it does. These cattle are as much subject to this dreadful disease as are the common dairy cows, and should the contagion cross the mountains, the herds of Shorthorns in the Blue-grass region would be in great danger.

With all this there seems to be no concern for the impending disaster even from those directly interested. It must be that our people are so inflated with national politics that they forget all else. We dare say that the election of a Constable will receive more attention in any district having $100,000 worth of cattle than the statement that the cattle plague hangs over them ready to break out among their herds at any time.

Two hundred cattle owners will turn out at any cross roads to hear two candidates for some inferior office discuss politics and assert their peculiar fitness for office, when two dozen would not answer a call to meet and devise measures to prevent the introduction of this serious plague. Without more thought on the subject we do not say what should be done beyond the getting together, but it would not do any harm to get our Representatives in Congress to take hold of the subject and urge the adoption of some means of stamping out the disease where it exists now, rather than await its coming West.—Farmers Home Journal.

Arabian Power for Taming Horses.

The horse castor is a wart of excrecence which grows on every horse's forelegs, and generally on the hind legs. It has a peculiar rank, musty smell, and is easily pulled off. The ammoniacal effluvia of the horse seems peculiarly to concentrate in this part. Its very strong odor has a very great attraction for the horse, especially a canine and the horse himself. For the oil of cumin the horse has an instinctive passion—both are original natives of Arabia—and when the horse scents the odor, he is instinctively drawn toward it.

The oil of rhodium possesses peculiar properties. All animals seem to cherish a fondness for it, and it exercises a kind of subduing influence over them. The directions given for taming horses are as follows:—Procure some horse castor and grate fine. Also get some oil of rhodium and oil of cumin, and keep the three separate in air-tight bottles. Rub a little of the oil of cumin upon your hands and approach the horse on the windward side, so that he can smell the cumin. The horse will let you come up to him without any trouble. Immediately rub your hand gently on the horse's nose, getting a little of the oil on it. You can then lead him anywhere.

Give him some of the castor on a piece of loaf sugar, apple or potato. Put nine drops of the oil of rhodium into a lady's silver thimble between the thumb and middle finger of your right hand, with the forefinger stopping the thimble to prevent the oil from running out while you are opening the horse's mouth.

As soon as you have opened the horse's mouth, tip the thimble over upon his tongue and he is your servant. He will follow you like a pet dog. Ride fearlessly and promptly, with your knees pressed to the horse's side, and your toes turned in and heels out; then you will be always on the alert from a shy or sheer from the horse, and he can never throw you.

Then if you want to teach him to lie down, stand on his right or left side; have a couple of leather straps about six feet long; string up his left leg with one of them round his neck; strap the other end of it over his shoulders; hold it in your hand, gently, firmly and steadily pulling on the strap, touching him lightly on the knee with a switch. The horse will immediately lie down. Do this a few times and you can make him lie down without the straps.

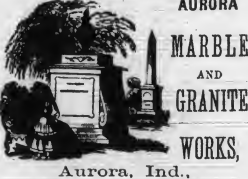

He is now your pupil and you friend. You can teach him anything, only be kind to him, be gentle. Feed him before you feed yourself, keep him clean, and at night always give him a good bed at least a foot deep. In the winter season don't let him stand out a long time in the cold without shelter or covering; for remember that the horse is a native of a warm climate, and in many respects his constitution is as tender as a man's.

DOMESTIC GREETING.

As homeward comes the married man, He's met by wife at door,

With fond embrace and loving kiss And—"Baby's throes is sore!"

"And did you think to stop at Brown's And get that marabout I ordered yesterday?"—and, dear, Fred's boots are well worn out!

"I'm glad you are so early, John, So much I miss you doing errands."

"I've had a letter from mamma; She's coming to live here."

"How very glad you look, dear John; I knew that you would be."

"The four of us, the better, and You must send home some tea."

"That plumber has been here again; If you don't pay he'll sue again."

And Mr. Prendergast called in To say your rent was due.

"Fred's trousers are half cotton, John; You thought they were all wool—"

Oh! that reminds me of my son Was whipped to-day at school.

"The roof has leaked and spoiled the rugs Upon the upper hall."

And Jane must go, the careless thing! She let the mirror fall!

"To-day as she was moving it, (The largest one, John!)"

Of course it broke; it also broke The lamp it fell upon."

"What makes you look so grave, my love? Take off your things and wipe Your feet—and only think, to-day, Jane broke your marabout pipe."

"Oh, John! that horrid, horrid word! You do not love me, dear!"

I wish that I—b—h—d—were dead—I wish you're across as any bear!"

THE capital employed in brewing lager beer in New York City exceeds $25,000,000.

THERE are six shoe factories in San Francisco owned and run by whites, and over thirty owned and run by the mongolians, with approved machinery.

THE vanilla bean, hitherto used as a flavoring essence, has been found to be of great assistance to silk dyeing, and the increase of its culture has been greatly augmented of late with a view of supplying the French demand.

The two Arabian stallions presented to Ex-President Grant by the Sultan of Turkey, have arrived in New York. "Leopard," one of them, is a dappled gray, six years old. "Linden Tree," the other, is a steel gray, five years old. They are both splendid animals.

The Treasury Department will, in the future, fill all orders for the standard silver dollars, in sums as low as $500, instead of a thousand as heretofore. This can be done by depositing the amount with the National Depository, and you will receive the amount in due time.

The State Central Committee of the National Greenback Labor party of Indiana, has resolved that it sincerely and firmly believes that any coalition with either the Democratic or Republican party must be detrimental to the National party, and will tend to weaken it in its advocacy of the principles of equal rights and justice to all; and it earnestly prays that in the States where elections are to be held in the fall, the Nationals will nominate a ticket, and vote solidly for it.

The Chief of the Bureau of Statistics of the United States reports that the arrivals of emigrants at New York during the month of May, 1878, were 18,109: From England, 2,533; Scotland, 901; Wales, 150; Germany, 4,420; the remainder from other countries. During the year ending May 31st, there were 30,000 more than in same period in 1877-8. This is an indication that foreigners recognize this as a good country to come to, and the tide of emigration is accordingly on the increase.

An auction of the sale of pews in the Roman Catholic Cathedral of this city was held May 20th says the New York Observer. Fifty-three of the choicest pews were disposed of at preliminary bidding for $50 and $2,100, at which price Jose E. Navarro secured his choice. There are 365 pews in the building, to 98 of which no stated rental has been fixed, the others ranging from $40 to $180 per annum. The total rentals would yield a yearly income of $21,410. The premiums on the 53 pews sold at the auction amounted to $12,505.

The New York Tribune's Philadelphia correspondent, writing of General Grant's return, says: "As to General Grant's political plans, Mr. Childs, of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, is confident that he has none. If General Grant entertained any expectation of being nominated for the Presidency in 1880, or meant to enter the list of candidates, Mr. Childs is confident he would have written him on the subject. As the Ex-President has never once mentioned the matter in his letters, Childs feels convinced that the possibility of being called upon to serve a third term in the White House is wholly foreign to his thoughts. Mr. Childs says that any movements to support public honors on Grant after his arrival which have a political purpose, and seem to put him in the attitude of a candidate for the Presidency will be distasteful to him, and will be discouraged by all his personal friends."

CLAY'S MONUMENT.

Reminiscences of Kentucky's Statesman, Recalled by One of the Recent High Bridge Excursionists.

Special Correspondence to the Recorder.

In regard to the High Bridge I will say but little, as our good editor has already related everything of interest. Its most distinguishing feature is the beautiful scenery surrounding it. Its jagged rocks and high bluffs, flowing fountains, picturesque cottages and beautiful rivers form a picture that beggars description, for the pencil of the artist can not portray nor the pen of a poet describe. It is my failing to be very fond of the beauty of nature. I believe few who have been reared in a mountainous and picturesque country fail to be so. Memory carries me back to High Bridge. I am standing on a cluster of rocks, shaded by a knot of trees, and at its base trickles a small spring, forming a semi-circle among the rocks. It is

The scenery of a fairy dream. The whole might seem

Life is compared to a book full of strange chapters, and the leaves are turned down, and some of the pages are blotted so they can not be read; but I think the 20th of May, 1879, will form a leaf that will be stamped clearly on the memory of those who participated in its pleasures for all time to come. But all this glory and grandeur grows dim as we pass by the beautiful city of the living (Lexington) and enter the silent city of the dead, "whither all footsteps tend, whence none return."

And, as the gay excursionists pass lightly through the entrance or archway, those startling lines of the great American poet wandered vaguely through my mind:

"Tramp, tramp, tramp, making—"

Ho, ho, how they laugh going down to the dead!

How they dress, how they dance, how they smile, how they dally,

How blissome they skip, going down to the valley!

But then, perhaps it were better thus, we could be too hard for us, did we fully realize throughout their few short days what brief and bitter dreams they really are, and we would do little but tremble with dread but for the odd fancy that, though the years behind us have been so brief, those before us will be so long we need not measure them—at least not yet.

Almost the first object our eyes rest upon is the monument of Henry Clay, the great American orator, patriot and statesman; he who, by the power of his genius and the extraordinary character of his deeds, shed such an imperishable luster upon our name and fame, lies wrapped in silence within this noble structure—fit shrine for one so great—while at his feet lies she who in life shared his honor, glory and fame." When I look back over the history of our country and contemplate the life and services of Henry Clay, I am lost in wonder and admiration. Born in poverty and obscurity, inheriting none of the mighty influences of wealth and family, he achieved for himself and his country, by the power of his own unaided genius and energy, a name and fame that will challenge comparison with the brightest intellects of our ancient and modern times. It was to him that the people are mainly indebted for the great victory of 1812—the victory of our independence—and its final and honorable adjustment. When our flag had again and again been insulted and outraged, and our rights trodden under foot, and a portion of the American people was disposed tamely to submit to it, the great Kentuckian was the first to rise in his place upon the floor of Congress and cry out against it and sound the clarion blast of war. His voice, like that of other patriots, was heard and war declared. During the whole period of that protracted struggle, Henry Clay stood side by side with Calhoun, Lowndes and others, until peace—a glorious peace—was achieved. A warm and ardent friend of liberty and liberal principles, his heart was always ready to pour out in streams of burning eloquence its sympathy for the oppressed of every nation. Among the ablest speeches there was one in behalf of South American independence. The shouts of the gallant soldiers under the heroic Bolivar, as the distant voice of Clay fell upon their ears, are still echoed in that far off country.

History relates a touching incident, told by the honorable chairman of the Monumental Association. In the fall of 1854, during his visit to New York on business connected with Henry Clay's monument, he was present at a meeting of the friends of Mr. Clay, held for the purpose of promoting this enterprise, and after several interesting and spirit-stirring speeches had been made in commendation and encouragement of the project, an old, weather-beaten tar, who had for many years been a sea captain in the merchant service, rose to his feet with tremulous emotion and remarked that his voice was too feeble for utterance, but, as the meeting was held in honor of the seaman's friend and defender, he could not withhold his homage. He stated that many years before, during a long and adventurous voyage, he determined to disembark on the shores of South America and spend a short time upon land. He accordingly procured a mule and set out to reconnoitre the country in quest of recreation and amusement.

After traveling some time, he at length descried in the distance a tall and beautiful shaft glittering in the sunlight, and standing out in bold relief upon the plain before him. Curiosity at once prompted him to take it in his line of travel, and as he drew near he discovered that it was a beautiful and elegant monument; and, after spending some time in contemplating its architectural beauty and finish, and speculating upon its probable design, he was about turning to depart when his eye caught an inscription, and, on alighting from his mule and examining it more closely, he found that it bore the name of Henry Clay, the champion of South American independence. "And, gentlemen," said the gallant old tar, wiping the honest, manly tears from his sunburnt cheek, "I never knew what it was to love my illustrious countryman until I had spent an hour in silent companionship with him at the base of his monument in that land of strangers."

He was emphatically American in his every feeling. He lived for the glory of his country, and at last died for its safety. Nor was he unmindful of the down-trodden rights of Greece—unfortunate Greece—that land of poverty and song, so dear to the memory of every patriot and scholar. In 1818, when Greece was rent with war and commotion, Henry Clay, inspired as it were with the associations that were spread around her, poured out in her behalf a torrent of eloquence that electrified the whole civilized world. If Henry Clay had left no other monument to his memory than his efforts in behalf of the liberties of those unfortunate countries, his name and fame would have been immortal. History tells us that "a beautiful and elegantly wrought marble tablet, with appropriate inscriptions, has been procured by the civil authorities of Greece, and now occupies a prominent place in her Council Chamber, as a token of her grateful remembrance of him who so eloquently defended her rights against the usurpation of the rapacious Turk."

But Henry Clay is dead. In the hour of decaying nature, with the vision of the future and the eternal world spread within a mile of his great face, he gazed into the ocean of eternity with intellect undimmed. He calmly selected his final resting-place—the city of Lexington, the home of his early life. He sleeps in her cemetery, and the wailing winds, like a melancholy dirge, sweep over the spot that entombs departed worth.

I have this from one who was present at his funeral, but who could not get within a mile of his great face. The crowd was estimated at 150,000 people, and when the head of the train of mourners reached the grave, a portion of it stood still in the heart of the city of Lexington. People of every trade, standing and calling were present, and every city, town and village from New Orleans around to the city of Washington was represented. Every secret society—Odd-Fellows, Masons and many others—was present in full regalia; soldiers and military companies in full uniform; and, while he gazed and admired, a company of wood choppers from the forests of Maine, each man carrying in his hand a bright new ax, and on his head a hat scarcely smaller than a small washing-tub, made out of some kind of fur or skin of some animal. But this is a deviation.

The history of Henry Clay will form a model for the humble and obscure youths of our country through all time. A contemplation of his struggles and his fame will refresh their recollection with the sublime sentiment of the poet:

"Lives of great men all remind us We can make our lives sublime, And, departing, leave behind us Footprints on the sands of time."

How It Feels to Jump into the Niagara.

Peer, the man who jumped into the Niagara River a few days since, from the suspension bridge, describing his sensations in the water, said: "I think I must have gone about eleven feet into the water when I encountered the under current, but I did not go into it. As it caught me it threw me flat on my back, and in that position I was carried very swiftly about twenty-two feet between the two currents, and the feeling to my back was just as though I had been drawn quickly over a rough board table, but my effect was resolute. I had my eyes open, and, looking up, could see the bridge through the water. My life-preserver saved me after I went under the water. Realizing that I must be about my business, I threw up my hands, peddled a little, and instantly rose to the surface."

Shall the Constitution Be Revised?

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Is it not proper that the people should be reminded occasionally that at the August election there will be submitted to the voters a proposition vastly more important than that of who shall be our Convention representative for the next two years? The voters will need nothing by way of reminder from outsiders as to the election for County Representative; but several candidates will, if any Republican will come out, attend to that matter with neatness and dispatch; and so we may say with regard to the election of all the State officers; but the great question which is of so much interest at the present, and which may reach far out into the future for the well or woe of the Commonwealth, seems to be pretty well lost sight of in this county, upon the old principle of what is everybody's business is nobody's business. I refer to the vote on the question of calling a convention, in pursuance of an act of the Legislature, passed at its last session, for the purpose of taking the sense of the people of the State on the propriety of revising the State Constitution.

We favor the calling of such a convention, and expect to vote for it; and in doing so we do not pretend to say that if we had been a voter at the submission of the present Constitution to the people for ratification we would have opposed it. On the contrary, there are many things in the present Constitution preferable to the old. It is considered altogether an improvement by most persons best prepared to judge between the two. Experience demonstrated to the people the necessity of revising the Constitution of 1793, and they did so by the Constitution of 1850. Experience now points out the necessity of revising our present Constitution, so as to make it more suitable to the wants of the people. It is useless to argue that a Constitution entirely sufficient at one period may not, in the progress of events, become inefficient, and not at all adapted to changed circumstances and surroundings. The Constitution of 1850 was bitterly opposed, and, though a great improvement on the Constitution of 1793, would not have been submitted for ratification with article eleven as it now reads, had it not been for the existence of negro slavery, and the determination to perpetuate it, as far as possible, by such provisions and such machinery in regard to revising that instrument as to render such a work so tedious, troublesome and expensive as well nigh forbid it altogether. There was then a small body of emancipationists in the State, and in order to silence them forever, the framers of the Constitution declared in the bill of rights, in substance, that the right of property in a slave was higher than any constitutional sanction; and this declaration, with the unwieldy machinery provided for amending the Constitution, completely squelched those emancipationists. The same article was only intended to operate against the constitutionists, and did effectually destroy that party, and to that extent accomplished what was intended, and restored for the time quiet to the State on that then pestiferous subject; but, like all other powerful and radical remedies, the damage done by them may be as aggravated as the disease intended to be cured. Thus, in this instance, the tedious, expensive and troublesome course to be gone through in accomplishing an amendment to our State Constitution

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL,
Editor and Proprietor.
BURLINGTON, KY., JUNE 26.

The Old Dominion is now the banner peanut State.

It is again reported that the yellow fever has appeared in New Orleans.

The Kentucky Press Association was run into the ground last week.

Some of the editors stayed at home last week to keep the animals stirred up.

SENATOR CONKLING, no doubt, would like to be styled "The Great North American Bluffer."

We shall take in the Ky. P. A. this week, by means of exchanges, provided always the boys didn't forget to come out of the ground.

In the great walking match in England, Weston, the American competitor, was victorious, and the championship is again the property of America.

Ohio people are not resting easy of nights now. They are living in dread of the political cyclone which will, in a few short days, break loose in their State.

PEER, the lunatic who jumped off the suspension bridge across the Niagara River not long since, is going to repeat the experiment on the fourth of next month.

On the first page, this week, will be found an article in regard to calling a convention for revising the State Constitution. The writer does not enumerate many cogent reasons for his position favoring the convention, but probably he will present more of them in the future.

The legal contest in which the Lexington Press and the Farmers' Home Journal have been engaged, was, a few days since, decided in favor of the latter. The Home Journal now declares itself permanently established. It is a good paper, and the farmers will find it to their interest to patronize it.

PRINCE LUIS NAPOLEON, Prince Imperial of France was killed by the Zulus on the 2nd inst. He, in company with other officers, was out reconnoitering, when they were attacked by the enemy in a meadow field and the Prince assassinated. His death pretty much wipes the Bonaparte family out.

MANY of our exchanges took a large dose of liver-pod last week. The dose was not dissolved when the papers were opened at this office. We hope their health will be improved, but fear they will suffer from an attack of colic, the result of the large quantity of wind and the liver-pod supplement carried into them.

FRANK TURNER, the Grant County desperado, who was tried in the Gallatin Criminal Court at its late term, for the murder of Judd in Grant, was sentenced to the Penitentiary for life. The case will go to the Court of Appeals. It is not reasonable to suppose that that Court has any very great amount of sympathy for murderers yet.

AND still the vetoes come, the last being applied to the Judiciary Bill. The President says the Bill would prevent his enforcing an unrepented law, and thereby cause a violation of his official oath. The Bill provides no means for the payment of Deputy Marshals and Supervisors of elections. The law requiring their appointment is the one which Mr. Hayes says he will not enforce, and he will not let Congress remove that obstacle.

It now seems that Congress is not apt to adjourn for several days. Some of the stalwarts on the Republican side of the Senate have taken a notion to fight the passage of the Army Bill which was satisfactory to nearly the entire Republican force in the lower House, and not only voted for but was openly advocated by some of the leaders. The tactics adopted by the leading Republican Senators is not understood by many of their own party who are in daily contact with them.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to the Recorder.
WASHINGTON, June 19, 1879.

This session came in like a lamb, on the 18th day of March, and seems likely to go out like a lion some time in August or September or later. The prospective delay in the Army Bill is because the Senate Republicans, wishing to defeat the Army Bill supported by the House Republicans, adopted tactics never before introduced in the Senate, refused to vote and thereby destroyed a quorum. As soon as three or four Democrat Senators, now absent, return, there will be men enough of that party to carry on the session, and finish its business, whether the Republicans vote or not.

There must be an interesting history connected with this violent opposition of Republican leaders in the Senate to the Army Bill. Garfield and others, in the House, had spoken for the bill, and all but a dozen of his associates voted for it. For some reason not yet developed, Conkling and Blaine commenced and are carrying on a fight against it. The supposition that in any way antagonizing to Sherman's candidacy for the Republican nomination is raised up with it does not appear to be well founded. The bill itself is unquestionable, and will unquestionably be approved by Mr. Hayes whenever it comes before him. Just why these stalwart leaders should open a new contest within their party, at a time when the party is already suffering from disunion, puzzles the understanding.

Last night, and this morning, for that matter—for the Senate has not adjourned at this writing—there was an exceedingly disgraceful and exciting session of the Senate. Senator Conkling, whom Mr. Blaine once designated as the turkey-gobbler of the House, tried the effect of his "plantation manners" on the quietest gentleman in the Senate, Mr. Lamar. They called each other liars. I recall five or six occasions on which the domineering manners of Conkling have brought him into collision with Representatives. He will never forget the contest of blackguardism with Mr. Blaine. On a recent session ago he grossly insulted Senator Gordon, and peace was only restored after mutual friends interceded. If Conkling was a Southern man he would give ample justification for a great deal of nonsense that is spoken in the North as to "plantation manners" of Southern men.

Senator Ingalls, who has fought investigation in his case with the greatest perseverance, finds that he can no longer prevent it, and now asks for it, as he says, as a means of vindicating himself and his friends. If anything like a full investigation is had, the Legislature of Kansas will have the privilege of filling a vacancy in the Senate before long.

—Calloway News: A severe hail storm visited the western part of the county Wednesday night of last week, doing considerable damage.

—Madison Republican: The wheat crop of this county the present season will amount to more than an average yield. Harvest has already begun.

—Hickman Courier: Wheat will be on our market the latter part of next week. Indications are that it will open at between 80 and 90 cents per bushel.

—Last week, a man in Meade County killed his wife by splitting her head open with an axe, and then cut his throat with a razor. They were in very humble circumstances.

—Danville Advocate: The wheat

harvest in this section has commenced and is now under full headway. The yield will be much better than expected some time ago, and may be set down as a fair average.

—Woodford Sun: The farmers are now in the midst of the wheat harvest. From careful inquiry and observation we are led to think that the crop in the county will be a fair one, very little, if any, below the average.

—Fulton Times: The reports from the wheat crops are indeed encouraging. A month ago we were fearful the crop would be a complete failure; but now, from what we hear, the crops in this vicinity are above an average.

—Nineteen of the veterans of the war of 1812 were present at their annual reunion in Paris last week. 35 have died since their last meeting. The oldest man present was Col. Wm. Wright, of Bourbon, aged 95. All the others are over 82.

—Jesse Randal, fearing that Breathitt County might attempt to Ohioize while he is holding court, there has requested the Governor to send troops to Jackson. The nine prisoners who were in the Louisville jail awaiting trial have been sent back to Breathitt.

—Courier Journal: Miss McGehee, of Meade County, has had her legs poisoned by the coloring matter in her stockings, and the eruptions, says the Record, have assumed the hue and stripe of the stockings. As she now has striped legs she will dispense with stockings. How responsible!

—Courier Journal: In Larue County a boy ran on and was run over by a 14 year old and married on a certificate forged by the girl. Two hours after they had gone to roost on the same limb, a cruel parent hustled the girl off and had her sign a petition for a divorce. The husband has brought suit for $10,000.

—In Jackson County, the wife and infant child of Stephen Gunn were found dead in bed, and the jury decided that the mother died from heart disease, and had killed the child in her death struggles. As the babe's neck and skull were broken, the Coroner's conclusion was not satisfactory to the people.

—The corn crop, says the Flemingsburg Times, is beginning to take a start at last. The lower planted fields came up well, and are growing offensively. Those planted earlier in the season, and afterward replanted twice of three times, look ragged, but seem to be growing rapidly. This is one or the seasons in which it would have been profitable "to make haste slowly."

—The Register says that Miss Margaret Haynes, an old maid who owns $40,000 worth of property in Madison, gave seventy acres of land, worth $3,000, to a negro man who refused to leave her when freed by the war. This alarmed the heirs who swore out a writ of injunction, and asked the appointment of a trustee. Two juries have hung, and the case will come up again. It excites much interest and some bitterness.

—Georgetown Times: The address of our fellow-citizen, Jas. B. Finnell, Esq., before the Students' Association of Georgetown College, on Wednesday night last week, was an excellent production, and left a good impression on the large audience present. Mr. Finnell took for his subject "The Influence of Education on our Political Institutions," and made the appointment for a higher education and purer politics. His sentiments were full of good sense and patriotism. During the delivery of his address, Mr. Finnell was seized with a dizziness (to which he is sometimes subject when speaking), and was compelled to suspend for a brief time, but nothing daunted, he, seated in a chair, finished his address, much to the gratification of his large and appreciative audience. Mr. Finnell, on his last hour, as it were, and by earnest persuasion, consented to deliver the address, and we are glad that he did, for it was a rich treat, and greatly enjoyed.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

St. Louis, Mo., June 21, 1879.

To the Editor of the Recorder:
This evening closes a dull and lifeless week commercially, financially, politically, religiously and socially—but little business doing, no sales, no elections, no big meetings on hand, and I have heard of but one picnic for the entire week. But we hear of copious rains throughout the country, and the heart of the Granger continues to rejoice in anticipation of bountiful crops. It is now an admitted fact that the West will harvest fully two-thirds of a wheat crop, while the corn crop never was as promising at this season of the year as now; consequently the Granger has a right to give thanks to a Bountiful Giver and be happy. But oh what is to become of the Southern States? There is nothing left over now for these fellows to whine and cower over, unless it be that a partial failure of the oats crop may afford some relief for Mr. Grain Bull. But the sand is taken from under the chips, so they can't be happy unless the grasshopper should come along; but of this army of eraser feeders we have not so much as heard of their shadow or a solitary footprint this year. And here we leave this subject, it is but fair that we should state that, while we may not harvest our usual quota of bushels of wheat, there is not a dot but who will be getting into the granaries this year will be of a superior quality. The stalk, so far as we can learn of newspapers and correspondence with farmers throughout the States of Kansas and Illinois, is short, but the head is well filled. Indeed, we saw a few handfuls of straw on "Change this week that would average at least 75 grains to the head, and we are free to confess that under the chips, so they can't be happy unless the grasshopper should come along; but of this army of eraser feeders we have not so much as heard of their shadow or a solitary footprint this year. And here we leave this subject, it is but fair that we should state that, while we may not harvest our usual quota of bushels of wheat, there is not a dot but who will be getting into the granaries this year will be of a superior quality. "A REMEMBRANCE" is the title of a piece of original poetry which some kind friend sent us last week, minus the name of the composer, and as we have "a remembrance" of the fact that we publish no anonymous communications, we are compelled to lay it aside till some one claims its authorship.

ESQUIRE J. A. KENDALL held the June term of his court last Monday. The docket contained some disputed cases, which con-

ON Wednesday evening of last week, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. An elegant supper was provided, the premises brilliantly illuminated, and a most delightful evening was enjoyed by the guests.

Mrs. Sanford succeeded in making him leave the premises, and when her husband returned, in a short time, related the circumstance to him, whereupon he mounted his horse and started in pursuit of the offender, whom he overtook about a mile further down the road, when he dismounted and gave his trampship a severe drubbing. It is said the tramp had insulted a lady on Woolper the same day.

LAST Saturday, seven or eight couples from the Bullittsburg neighborhood started to Split Rock, on the Ohio River, to spend the day in viewing the beautiful scenery there to be found. As the party was winding down the "Walton Hill," on the Petersburg pike, a horse attached to one of the buggies became unruly, upset the vehicle and threw the occupants out. Fortunately, not seriously injuring either of them. Before the excitement thus occasioned had subsided, the horse attached to one of the other buggies began to kick and ran around kicking, and, before it could be subdued, did the buggy considerable damage, the occupants escaping injury. The party finally reached home safely, and spent a very pleasant day, notwithstanding its morning's adventure.

OUR readers remember the account given some time since in these columns of the trouble between Mr. Scott Rice and a Mr. Murdock, growing out of cutting stalks off of a piece of ground which Rice had been told he would be allowed to use. The last incident to be remembered, made Murdock abandon the field and he cut the stalks. Ever since, the people of that section have been looking forward to harvest the considerable interest, as Murdock declared he intended to harvest the wheat when ripe. Last week the wheat was ready for cutting, so Murdock mastered up his horse and went into the field and commenced business, the reaping machine being followed by a squad of men armed with double-barreled shotguns to protect the wheat from the birds. The last incident from that section says there had been no engagement, and probably would not be.

LAST Monday, Esquire Whitlock had an anomalous case in his court. The particulars as we get them are as follows:

The suit was brought to settle the ownership of a certain piece of land, which had been claimed by Fletcher Clure each claimed. The trial was had before a jury, and the plaintiff and defendant each swore the chain was his. The testimony on both sides was considered and no verdict was the result. The parties being very anxious for the matter to be disposed of, the jury retired a second time, and after some deliberation decided that each litigant should pay half the costs ("which was $30 each), and that the chain in dispute be put up and sold to the highest bidder, and the proceeds divided equally between the parties litigant. The chain was put up as ordered by the jury, whereupon Clure bid $1 for it, and there being no other bidder he became the purchaser by paying over to Esquire Whitlock the sum of one dollar, thus the matter was erased from the docket.

Found Dead.

ONE day last week, an unknown man was found lying on the ground in Boone County, who lived two or three miles above Bellevue on the Petersburg road. The body was found under a tree in a pasture, some distance from the road, and no appearance of life had been a day or two at least. The branch near by gave evidence of the man having dragged himself in search of water, and at one place hand and finger prints were plainly visible in the mud where it is supposed he had been sinking his thirst. Nothing was found upon the body by which the name of the deceased, or any person or occupation with which he might be connected had been connected, was revealed. A silver dime was found on the ground beneath the body. The man was apparently about 45 years old, bald headed and had gray whiskers. His clothing did not bear description. Dr. Platt and Coven held a post mortem, and found the stomach entirely empty, one of the lungs enlarged and the heart enlarged. No one in the neighborhood has any recollection of ever seeing the poor unfortunate. The remains were interred in the burying ground at Mr. Rogers'.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Florence X-roads.

Wheat harvest has arrived, and the wheat is reported of good quality. Oats will be hard to save on account of the straw being short.

Apples are falling off the trees, badly, and they will be scarce at gathering time.

The farmers have had a splendid time for working the ground and killing the grass and weeds.

The Irish potato crop is looking finely at this time, but it needs rain badly, and unless the ground is thoroughly soaked within a few days, the crop will be injured.

Much of the replanted corn is hardly out of the clods, and is therefore small for this season of the year. The crop has been well worked this spring.

Quite a number of the young folks of this section went to Parker's Grove on the 18th. They pronounced it a grand trip. Woodside Park is a great many spare quarters from here last Saturday.

It was reported that a great quantity of bee sweetness was stored in an oak tree on Jonas Clure's place, near Austin, Belmont's, and Mr. Legrand Utz and C. O. Rouse concluded they would taste the sweetness thereof, and accordingly felled the tree; but imagine their chagrin when not a bee nor an atom of comb could be found.

C. O. Rouse offers to take $40,000 for the right to use his railroad gate in the "State of New York." (We intended to offer Mr. R. $100,000 for that State.—E. J.)

There were very few to hear Mr. Henley preach in the Grange Hall, Saturday night. The appearance of rain probably kept some away.

Mr. Editor, those predictions in regard to that high-toned wedding failed.

Bachelors have hard times, but they ought to know that it's not in a vehicle when the horse won't pull. The old adage says, "what a man hasn't in his head he has in his heels." We guess the gentleman ought to be a little wiser, and put the horse along, instead of the horse pulling him.

Plattsburg.

The following is a synopsis of the work that is going on in Plattsburg: Replanting and plowing corn, harvesting wheat and clover, and we might add hunting, fishing, trading and taking honey, while not a few are laboring under intense mental distress, occasioned by the unfavorable predictions of Doctor Jarrell concerning the coming crops.

In spite of these predictions, wheat has matured large, well-filled heads, and will be much better than was for some time anticipated, and with the promised rain, corn will not by any means be a failure. Why should we fear when there is a promised seed-time and harvest to the end?

If Prof. Woolfolk is going to do anything toward regulating the weather, he would confer a great favor by leveling his guns against this east wind which troubles us so much at present, and give us the more welcome and refreshing breezes and showers from the southwest. While we feel sensibly the weakness of human help, it should not be forgotten (although if we do forget Mr. Wm. Smith will remind us) that Moses said the rock and the water gushed forth abundantly from the rock, and so it is with the weather.

There is a question connected with the financial affairs of the new turpentine company that it would be well to consider, viz: Does the contractor hold the road till the money is paid, or does he look to the individual stockholders for the pay? Mr. President, please give us light.

As the Teachers' Institute will probably be held before a very great while, allow me to propose a little question for the consideration of teachers: How long should a pupil be required to try to solve an example? many of the questions that have appeared in our paper have received but little or no attention, and it is hoped that some interest will be taken in this department, as our kind editor seems so willing to give the space.

Petersburg.

As happy a company as could be found in a week's journey assembled at the residence of Mr. W. T. Snyder, of this place, on last Tuesday evening, the 17th inst., to join in the celebration of the twenty-first anniversary of his marriage. At the wish of the guests, it was made the china wedding, and a large table full of handsome presents was prominently featured of the entertainment.

Among the presents were a handsome dining set of beautiful china, ornamented with a small bouquet of moss roses, presented by Esquire Whitlock; a large silver pitcher, presented by Mr. J. C. Jenkins; a deer pitcher, presented by Mr. C. Collins; and many beautiful presents, the names and uses of which are unknown to the uninitiated. The supper was a royal bridal feast, inexhaustible in quantity and variety, and was prepared to the fullest capacity of the company. The evening was passed in music, conversation and promiscuous dancing, and this occasion, which marks another milestone in the journey of the lives of the genial host and hostess, will long be remembered by all who were so fortunate as to be present as one of the happiest in their lives.

Last Thursday, some time in the forenoon, two tramps called at the residence of James Thompson, near town, and asked for something to eat. Mrs. Thompson gave them a good meal, and they left. In the afternoon she shut up her house and went to spend a few hours at a neighbor's not far distant. When she returned home she found her house open, her gold watch and money gone, and everything in the house, from top to bottom, in disorder. The search was a thorough one, but if the thieves got anything else, it has not been missed at this writing. Of course the two tramps are suspected, but they have not been seen since, nor has any special effort to find them been made as yet. We will have to build a joint stock stink factory, like the one at Delhi, Ohio, and utilize our tramps by working them up into a fertilizing compound.

Major Holabird is missing. Left here at Sunday and up to today (Friday) nothing has been heard from him. A slight feeling of uneasiness is expressed by his numerous friends, but as he has done such tricks several times in the past, it is likely that he will come in right side up with care in a few days.

Later—Major Holabird has returned since the writing of the above.

Wheat is being harvested, and the yield is an unusually good one. The grain is nice, clean and plump, the heads well filled, and the straw is free from rust, or any of the other physical troubles with which it is often beset. Besides, the price is up, and the farmers all smile their happiest grin when they look at their broad acres covered with the golden grain.

Farmers' House.

Of the great number of farmers throughout our country who are possessed of an abundance of money, what a small per cent. make use of it in building up and beautifying their homes, thus making them more attractive to themselves and their families, and endeavoring to all the sacred name of home. The saying that happiness does not always dwell in palaces, is a true one; but the fault is in the occupants, not in the surroundings. The farmer who improves within his means, without going in debt, is to be commended; but the home that is roofed by another man's money is not apt to be a contented one. To such farmers I do not even make an allusion in this writing; but if in a change of circumstances, they come within my meaning, it is to be hoped they will not add to the number to which I do refer.

It is also said, "Home is home, no matter how homely it may be;" but I doubt very much if there is an instance to be found where there is an intelligent family living in a mere hovel, surrounded by inconveniences and unhealthfulness, in the whole land which is living happily under the known fact that it is not from necessity that they do so, but from the miserly disposition of the head of the house.

When a man loves money for itself only, and sacrifices every comfort for himself and those under or dependent on him that he may accumulate it, he becomes a miser and a stigma upon humanity. But he who labors for money for the use he can make of it in improving his country and educating his fellow creatures by stimulating them to follow his example, he is a public benefactor.

In any rural district where improvement in dwellings, out-buildings and their surroundings are far in advance of the general average, an investigation will show that one or more farmers who had advanced ideas led off by erecting fine buildings and ornamenting the surroundings. Neighbors got their eyes opened and became ashamed of their own shabby homes. Some may call it jealousy, or rivalry, but it matters not by what name it is called so the effect is good. The next man to build a house and barn is apt to surpass the first in style and finish.

He looks around for the latest improvements in architecture and conveniences, and adopts them. The same is true in reference to dovecotes, or lawns. Let one man commence planting ornamental trees, shrubbery and flower-beds, and it will be but a short time till the wood-piles and rubbish disappear from every front yard in the neighborhood. The man that is so low in the scale of intelligence that he is not affected for the better by such influences is surely to be pitied.

If the injury to the community generally died out with the life of the miserly man, the case would not be so bad; but such is not the result. He raises up a family under such influences that at maturity they go forth into the world fit subjects for the prey of every sharper from their ignorance, or they perpetuate the sordid ways of the father.

These facts are so plain that the discerning traveler through our rural districts can readily estimate with certainty the degree of intelligence of the people by their buildings and surroundings. Every person has an education in early life, which is learned from home sources, that can not be learned at school; and in most cases this education is the governing power in after life. First impressions, good or bad, are hard to eradicate. The farmer and his family, from the nature of their occupation, pass much of their lives in quiet seclusion from the rest of the world. The minds of the children are developed very much according to associations. The youth of the towns or cities grow up under circumstances very different. They are best with vices with which those on the farm are seldom confronted; but they mingle more with the fashionable world, and learn more of human nature, which life at maturity, if it has not engendered idleness and vice, gives them a better education for the future.

How different it is with the farmers' children, where it is all work and no amusement; where company seldom comes; where there is no home adornment or refinement. Is it any wonder that children grown under such influences look at the lives of those in the adjacent village as those of sunshines, while theirs is that of endless toil? Is it any wonder that when they arrive at maturity they are awkward when thrown in company, or that the town boy calls the farmer's son a country greenhorn? Who is to blame? Not the town boy, for the name is an appropriate one in many cases. It is the benighted farmer who raises his children under such circumstances, who often has not as much thought for their welfare, or who does not expend money as liberally for their benefit as he does for his domestic animals. Money laid up for such children in after years will bear very little interest for their benefit, or add little to the real comfort of their lives.

During all ages of the world the life of an agriculturist has ranked as one of the most honorable, and so it is now. It is, in a great measure, their own fault if farm life becomes a life of servitude. When a farm is properly managed, when the comforts and the enjoyment of the individual members of the household are the chief objects in view, when a home is built up that is attractive in sight as well as in social enjoyment, then there is a halo of peace and happiness in a country home which the residents of town or city can never realize amid their bustling life.

THE HOME CIRCLE.

ALWAYS best when rare—family broils.

WHEN a cobbler beats his wife, he does it with shoemaker's whacks.

ADAM and Eve knew nothing of the sweets of matrimony until Lucy began raising Cain.

THE puzzle which cheerful mothers try to solve is how to train the girls and how to train the boys.

A TEXAN has eloped with a Mrs. Onion. The breath of scandal in this case will be too much for cloves.

THE thinnest thing now on record is a man's pocket-book that has just been struck in the stomach by a milliner.

"WEIGHT for the wagon," observed the farmer, as he helped his three-hundred-pound wife to a seat in the vehicle.

"Yes, Agnes, I'm going to have a cream-colored summer silk, provided you do not veto the appropriation map has passed."—Waterloo Observer.

Ladies are like watches—pretty enough to look at, sweet face and delicate hands, but somewhat difficult to "regulate" after they are set a-going.

WIZARD dressed for the evening, the girls now, adays.

A MAN was desirous to call his boy by the name of Asa, but his wife not liking the name, he told her that she might name the next two. A fair bargain that.

SINCE 1781, says the Detroit Free Press, twelve American husbands have been killed by blows from broomsticks. The broomstick is mightier than the dustpan.

AN epitaph in a Maine cemetery says: The wedding clothes provided; But ere that day did come, alas! He sickened and he died—

ALL of Edison's children go to bed with electric lamps and have to say their prayers in the phonograph. Then in the morning Mrs. E. investigates and finds out if they are all up to the mark.

"IN your long absence have you thought of me?" asked she, coyly. "Yes," replied he, provokingly, "once." "Only once?" "Only once," repeated he, holding out his arms, "only once—all the time!" And she came right back.

THE following is from Andrews' Bazaar: "I'm so glad now that I didn't marry that long, lean Hen Simpson," writes a young lady in her preparations for summer; "Charley's got such a nice, broad back to trace dress patterns on!"

"WHAT a rough fellow that Sniggins is!" petulantly exclaimed the Hopewell girl, after a struggle with the aforesaid Sniggins; "he nearly smothered me!" "And did you kiss him for his mother?" asked the other Miss, naively.

A FATHER, condoling his daughter who had lost her husband, said: "I don't wonder you grieve for him, my child; you will never find his equal." "I don't know as I can," responded the sobbing widow, "but I'll do my best." The father felt comforted.

AUNT—Well, love, did Mr. McMiller propose? Edith—No, aunt; but he was on the verge of it when— Aunt—When what, darling? Edith—When the clock struck and reminded him that there was only just time to catch the last cheap train, and he had a return ticket.

WHEN a girl's lover calls on her in the evening, she is all smiles and looks as intelligent as an Egyptian mummy; but let that same young man call on Monday morning when she is at the washbub, and she will hide in the closet or crawl under the stove, and when discovered be as frigid as a Greenland ice-berg.

REV. DR. SOMNIFEROUS, having the week previous married a couple, is interrupted by the ex-bridegroom while enjoying the paper and a quiet cup of tea. Ex-bridegroom—Ah! my dear Doctor, allow me to present you with a little memento ($10 bill). That marriage turned out better than I expected.

"WHAT young man of 25 is insensible to the pleasure of talking with a bright girl of 17 for a listener?" asks the New Haven Register. We think it is the youth who stands in full view of three ice-cream saloons and four soda fountains, and realizes that he has only eight cents in his pocket.

MRS. WHITEFOUR had company. Now, if there was one thing more than another on which Mrs. Whitefour prided herself, it was her cooking. "Will you try some of my sponge cake?" Mrs. Tattle-tongue said; she, "It isn't very good, to be sure. I never had such poor luck in my life as I did in making it." "Why, ma!" exclaimed Johnny, in amazement; "you said yesterday that was the best sponge cake you ever made."

CURFEW MUST NOT RING TO-NIGHT.

England's sun, who grandly setting o'er the hills so far away, Filled the last night with misty beauty at the close of one sad day.

And the last rays kissed the forehead of a woman, a maiden fair—
He with steps so slow and weary, the with sunny, floating hair;

He with bowed head, and thoughtful;
she with lips so cold and white, Struggled to keep back the murmur, "Curfew must not ring to-night."

"Sexton," Bessie's white lips faltered, pointing to the prison old,
With its walls so tall and gloomy, walls so dark and damp and cold—
"I've a lover in that prison, doomed this very night to die."

At the ringing of the curfew, and no earthly help he gave;
Cromwell will not come till sunset, and her face grew strangely white,
As she spoke in husky whispers: "Curfew
must not ring to-night."

"Bessie," calmly spoke the sexton (every word pierced Cromwell's heart, Like a thousand glooming arrows—like a deadly poisoned dart),
"Long, long years I've rung the curfew from this clock and tower below;

Every evening, just at sunset; I have told the twilight hour:
I have done my duty ever, tried to do it without a flicker of doubt.

Now I'm old, I will not miss it. Girl, the curfew rings to-night!"
Wild her eyes and pale her features, stern and white her thoughtful brow,
And within her heart's deeper center, Bessie made a solemn vow.

She had listened while the Judges read, without a tear or sigh;
"At the ringing of the curfew, Basil Underwood shall die."

And her breath came fast and faster, and her eyes grew large and bright—
One low murmur, scarcely spoken, "Curfew
must not ring to-night!"

She with light step bounded forward, sprang within the old church door, Left the old man coming slowly, path he'd trod so oft before.

Not one moment passed the maiden, but with cheek and brow aglow, Staggered up the gloomy tower, where the bell swung to and fro;

Then she climbed the slimy ladder, dark,
without one ray of light, Upward still, her pale lips saying, "Curfew shall not ring to-night!"

She has reached the topmost ladder; o'er her hangs the great, dark bell,
And the awful gloom beneath her, like the midway down the hell.

See! the ponderous tongue is swinging; 'tis
the hour of curfew now;
And the sight has filled her bosom, stopped her breath and pale her brow.

Shall she let it ring? No, never! Flash her eyes with sudden light,
As she springs and grasps it firmly; "Curfew
shall not ring to-night!"

Out she swung out; out: the city seemed a tiny speck below;
There 'twixt heaven and earth suspended as the bell swung to and fro;

And the half-dazed sexton ringing (years he had not heard the bell),
And he thought the twilight curfew rang young Basil's funeral knell.

Still the maiden clinging firmly, cheek and
eyes with misty light,
Stilled her frightened heart's wild beating:
"Curfew shall not ring to-night!"

It was o'er; the bell ceased swaying; and the maiden stepped once more Firmly on the damp old ladder, where for hundred years she stood;

Human foot had not been planted, and what she this night had done,
Should she long ages after, As the rays of setting sun.

Light the sky with mellow beauty, aged sires, with heads of white, Tell the children why the curfew did not ring that one and night.

O'er the distant hills came Cromwell; Bessie saw him, and her brow, Lately white with sickening horror, glows with sudden beauty now.

At its feet she told the story, showed her hands all bruised and torn;
And her sweet young face, so agitated, with a look so sad and worn.

Touched his heart with sudden pity, lit his eyes with misty light;
"Go! your lover lives!" cried Cromwell,
"Curfew shall not ring to-night!"

KE-KUX OUTRAGES.
(Cincinnati Enquirer.)
FRANKFORT, Ky., June 23.—Henry County again comes to the front with one of the most daring and damning deeds of inhumanity ever perpetrated.
Only a few years ago "King" Jim Simmonds and his gang of outlaws reigned supreme in Henry County at points along the Kentucky River, and many atrocious deeds were committed by them. Numerous good and peaceable citizens suffered death and robbery at their hands, and the particulars in each case were most revolting.

Nearly two years ago, King Jim Simmonds, Joe, Sam and Bob Goodrich, were hunted down and captured, and lodged in the Henry County Jail, at New Castle. A few nights thereafter, they were taken from the jail and lynched. * * *

But it seems that another gang, equally as daring, has been raised, composed of men who are so utterly reckless and destitute of morality as to commit such barbarous and unprovoked murders as will now be related.

In a little log cabin near Harpers's Ferry, in Henry County, and about a mile from the Kentucky River, resided Sam Faulkner with his wife, child and sister, all colored. The cabin stands in a very low valley, surrounded on all sides by trees of all kinds and sizes, and it presents a very picturesque appearance. On Saturday morning, the wife of Faulkner left home on a week's visit to her relatives, and in the evening Henry Russell, a colored boy 18 years old, came to the house to spend the week with Sam. The party retired to rest about 10 o'clock, little thinking that a deadly enemy would soon visit them.

Between 2 and 3 o'clock Sunday morning, a body of from five to ten men, armed and mounted on horses, rode up to the cabin, and in front of the cabin, and after hitching their horses, commenced to pelt the house with stones. Faulkner arose, hurriedly dressed himself, and, getting his rifle, he opened the front door and fired into the crowd.

The outlaws quickly drew their weapons and fired a volley at him and commenced to advance. Faulkner ran into the house, and taking his little girl, a child only three years old, he placed her in Russell's bed with her head resting on his shoulder. If then ran out the back door and up the hill, the cold-blooded scoundrels firing on him at almost every step.

After running a short distance he fell to the ground from fright and exhaustion and fainted, and no one was left to tell the tale of the fearful death which befel the inmates of that little cabin after he left it.

The assassins then entered and began to pilage and rob it of all it contained. One of them went to Russell's bed while he lay asleep, and, placing a pistol to his forehead, fired, the contentment coming out from the back of his head, and he never stirred from his instantaneous death. The murderers then fired the cabin and it was consumed, together with three innocent creatures—Henry Russell, Faulkner's sister, aged 8 years, and his daughter.

It is not known whether the last two were killed before the house was burned or not. Hundreds have viewed the scene all day, and the unanimous verdict is that the guilty perpetrators of this heinous deed should be swung to the first limb.

Some evidence was taken before the Coroner's jury, but they adjourned until next Saturday waiting for additional evidence and further developments in the case. Faulkner received a slight wound in his right arm, and has left the neighborhood. His barn, containing a large quantity of tobacco, was burned by an incendiary about two weeks ago. No one has yet been arrested for the murder of those three poor negroes, though suspicion points to several. Governor McCreary will offer a reward for the capture of each of the participants, as soon as proper application is made to him to do so.

Unhappy Marriages.
(London Daily Telegraph.)
The truth is that these too frequent "unhappy marriages" are the offspring of ignorance, quite as much as of actual sin or wrong. Fools, and especially vicious fools, have no right to get possession of an honest woman's life and soul, which they can not comprehend and the elevating influence of which they throw away, even more by stupidity than wilfulness. A woman, by her sex and character, has a claim to many things besides shelter, food and clothing. She is not less a woman for being wedded; and the man who is fit to be trusted with a good wife reflects all which this implies, and shows himself perpetually clivalrous, sweet-spoken, considerate and deferential. The fools and brutes who abound among us may think such demands hard; but they are not nearly so hard as to live the cat-and-dog life, missing the dearest possessions of human intercourse.

What right has a man to expect happiness in a household who brings no sunshine into it?
What right has a man to look for the graces and refinements of early love,
when he violates them by rough speech, ill manners, and the disregard of those little things upon which the self-respect of a wife is built and maintained? The cynic who rails at marriage is generally one and the same with the thoughtless egoist who plunges into the presences of the wife, and who is cold and sour-tempered, though he never vent to his mistress except on his best behavior. Let us have more social justice in these matters. The fate is horrible which a pure and faithful girl may endure by encountering in him whom she wed, not mere actual cruelty or injury, but stupid incompetence to understand a woman's needs, dull forgetfulness of the daily graces of life, and oblivion of the fact that, while men have the world, women have only their home. These grossnesses of maculine ingratitude do not, indeed, often lead to visible catastrophe, nor grow into such absolute tyranny, but they equally tend that way. They drag down a wife's soul to the point where she must despair; they change the sublime meaning of marriage to vulgarity and weariness; they spoil the chance of the best and finest of all education, which each man obtains who obtains a reasonably good woman for his companion; and they cost more to a million households than money or repentance can ever get back.

"PINAPONS" hats are on the heads of all the juveniles one encounters in the country. They are in no wise sensational, and are not suitable for Josephine.

DECORATIVE art has gone into the barrage, and all manner of tinges in the alleged Egyptian, and other lines, are stuck in as ornaments.

Married by Telegraph.

[Milwaukee News.]
A novel ceremony took place last evening, extending from the marriage to the wedding, in the marriage by telegraph. Miss M. E. Buddington and Mr. Louis W. Walker, of Minnesota, were visiting friends in this city, and Mr. Walker was in Minnesota on business. It was the desire that his brother, Rev. W. G. Walker, should perform the ceremony, and that gentleman being in Milwaukee, and not being able to remain until Mr.
Walker could reach here, it was determined to have the ceremony performed by telegraph last evening.

At 8 o'clock Miss Buddington, Mrs.
J. Frederick Bacon, of this city; Miss Julia Gardiner and Miss Franc E. Sibbey, of Sheboygan Falls; Professor and Mrs. C. H. Haskins, Harry Haskins, Rev. W. G. Walker, of Monmouth, Ill., brother of the groom, W.
S. Dalbelle, of Green Bay; George W.
Peck, W. G. Roberts, J. L. Kaine, and W. H. Kelsey, who worked the key, were present at Prof. Haskins room in the telegraph building. The bride was dressed in a dark dress, handsomely trimmed, white bonnet with lilies of the valley, and in her hand a beautiful bouquet of white flowers. Word was received from Owatonna that Mr.
Walker was ready for the ceremony.

The Rev. Mr. Walker then proposed the question, which was sent through by the operator: "You take Mary E. Buddington for your lawful wife, and promise to be faithful to her until separated by death?"

There was some delay in the response.
"The operator at the other end is nervous," suggested Prof. Haskins.

The bride entered into the spirit of fun that Peck induced, and suggested that it would be a little embarrassing
if he should say no.

"He's pondering over the question,"
said Haskins.

"In a minute," came over the wire.
The groom was evidently writing out his reply. It came in a moment:

"I do, and pledge her my love and protection, Lou W. Walker."
The minister then turned to the bride, recited the formula to be received her answer, and then, placing a ring upon her finger, said: "In token of the pledge I bestow upon her this ring and pronounce them man and wife."

"When you get through, tell him to come and visit us," said Peck to the operator.

The minister then pronounced the benediction, and the company present did their good wishes to the bride and telegraphed congratulations to the groom.

The affair went off pleasantly and smoothly. Miss Buddington has made many friends in Milwaukee during her visit who wish her abundant happiness as Mrs. Walker. She is the guest of Mrs. George W. Peck, on Biddle street. Mr. Walker, the groom, is a resident of Beaver Dam, this State.

A Prize Essay on Woman.
After man came woman.
And she has been after him ever since.
She is a person of free extraction,
being made of a man's rib.

I don't know why Adam wanted to fool away his ribs in that way, but I suppose he was not accountable for all he did.

It costs more to keep a woman than three dogs and a shot gun.
But she pays you back with interest—by giving you a house full of children to keep you awake at nights and smear molasses candy over your Sunday coat.

Besides, a wife is a very convenient article to have around the house.
She is handy to swear at whenever you cut yourself with a razor, and do not feel like blaming yourself.

Woman is the superior being in the State of Massachusetts.
—There are about 60,000 more of her sex than males in that State.

This accounts for the terrified, hunted-down expression of the single men who emigrate from the East.

Woman was not created perfect.
She had her faults—such as false hair, false complexion, and so on.

But she is a great deal better than her neighbor and she knows it.
Eye was a woman.

She must have been a model wife, too; for it cost Adam nothing to keep her in clothes.

Still, I don't think she was happy.
She couldn't go to sewing circles and air her information about every body she knew, nor excite envy of other ladies by wearing her new bonnet to church.

Neither could she hang over the back fence and gossip with her near neighbor.

All these blessed privileges were denied her.
Poor Eve, she's dead now!

And the fashion she inaugurated is dead too.

"There is some dispute as to whom is the author of our Baby." Is there? Well, if you were that critic, we'd be ashamed to own it. Any man who has a wife like that, ought to have manliness enough to be ashamed to admit it. We know who is the author of our baby.

A New Estimate of the World's Age.

Geologists, as astronomers and physicists alike have hitherto been baffled in their attempts to set up any satisfactory kind of chronometers which will approximately show us how old the world is.

antiquity of the globe. Mr. Millard Reade, of Liverpool, has recently contributed to the Royal Society a very suggestive paper in endeavors to grapple with the question by employing the limestone rocks of the earth's crust as an index of geological time. Limestones have been in the course of formation from the earliest known geological period, but it would appear that the latter formed strata are more cal-careous than the earlier, and that there has in fact been a gradually progressive increase of calcareous matter. The very extensive deposition of lime over wide areas of the ocean bottom at the present day is sufficiently attested by the recent soundings of the Challenger.

According to Mr. Reade's estimate, the sedimentary crust of the earth is at least one mile in average thickness, of which probable one-tenth consists of calcareous matter. In seeking the origin of the calcareous matter, it is assumed that the primitive rocks of the original crust were of the nature of granitic or basaltic rocks. By the disintegration of such rocks calcareous and other sedimentary deposits have been formed. The amount of lime salts in water which drained districts of granites and basalts is found, by a comparison of analyses, to be on an average about 3-73 in a thousand parts of water.

It is further assumed that the exposed areas of igneous rocks taking an average throughout all geological time will bear to the exposure of sedimentary rocks a ratio of one to nine. From these and other data Mr. Reade concludes that the elimination of the cal-careous matter now found in all the sedimentary strata must have occupied six hundred million of years. This, therefore represents the minimum age of the world.

The author infers that Laurentine, Cambrian and Silurian strata must have occupied about two hundred millions of years; the old red sandstone, the carboniferous period, the Permian systems, another two hundred millions of years; and all the other remaining strata the remaining two hundred million years. Mr. Reade is, therefore, led to believe that geological time has been erroneously in excess of the limits urged by certain physicists; and it has been ample to allow for all the changes which, on the hypothesis of evolution, have occupied in the organic world.—Scientific American.

The Village Blacksmith.
Under the spreading chestnut tree
The village smithy stands; The smith, a mighty man it is he—having been elected to represent his ward in the City Council. His hair is crisp and black and long—and to all appearances hasn't been combed since his mother used to comb it for him when he was a boy. His face is like the tan—but it wouldn't be so much like it if he would wash it once in a while. His brow is wet with honest sweat—and, as intimately above, it is about the only thing it is over wet with. Week in, week out, from morn till night, you can hear his bellows blow—and you can also hear the blacksmith blow louder than his bellows about the unheard of number of shoes he turned in an hour on a wager of $1,000. You can hear him swing his heavy hand-hammer—Longfellow calls it a "ledge," but in this our distinguished friend is a little off. It is the helper that twings the sledge.
We are not a little surprised that Mr.
Longfellow should make such a mistake as this regarding a business to which he was apprenticed, and which he honored so many years. But we digress. Children coming home from school look in at the open door. They love to hear the bellows roar and see the flaming forge—but they most love to see the village blacksmith wrestle with a three year-old colt he is trying to shoe

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL,
Editor and Proprietor.

BURLINGTON, KY., JULY 8.

The proposition to call a convention for the purpose of revising the constitution of the State is apparently becoming more popular as the time for taking the vote draws nigh. That it should be overhauled is patent for not a few reasons. The constitution was framed by the State at a time when the State Government required just such an instrument, and was, therefore, a good piece of work in its day; but since 1850 the habits of the people have changed in a great many respects with the advancement brought about by the onward march of time. In fact, there has been almost a complete revolution in the State, and the places of the prominent men of three decades since are assigned to men of another age; an age differing widely in many respects with that in which the present constitution of Kentucky became the fundamental law of the State. The great changes in many particulars, and which have come about silently and almost imperceptibly demand a change in many of the older rules of government.

One strong objection to the present constitution of Kentucky is the slow process that has to be gone through with in order to effect any change, no matter how palpable the wrong desired to be changed. Vote after vote has to be taken on the proposition to call the convention, as an article in another column shows, and at each election a majority of all the qualified voters in the State must vote in favor of the proposition before the convention can be called. Hence, we see that the last Constitutional Convention made a long stride toward perpetuating its work, when it embodied in the instrument such extraordinary measures bearing on the subject of revision. It was not right for those who had control of the Constitutional Convention in 1850 to so effectually tie the hands of the citizens of the State at this day. They knew the wants of the citizens of that day, but were not familiar with nor had they any conceptions of the necessities of the people of 1879. It can not be denied that tampering with the constitution is a delicate business, but when a State's constitution gets as far behind the times as that of this State is, it should be carefully remodelled.

As our readers were told last week, that portion of the constitution in which slavery is recognized is a dead letter, and should be erased, to make it consistent with the constitution of the United States.

One clause excludes all negroes, mulattoes, and all other persons not white from voting; but the fifteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States says they shall have the right to vote, and consequently the constitution of Kentucky is void on that proposition. Then why not take it out?

Again, it says negroes shall not be subject to militia service. This was all well enough in the days of slavery, but since that class of persons are allowed access to the ballot box, and put on the same footing with the whites as regards elections and the right to acquire and hold property, justice demands that they be subjected to the same militia law that the whites are.

Section 2 of Article 10, provides that if any free negro or mulatto shall settle in the State, he shall be deemed guilty of a felony and punished by confinement in the Penitentiary for a term of years. Under this section the State of Kentucky is thronged with felons. Who will say that a State document so absurd can not be bettered by a revision?

Another section declares that no candidate shall bribe or treat for the purpose of securing his election. This is, as all know, violated in every canvass, and has been for years. Would it not be better to have that section eliminated or couched in language that will make the "whipping of the devil around the stump" business more hazardous. There is the fewest number of officials who hold their positions free of taint from this clause. This was intended to assist in sustaining the purity of the ballot but was a signal failure.

Under the constitution we have too many elections; that is, the terms of office are too short. For example we will take the office of sheriff. This officer is first elected for two years, and is eligible for the second term. The first term is not sufficient and the incumbent is generally elected for the second term, after which he is ineligible for two years. It would be much better for the Sheriff, as well as for the people, were he given the office for six or eight years and made ineligible forever thereafter. The terms of all the county officials being thus lengthened and the incumbent compelled to vacate at the close of one term, will remedy many evils now existing.

Another change suggested is that in relation to the right of the majority of any particular district to vote a tax on a minority, even though the minority may own all the property. The Legislature has the right to grant such privileges and often exercises it.

In some places the language of the constitution is dubious, causing its interpretation to be difficult. The division of the Court of Appeals on the constitutionality of the local option law is a proof of this defect which presents itself often.

There are other objections that may be enumerated among the causes demanding a general revision of the constitution, while the principal objection to the convention is the cost. The State is now as able to meet the necessary expense as she will ever be. It is an expense that will come sooner or later, and the longer the delay the greater will be the cost.

We should like to see every vote in Boone cast on the first Monday in next month, and recorded in favor of the Constitutional Convention.

The Attorney-General has commenced making it interesting for some of the Sheriffs and their bondsmen. One day last week he took judgments against the Sheriffs of the following counties for balance of revenue due by them to the State Treasury for 1878: Adair, $431.46; Bell, $1,416.42; Boyd, $4,869.82; Breathitt, $1,384.13; Carter, $4,563.53; Fleming, $4,578.76; Henderson, $10,486.61; Jefferson, $31,351.93; Kenton, $1,429.30; Laurel, $1,310.68; Lawrence, $1,106.15; Lewis, $3,766.23; Lee, $1,658.43; Lincoln, $1,122.88; McLean, $3,638.86; Magoffin, $1,367.13; Muhlenburg, $7,054.25; Nelson, $17,193.64; Powell, $1,004.91; Pike, $1,378.24; Simpson, $2,099.05; Taylor, $2,760.68. This, together with the fact that a large number of the school teachers in the State are awaiting payment for services long since rendered, is strong proof that there is something radically wrong in the laws controlling the collection of the revenue, and it is a matter which the Legislature should seek to remedy this winter. The teachers in this State, as a class, are dependent on their labors, and should have their money promptly at the time the State promises to pay. The idea of a State's promising to pay out money for a specified purpose at a specified time, and having no power to force the collection of money with which to meet the payment is an absurdity which should be erased at the earliest day possible. Kentucky is abundantly able to pay, and pay well, her teachers, and if the next General Assembly is true to the cause of education, the example which we now have will not occur again. There is a remedy for the evil and the Legislature is the avenue through which the relief must come.

TO-MORROW is the fourth of July, the "day we celebrate," but while every man woman and child in the land may take part in the wild hurrah, listen to eloquent speeches and manifest great enthusiasm in honor of the transaction that took place in the city of Philadelphia on the fourth of July, '78, there is a great insufficiency of patriotism—such as warmed the breasts of the signers of the Declaration of Independence and prompted them to perform an act which gave existence to a nation that has gradually grown to be the most powerful one on the globe.

Many patriotic words will be uttered to-morrow by men who almost claim to be patriotism personified, but in reality are nothing more than reservoirs of selfish motives. There are but few, if any, of the men who will make the longest and loudest speeches on the morrow, that are not trying to ride into some lucrative position on the tide of popular opinion. Money, and not the love of country, at the present day, is the motive power in political circles, and the strife it produces has wrought a complete departure from the landmarks erected by the originators of the Declaration of Independence. But the fourth of July would continue to be celebrated, no doubt, were this Government changed to a Despotism. It is natural for the American people to commemorate that day, so we say, on with the wild hurrah.

SOME favor the constitution being amended as to have the judiciary of the State appointed instead of elected. This would be no improvement, for the evil sought to be remedied would only be driven to another ambush. Favoritism would soon commence cropping out, and the friends of those vested with the appointing power would be the recipients of all bestowals of appointments, without a sufficient considering of qualifications.

On the first page will be found a brief account of the triple murder in Henry County, last week. Reports from there last Saturday were to the effect that four of the alleged murderers had been captured, and three of them held over without bail, while the fourth had his examining trial continued. The captives are very reticent about the matter, only asserting their innocence.

These pedagogues may commence preparing for the Institute which convenes on the 12th of next month. The teachers should take advantage of that occasion and adopt a set of resolutions calling upon our County Representative to use his influence toward securing the legislation necessary to have their money on hand when the State promises to pay the teachers.

We are in receipt of the catalogue of premiums to be awarded by the 22d annual Fair of the North Kentucky Agricultural Society. The Fair this season will be equal to if not better than those of the past. Several special premiums are to be awarded during the week, and the programme is so arranged as to give to each day some special attraction.

The papers all over the State pronounce the wheat crop the best that has been harvested for many years. There are very few localities in which the wheat was injured in the least by the rust. The drought reduced the crop of straw, but the heads were well filled with perfectly matured grains.

WELL may the Republican candidate for Lieutenant-Governor of Ohio exclaim "what is there in a name," when he reads his name twisted into Heckenlooper, Lopenhecker, Picklechoke, Hopenkicker, Popenhickler, Pickenchooper, Pockylooper, Cnoop-enicker, Poopelchicken, or Chicklepicken.

The rain which fell last Friday and Saturday, did a vast amount of good in this as well as adjoining counties. The pastures were becoming dry, while of the growing crops potatoes needed rain the most, and its delay a few days longer would have seriously affected the tubers.

ONE of most remarkable feats ever accomplished in railroadng was performed last Saturday by the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railroad in a change of gauge on seven hundred miles of road. The change was made in about fourteen hours.

It is said that a steam road wagon is up on the turnpike road between Hopkinsville and Clarksville.

BALTIMORE was visited by a cyclone last Saturday. Considerable property was destroyed.

CONGRESS adjourned Monday.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to the Recorder.
WASHINGTON, June 26, 1879.
Congress can unquestionably adjourn on Monday. To-day, the last remnants of the Appropriation Bill will be presented in the House, and promptly passed through House and Senate. Everything, except Marshals, will be provided for in one of them, and that bill will be approved. The other will provide for Marshals, but will prohibit the payment of anything to election Marshals. This, Mr. Hayes will veto, and then Congress will adjourn.

The true inwardness of Republican filibustering against McLean's bill prohibiting assessments against Government officials is shown by a hurried demand upon the clerks here for campaign purposes in Ohio. And this is the party of principle and great moral ideas. The assessment in the Treasury under Secretary Sherman, who hopes to be President if Foster is elected Governor of Ohio, is one per cent, and this is a reform administration.

The next Governor of Ohio, General Thomas Ewing, left here yesterday, to consult with the next Lieutenant-Governor, General Rice. These two make up the Democratic ticket in that State. And, by the way, we hear much less about Confederate Brigadiers since these two Union soldiers and patriotic citizens were placed in nomination. A very little fact will puncture a great bag of fiction.

One who has lived long in this city, and been familiar with the manner in which the public business is conducted will appreciate the necessity for such investigation as is proposed by the following resolution offered on Tuesday by Senator Beck:

"That a joint committee composed of five Senators and seven Representatives be appointed in such manner as each House may determine to examine and report at an early day of the next December session of this Congress, what changes, if any, ought to be made in the mode of guarding or collecting the revenue either from customs or internal taxation, or in the management of the various Departments and Bureaus of the Government, with a view to efficiency in service and economy in appropriations of the public money. Said committee shall report whether changes from permanent to annual appropriations would be advantageous or otherwise, in whole or in part; it shall have power to sit during the recess, to examine witnesses, send for persons and papers, administer oaths, appoint sub-committees, and visit such places as will enable it to obtain such information as it may desire, and the expense of the Committee shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the two Houses in the proportion to the number of members of each."

Capt. Jas. Eads was tendered by Mr. Hayes a place on the Miss. River Improvement Commission, but declined, because he thinks the bill subordinating the civil to the military engineers on the Commission. It is a matter of brains in the long run though in that Commission as elsewhere, and the Captain's genius would have asserted itself, no matter what the position.

Hog Cholera Cured.

Send $2 to S. McGuffin, Rising Sun, Ind., and get a Recipe for the Remedy.

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

This is to certify that I, Ferdinand Rue, bought of S. McGuffin the knowledge to cure cholera October 2, 1877. To that date I had lost six months-old pigs and three old sows. When I left home nine more were sick and two were not able to walk. I commenced giving the medicine, and in one week I had them all cured. I now have 84 fat hogs, well and hearty, and 47 pigs and shoats, which are all well, and have lost none since I got the cure, and this is Jan. 1, 1878. I have raised hogs for the last thirty years, and several years I lost all I had by cholera. Now I know I have a sure cure, and do testify that it will cure as S. McGuffin represents, and has saved me, had I not the $2 I gave, at 3 cents per pound, $760, and 47 shoats, $2 per head, $94, a clear saving of $850. My neighbors are still clearing hogs with the cholera, and I give this notice for their benefit.

OUR St. Louis correspondent sends good tidings in regard to the growing corn crop in the West.

It is said that Secretary Sherman will take part in the campaign, this fall, in both Maine and Ohio.

THE Lawrenceburg (Ind.) Register estimates General Ewing's majority in Ohio, this fall, at ten thousand.

In Newport, Sunday, W. Phil. Parry killed George Black. The parry grew out of Parry's occupying a house on premises rented by Black.

The trial of Thomas Buford for the murder of Judge Elliott, was called in Owensboro, Tuesday. Many prominent lawyers from a distance were expected to attend during the sitting of the court.

MEMPHIS people are indignant over the report that the yellow fever has again appeared in that city. They affirm that there is no probability of the scourge returning if strict sanitary regulations are observed.

At a recent examination of teachers in the city of Louisville, one hundred and ten were deprived of their certificates. Revoking certificates at that rate throughout the State would make a demand for teachers, and, no doubt, result in a great improvement on the average country school.

The news from Paris is to the effect that the weather throughout Europe is very unfavorable for growing crops, and the outlook discouraging. The French Minister of Commerce estimates that France will be compelled to buy over 550,000,000 bushels of foreign corn. Southern Russia is beset by grasshoppers, corn-beetles and other destructive insects.

SITTING BULL has recently been interviewed by a newspaper reporter. The warrior says he will not go to a gift-house, will hunt as long as there is wild game on the prairies, and when the buffaloes are all gone he will send his children to the prairies to hunt mice. He proposes to let alone and be let alone, but if interfered with will make it interesting for the long knives.

ONE day last week, Alexander H. Harthill, proprietor of the Tobacco News and Price Current, published in Louisville, filed damage suits against three tobacco firms in that city. The aggregate amount of damages claimed is $75,000. The plea is that the defendants have defamed his character by publishing a statement in regard to him in one of the daily papers some time ago.

We understand that some of those who have claims against the State for services rendered as school teachers, are threatening to sue the School Commissioner for their money. This is certainly very unnecessary, for that official has published, but a few weeks since, a circular letter from the State Auditor which showed conclusively that there is no money in the Treasury with which to pay. Under these circumstances a suit against the Commissioner would be the height of folly.

NEARLY all the papers in the State are outspoken in favor of the convention being called to amend the State Constitution. The fact that the law calling for a vote on the proposition requires that a majority of the voters in the State, as returned by the various Assessors, be cast in favor of the convention before another move can be made throws everything in favor of its defeat, and, therefore, it is incumbent upon those friendly toward the measure to turn out in force on election day. Every voter who stays at home that day will be counted as opposing the calling of the convention. It is a proposition easily defeated; and can be voted down by not voting on the question at all.

The Cincinnati Price Current states from information from 225 correspondents, that the prospective supply of hogs for market before next winter is considerably short of last year—probably from twenty to twenty-five per cent. less. In Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana there is evidence of a marked decrease in the supply, while Illinois will not be largely short of last year, and Iowa will likewise be but little deficient; Missouri will probably furnish as many, and Kansas and Nebraska more than last year. The expressions offered, taken literally, would probably point to a larger decrease than suggested, but observations in the past lead to the conclusion that the tendency is to overestimate a decrease in supply.

MONDAY, Hon. James E. Cantrill, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, delivered a speech in the Court-house. There was not a very large crowd in town that day, consequently his audience was limited, the seats in the Court-room not all being occupied. Captain Cantrill was introduced by "Uncle Milt," of Kenton. Having thanked the Democracy of Boone for its support in the May convention at Louisville, he briefly referred to the Democratic State platform, after which he attacked the financial policy of the Republican party, claiming it is a failure which has brought want and penury to the threshold of many. He next paid his respects to election laws which, of late, have been the subject of so much legislation by Congress. He showed plainly how easy, under the law providing for the appointment of Marshals and Supervisors of Elections, it is for the will of the people to be defeated under the pretext of maintaining the peace at the polls. Next in order he took up the charge made by the Republicans that the Democratic party of Kentucky is partial to the rebel soldier in its selection of candidates to office, and that the State ticket is composed of ex-rebel soldiers. Both these he denied, claiming that neither Wat Harkin, candidate for Attorney-General, nor J. W. Tate, candidate for State Treasurer were rebel soldiers; but, on the other hand, he proclaimed that the Kentucky Republicans had turned a deaf ear to the request of Union soldiers who desired to be honored at the party's hands; that the record of Walter Evans, the only federal soldier on the Republican State ticket, as a soldier is very brief; and that all the lucrative offices that are filled by appointments made by the President are occupied, not by Federal soldiers, but by politicians; that this is not the case only in Kentucky, but all over the country. He charged the Republicans with having failed to extend the possessions of the United States, except as to the territory of Alaska, while during the days of Democratic rule extensive and valuable territory was acquired. The speech closed with an exhortation for the Democrats to turn out in full force on the first Monday in August. The speech consumed about an hour and was well liked by the Boone Democracy.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

St. Louis, Mo., July 5, 1879.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The Republican of this morning has 18 columns of incidents and accidents of yesterday, and to sum up and fairly digest each and every incident of record, it will then only be necessary for me to say that yesterday was what is termed out this way the glorious 4th of July. The only new feature in the day's proceedings was a sham battle on the part of the Independent Militia Companies of the city, which came off at the race course in the afternoon. And for fear your readers may not know what a sham battle is, we will simply say it is a battle in which there is a good deal of shooting, in which nobody gets hurt, and the fellows who generally engage in such amusements are the very chaps that never expect to see real service. These Independent companies (said to be our protectors), are generally made up of young men who have sweethearts, and they are particularly fond of glory, but, as a general thing they do not care about paying a big price for it. Well, we wish it was gone, but we suppose its effects, at least, will linger with us until after to-morrow, and possibly throughout a portion of the coming week. Our merchants, on Wednesday last, by a large, and we may say by an almost unanimous vote, resolved to follow in the wake of New York and

Chicago, and have no session of our Chamber of Commerce, to-day; consequently, business is, as yet, in a manner suspended, and while we can record it as a pleasant fact that there was not one life lost in the sham battle, or even a wound thereby from the musketry, it is nevertheless a very unpleasant fact that the usual number of our patriotic citizens, during the day, got shot in the neck, and many of them will make no preparation to recover from same before Monday morning, and even then it is quite probable that a goodly number will go to work with aching heads and empty pockets. There were the usual accidents throughout the city, from careless use of fire works, such as fingers being shot off, &c., but there was not a severe accident within the city limits. But, before we leave this subject, we have to record a very serious accident on the narrow gauge railroad, a few miles west of the city, by which there was quite a number badly bruised, and some few came out of same with broken limbs. It was simply a collision, and being the 4th of July, it is hardly necessary to speculate as to the cause of the collision.

We are still having copious showers and in many portions of the West tremendous storms, causing, in many localities, not only damage to crops, but actual loss of life. Minnesota was visited by a terrible hurricane, on last Wednesday, blowing down barns, houses, and causing immense destruction of life and property. We have no heart to go into details, and will have to refer you to the papers for the particulars of same.

New wheat is now coming freely, and of better quality than ever before known, and it is now pretty generally conceded that we have fully as many bushels of wheat in the country as we had at this time last year. Even the bulls and croakers begin to admit this, but this latter class is making big calculations on large quantities of wheat likely to be damaged in the shock, and it would not surprise the writer if there is already some damage done the wheat that was caught in the shock, but, as yet, we do not believe the damage is enough to gratify the bulls, or cause any advance in prices. There is, however, not a doubt but that the oat crop is short, and there is also a strong probability that the barley crop will not pan out as well as usual, and we may, with safety, say the year crop is hardly as good as last year, and in reality we believe there will be a falling off in the cereal. But you may set it down as a fact worthy of note that the corn crop never was as promising as at this time, and should nothing occur beyond reasonable anticipations to effect this cereal, the West will produce 50 per cent. more corn this year than in any former year.

The Record of this week is not so hot as of late, and we are pleased to say our farmers are blessed with a bountiful harvest, and that, too, of a superior quality. Now, let the good people of old Boone go to work and repair, and rebuild school-houses that will be a credit to them, and let the good people of the grand old Commonwealth provide means to pay her educators for their services as rendered, and we will say we are proud of our native State, and lay our pen down and—

—Four acres of wheat were burned in Woodford County last week, having ignited from a stump set on fire by harvest hands who wished to light their pipes.

—Bedford, the county seat of Trimble County, has fifteen lawyers, three editors, two printers and seventeen widows, and yet it only claims about 800 inhabitants.

—The Eminence Constitutionalist says some married women had a select burgoon in the woods the other day, but their husbands appeared in the bushes and so frightened the women that they were glad to divide the edibles.

—The Woodford Sun says several farmers tried salt on their wheat, with most satisfactory results. W. H. Graves tried some on one field, leaving a portion not salted; he says the salted yielded 10 bushels more per acre.

—The Owen News says there is more gambling being carried on in Owen at this time than was ever before known since the town has existed, and that, too, within half a stone's throw of the great Temple of Justice.

—Post and News: Failing to recognize that the State and Legislative canvass is enough for the suffering people to bear, Lexington men are announcing themselves candidates for Constable at the election to occur August, 1880.

—The Somerset Reporter says that that portion of the Southern Railroad which is to be completed south of that place, is said to be the finest work of the kind in America, and even better than the completed part between Somerset and Cincinnati.

—Paris Kentuckian: Our farmers succeeded in getting their wheat under shelter before the late rains. The grain is excellent in quality, and the yield good. Copious showers have revived vegetation, corn is doing well, and our farmers are hopeful and happy.

—Yeoman: The number of prisoners confined at the Penitentiary yesterday was 1,023, of which 459 were white males, 4 white females, 523 black males and 37 black females. Total number of whites, 463; total number of blacks, 560. For the last ten years there has been about twenty per cent. more blacks than whites at this institution.

—In Ohio County a team of horses attached to a wagon belonging to Andrew Crow became frightened and ran away, upsetting the wagon, killing instantly a son and daughter of Mr. Crow and breaking both arms of Miss Ida Clapp. Two other persons who were in the wagon escaped with slight injuries by jumping out while the wagon was in motion.

—Greensburg Independent: There is on file, in our clerk's office, in an old suit long since decided, the papers of which are darkened by age, a deposition of Thomas Jefferson, taken before he was elected President. The deposition and certificate are in the handwriting of Jefferson except the signatures of the two magistrates before whom it was taken. He mentions Colonel Washington, Braddock's defeat and the part taken by some of Washington's officers on that memorable occasion.

—Frankfort Roundabout: Two or three weeks ago, a farmer by the name of Floyd, who lives upon the place formerly occupied by King Jim Simmons, on Pot Riddle, Henry County, started out to work in his corn-field, and stopping at his spring to wait for his boys, he saw a bone sticking out of the ground near by, and commenced digging with his hoe, when he discovered the skeleton of a man buried under stone and earth. Calling the attention of some of his neighbors to the fact, they examined the bones and came to the conclusion that they were the remains of a peddler, who was in that vicinity, and who mysteriously disappeared during the reign of the Simmons-Shuck gang, some ten years ago.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

BURLINGTON, KY., JULY 10.

June Report of Agricultural Bureau.

At the time our monthly report for May went to press, the prospects for crops of all kinds were gloomier than they had been in years. More than one hundred correspondents from every part of the State sang the same sad song. The protracted drought of more than a month's duration, at a most critical time, had ruined the chances of some of the crops beyond recovery, while with all it had checked their growth and threatened a partial failure. At the same time the same sad wail came from the South and West. But the revivifying showers came at last, and they were generous and general, making the heart of the husbandman to rejoice with exceeding joy.

Corn.—From the united testimony of our corps of correspondents, as well as from our own observations, made on a recent somewhat extended tour, we are prepared to state that, where there was an early and a good stand of corn, the outlook was never more flattering than at this writing. More than half the area planted, however, had to be planted over, and in many cases more than once, on account of defective seed corn. In all such cases the contrast between the fields that had good stands from the first and those that had to be planted over is both marked and remarkable. Whether there will be a full crop raised on the late-planted fields depends on farming seasons and a late fall. In no case can it be equal in quality to the earlier planted corn. The lesson so recently and so universally taught our farmers from using defective seed corn ought not soon to be forgotten. We repeat our suggestion to the farmers to leave enough of their best corn to mature on the stalk from which to select seed, and when perfectly dry to gather it and put it up in the shock.

Wheat.—The rains came just in the nick of time to save and mature the wheat crop. While on the thin lands the yield will be much below what it would have been with a fair season, on the strong hands the yield is a large per cent. above an average. Throughout the State the quality is reported as superior; more so, perhaps, than it has been for years. Our best judgment is, from the information before us, that the present crop may be rated at 10 or 15 per cent. above last year's crop. Our information is that the crop harvested in the Western wheat-growing States is unusually large and of fine quality. This is particularly the case in Iowa. Under this state of things, while the farmers may expect remunerative prices for their wheat, they can not expect prices to range very high unless there should be a large foreign demand. Our latest information is that the prospects for a generous harvest in Great Britain is anything but flattering.

Small.—Some of our correspondents speak of entire fields being ruined by smut, while all fields sown with wheat prepared with lime-stone and lime show a perfect exemption from it. There can be no better excuse for having smut in wheat, when you have it, than your power to guard against it, than there is in planting defective seed corn. The barley and rye crops, while not so beneficially affected by the rains as the wheat, will, nevertheless, make a fair yield and of good quality. Taking the oats crop throughout the State, there will not be more than a half crop harvested.

Meadows.—While some extra rich meadows have yielded fair crops, most meadows have scarcely been worth cutting. The timothy hay crop may be classed as a failure. To replace, as far as may be, this important item in our winter stores, there has been much more clover hay put up this season than usual.

Hemp.—If the season had been ever so propitious, the hemp crop would have been far below that of last year, because of the decreased acreage sown. With all the conditions unfavorable to its production from the middle of April until June, the yield of that that was sown must be largely below the average and of inferior quality. Many of the fields look as if growing two crops at once, owing to the fact that part of the seed came up at one time and part at another, two or three weeks thereafter. The result will be that half of the hemp will be of the coarseness of seed stalk. Besides, it can not ripen with uniformity, and the lint, or fiber, can not be of uniform quality.

Tobacco.—A correspondent who has been to the sources of information than any other, and, therefore, whose opinion is entitled to weight, thinks, as compared with last year, there is about 90 per cent. of a crop planted in the Radcliff, Hopkinsville, Henderson and Owensboro districts. These embrace the chief tobacco-growing districts in the State. All correspondents agree that where a stand has been secured, the plants are looking thrifty and healthy. In some cases the plants have perished because of being set without a sufficient season, and the lands have had to be utilized by planting some other crop. The freer and more general use of fertilizers, and a more careful cultivation, will, no doubt, give both a greater product to the acre and a better article, so that in pounds, and particularly in money value, it is fair to assume that this year's crop will be equal to, if it does not exceed, that of last year.

Garden Products.—The early garden vegetables were dwarfed and stunted by the protracted drought. The Irish potatoes were damaged from the same cause, so that there can not possibly be more than a half crop, and that of quite an inferior quality. There was, however, a very much larger acreage planted this year than last, and the supply may be equal to the demand. There is a great scarcity of late cabbage plants. A short crop of these staples of the kitchen garden would be seriously felt.

Fruit.—The partial apple and pear crops will be much smaller than we had promise of when our last report was issued. Damaged by the extreme cold winter and the cold snap in April, the young fruit, after obtaining the size of marbles, is continually falling off. The prospect of a full half crop of grapes is assured.

Bees.—The orchards in a large measure failing to bloom, and the white clover pastures cut short by the drought of last month, the bees have been deprived, to a large extent, of the usual sources from which they draw their supplies. If these are not substituted by buckwheat, sown at different times, very many colonies must perish during the coming winter. The prudent bee fancier will take time by the forelock, and come to their aid in every possible way.

All in all, comparing the outlook at present with the gloomy prospect of a month or six weeks back, the farmers ought to wear cheerful countenances. With a superior wheat crop harvested and a fair prospect for a good crop of our two other great staples, corn and tobacco, so far from desponding, they should take courage and go forward, noting all errors of the past and avoiding them in the future.

C. B. DOWMAN, Commissioner.

Prime of Life.

Between the ages of forty-five and sixty a man who has properly regulated himself may be considered in the prime of life. His matured strength of constitution renders him almost impervious to any attack of disease, and experience has given soundness to his judgment. His mind is resolute, firm and equal; all his functions are in the highest order; he assumes mastery over his business; builds up a competence he has laid in early manhood, and passes through a period of life attended by many gratifications.

Having gone a year or two over sixty, he arrives at a stand still. But at that time is the viaduct called the turn of life, which, if crossed in safety, leads to the valley of old age, round which the river winds, and then beyond, without boat or causeway, to effect his passage.

The bridge is, however, generally constructed of fragile material, and it depends on how it is trodden whether it bend or break. Gout and apoplexy are also in the vicinity to waylay the traveler and thrust him from the path; but let him guide up his loins and provide himself with a fitter staff, and he may trudge on in safety and with perfect composure. To quit metaphor, the "turn of life" is a turn either into a prolonged walk or into the grave.

The system and powers having reached the utmost expansion, now begin either to close like a flower at sunset or break down at once. One injudicious stimulant, a single fatal excitement, may force it beyond its strength, while a careful supply of props and the withdrawal of all that tends to force a plant will sustain it in beauty and vigor until night has entirely set.

Turnpikes in Trouble.

The last Legislature passed a law requiring the Directors of turnpikes to report to the County Court annually the condition of the finances of their respective companies, under a penalty of not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars, the fines to go to the county treasury for the benefit of the county. All the directors (they allege from ignorance of the law), failed to report, and the County Attorney, Miller, demanded the County Judge to issue warrants against them.

This Judge Brown refused to do, alleging that under the law he has no authority to do so, unless ordered by the County Court, composed of the Magistrates. Mr. Miller, on the other hand, asserts that the Judge alone has jurisdiction, and that he will proceed either by mandamus to compel him to issue them or let the responsibility rest with the County Court. The matter has produced considerable excitement among the directors. Mr. Miller insists that the directors have been for twenty years enjoining the county out of $600 to $700 each year, in the matter of free tolls, in spite of the Commissioner S. S. Roberts' report, and that this and other leaks shall be stopped. —Stanton Journal.

"Then, doctor, mine is a hopeless case—I am indeed attacked by one of those awful maladies which science does not treat—which you do not prescribe for." "Not so, not so bad as that—we treat such complaints—I prescribe for them." But do the prescriptions do any good? "Not the least."

EXAMINING a candidate for the generalmerit—"Suppose you are going along with two prisoners and one of them ran away what would you do?" "What would I do? Why I would shoot the other and pursue the fugitive." He is at once admitted to the force and assigned to the Twenty-ninth Arrondissement.

BY THE SEA.
BY T. B. CRYSTAL.

My blue-eyed pet with golden hair
Is sitting on my knee,
And gazing eagerly at
Across the beach beyond the bar,
Where rolls the restless sea.

She puts her little hands in mine
And laughs with childish glee,
To see the towering billows splash,<
And on the beach the foaming dash
The turmoil of the sea.

But while she laughs so merrily
My heart is fast away;
And, as I look upon the shore,
Where loud and long the breakers roar,
My soul seems to say:

"The sea is like a human life:
It breaks upon the shore;
Of time with a restless might,
And, when the goal is just in sight,
Dies—when return no more."

"And all along the shore of time
Full many a voice has said:
The pang of many a mad career,
Of blasted hopes and broken vows,
Of happy days gone by."

Yet while I muse in mournful mood,
And gaze upon the sea,
My blue-eyed pet with golden hair,
Whose heart has never known a care,
Still sits upon my knee.

Her head is resting on my breast—
Her eyes in slumber close;
The same rough sea whose breakers roar,
And madly fiercely lash the shore,
Has lulled my child to sleep.

What an Old Man has Noticed.
I have noticed that all men are honest
when watched.

I have noticed that a purse will hold pennies as well as pounds.

I have noticed that in order to be reasonable creatures, it is necessary to be downright mad at times.

I have noticed that silks, broad-cloths and jewels, are often bought with other people's money.

I have noticed that what is right, with a few exceptions—the left eye and the left leg and the left side of a plum pudding.

I have noticed that the prayer of the selfish man is, "Forgive us our debts," while he makes every body that owes him pay to the utmost farthing.

I have noticed that he who thinks every man a rogue, is certain to see one when he sees himself, and he ought, in mercy to his neighbor, to surrender
the rascal to justice.

I have noticed that money is the fool's wisdom, the knave's reputation, the poor man's desire, the covetous man's ambition, and the idol of them all.

KANSAS farmers are inveighing against the negro influx, and declaring loudly that they want Kansas to be a "White Man's State." They are opposed to the negro coming into competition with negro labor, and to all appearances they are preparing to make as much noise over the negro immigration as the Californians are making over the emigration from China. Late expressions from Kansas journals indicate that much indignation is felt at the action of the "Kansas Freedmen's Relief Association" in inviting negroes to that State. Ex-Governor Anthony pronounces it a piece of political buncombe, and says, "The agricultural portion of the population does not want the negro element." The negroes have found this out long ago, and such as are able to work their way back to their old homes are doing so as rapidly as they can. There will be no more exodus among this class of Southern population. The experience of those who have made the journey has been amplified to prevent its recurrence.

The Country Newspaper.
Some of our people have recently contended with us that the city papers are generally cheaper and better than the country papers. Let us see about this. Do the city papers ever give you any home news? Never. Do they say anything in regard to your own country? Nothing. No, they contain no notices of your churches, school improvements, and hundreds of other local matters of interest which your local papers publish without pay. Do they say a word calculated to call attention to your county and its numerous thriving towns, and aid in their progress and enterprise? No. And yet there are men who take such contracted views of this question that unless they are getting as many square inches of reading matter in their own paper as they do in a city paper, they think they are not getting the worth of their money.—Exchange.

About Women.
Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe writes that the South is doing fully as well by its emancipated slaves as it could be expected to do.

A number of ladies have petitioned Mrs. A. T. Stewart to reopen the former "Woman's Hotel," as a woman's hotel at reduced rates.

Mrs. Sarah Winter Kellogg, author of many entertaining stories, published in Lippincott's, St. Nicholas and elsewhere, lives in Iowa.

Mrs. J. W. Gilbert, of Hartford Connecticut, is the champion chess player. She is said to be one of the strongest players in the world.

Girls have their trials as well as the rest of the world; but nothing so harrows the feelings of a young woman as to be beaten at archery by a girl whose costume cost less than her own.

A Canadian girl saw flames bursting from the roof of a house. She seized a ladder, carried it to the house, mounted to the roof, and with a dozen pails of water put the fire out herself.

A timid Bostonian married a woman whose weight verged closely upon 200 pounds. "My dear," said he to her,
"I shall help you over the fence?"
"No," said she to him, "help the fence."

A Mobile paper describes a young lady with "hair as black as a raven's."
The raven's were wearing any hair to speak of last summer; but we suppose the style has changed this summer.

Miss Mary Hall, sister to the late Ezra Hall, has been appointed a Commissioner of the Superior Court of the State of Connecticut. This is the first appointment of a woman to an office of this kind in that State.

Mrs. Pollard, of Liege, Belgium, at Niagara Falls, on the 20th of June, borrowed a drinking-cup of her husband, while visiting the Three Sisters Island, and stooping for a drink, fell into the swiftly running waters, and was swept over the Horseshoe Fall. The husband and wife were on their wedding tour.

A VIRGINIA paper tells of a woman who had a sick hen which she cut open to satisfy a landable curiosity. Upon making the dissection she found inside her hen forty eggs, twenty-five of which were full sized, and the other fifteen ranged downward from the size of a hickory nut. These were all taken out and the hen, after being sewed up, began to recover rapidly, and is now well and lively again.

The women in Sweden play an important part in primary instruction;
the State schools employ not less than four thousand and eight hundred. They also compete successfully with men in a great number of branches of work which are elsewhere monopolized by men. Some examples are found of women directing private banks, and in a provincial city it is a woman who fills the part of Municipal Treasurer.

A California widow who has been visiting relatives near Rondot, N. Y., was driven to the Mary Powell's wharf on Saturday morning. After the steamer's lines were cast, a typhoon of wind had reached the middle of the stream, and the lady appeared at the ticket-office window with an appealing exclamation that she had lost her wallet, and that it was filled with valuables. The vessel put back to the wharf, and a friend who was with her, mounted a horse and started back to overtake the carriage. He caught up with it before long, and found a large red leather wallet under the seat. It contained a gold chain, a set of cameo earrings which cost $2,500, a diamond brooch of star diamonds which cost $4,000, a check for $3,000 payable to bearer, four $100 bills, and two or three $10 bills.

Courage in Everyday Life.
Have the courage to make a will and just one.

Have the courage to tell a man why you will not lend him your money.

Have the courage to wear your old clothes till you pay for your new ones.

Have the courage to obey your Maker at the risk of being ridiculed by man.

Have the courage to prefer comfort and prosperity to fashion in all things.

Have the courage to discharge a debt while you have the money in your pocket.

Have the courage to do without that which you do not need, however your eyes may covet it.

Have the courage to provide entertainment for your friends within your means—not beyond.

Have the courage to speak to a friend in a "seedy" coat, even though you are in company with a rich one, and richly attired.

Have the courage to speak your mind when necessary you should do so, and to hold your tongue when it is prudent you should do so.

Have the courage to show respect for honesty, in whatever guise it appears; and your contempt for dishonesty and duplicity, by whomsoever exhibited.

Have the courage to "cut" the most agreeable acquaintance you have when you are convinced that he lacks principle. "A friend should bear with a friend's infirmities," but not with his vices.

About Farm Deeds.
Judge Bennett, in an address before the Massachusetts Board of Agriculture upon topics relating to legal questions in connection with the farm, some of the points of which we have previously given, had this to say in relation to farm deeds and what they include, which we extract as follows:
It conveys all the fences standing on the farm, but all might not think it also included the fencing stuff, post, rails, etc., which had once been used on the fence, but had been taken down and piled up for future use again in the same place. But new fencing material just bought and never attached to the soil would not pass.

No piles of hoop-poles stored away, if once used on the land, have been considered a part of it, but loose boards or scaffold-poles laid loose across the beams of the barn and never fastened to it would not be, and the seller of the farm might take them away.

Standing trees, of course, also pass as part of the land; so do trees blown or cut down and still left in the woods where they were fell, but not if cut or corded up for sale; the wood has become personal property.

If there be any manure in the barnyard, or in a compost heap on the field, ready for immediate use, the buyer ordinarily takes that also as belonging to the farm; though it might not be so if the owner had previously sold it to some other party, and collected it together in a heap by itself.

Growing crops also pass, by a deed of a farm, unless they are expressly reserved. When it is not intended to convey those, it should be stated in the deed itself; a mere oral agreement to that effect would not be valid in law.

Another mode is to stipulate that possession is not to be given until some future day, in which the manure may be moved before that time.

As to buildings on the farm, though generally mentioned in the deed, it is not absolutely necessary that they should be.

A deed of land ordinarily carries all the buildings to the grantor, whether mentioned or not; and this rule includes the lumber and timber of any old buildings which have been packed away for future use on the farm.

But if there be any buildings on the farm built by a third person, with the farmer's leave, the deed would not convey these, since such buildings are personal property, and do not belong to the land owner to convey.

The real owner thereof might move them off, although the purchaser of the farm supposed he was buying and paying for all the buildings on it. His only remedy in such cases is against the party selling the premises.

As part of the buildings conveyed, of course, the window blinds are included, even if they be at the time carried off to a painter's shop to be painted. It would be so if they had been newly purchased and brought into the house, but not yet attached or fitted to it.

Lightning rods also go with the house, if the farmer is foolish enough to have any on his house.

A furnace in the cellar, brick or portable, is considered part of the house and an ordinary stove with a loose pipe running into a chimney is not.

The Mule.
The mule is a most unhealthy animal—unhealthy to have around.

He is continually possessed of yearning desires to stretch himself—specially his hind legs.

We have known this yearning to make trouble in several families.

He is also possessed of great healing power.

No man ever sees a mule kick him.
The man is generally seized with absolute vision just at that juncture.

We have seen a man get up after a mule had kicked him (very rarely tho') and swear, with both hands uplifted, that he didn't believe the animal had struck a peg—he looked so immovable and unconcerned.

A mule is a very "quick" animal.
Great quantities of this substance lie hidden beneath his toe-calks.

As a great explorer, the mule is equal to stanley.

When he goes exploring for a man
he always finds him.

The safest place to stand by a mule does not exist.

The mule is a very headstrong beast.
He is likewise exceedingly heel-strange.

Kentucky Judges.
We believe it Judge Riddle who,
a few years back, had a bottle thrown at his head while on the bench. Judge Wickliff found it necessary to shield himself behind his desk in court to escape stray pistol balls. Judge Randall had to abandon court and leave the town of Jackson very expeditiously. And then we note a higher phase of development, the trust-shut-gun was brought out, and the County Judge of Breathitt County was killed.

by means of a floating refrigerator, will probably be postponed until next fall

MANY and various are the ways of obtaining a living, and the resources of the Yankee in searching them out are almost infinite. There is said to ports a family very comfortably by the simple process of tying a cat to the clothes-line in the back yard, and in morning gathering up the boot-socks, brushes, soap, &c., hurled into the yard

The Industrial Exposition in Cincinnati, this fall, will certainly surpass any of the past.

It is estimated that 5,500,000 acres of land are used in the culture of tobacco in this country.

Last week, St. Louis was considerably warmed up again, and several fatal cases of sunstroke were reported.

The Robertson County Tribune is a lightning traveler. It arrives at our office in 24,800 minutes after publication.

Is Marion Douglas insane? If he was guilty of murder instead of horse-stealing an affirmative reply would be in order.

Those hangings at Louisville did not come off as per order of court, the Court of Appeals having concluded to investigate the cases.

The recent term of the Breathitt Circuit Court was not disturbed by any of the parties with whom it was expected to have trouble.

It is said that Senator Conkling is in favor of Senator Windom as the next Republican candidate for President of the United States.

The farmers have had extremely hot weather for harvesting, but we have heard of no persons or teams that have succumbed to the heat.

An explosion of a boiler in a Baltimore box factory, demolished the boiler-house, a three-story house adjoining and the rear wall of the factory.

The Louisville Commercial is urging the Republicans all over the State to bring out candidates for every office to be filled at the August election.

It is reported that pearls in great numbers are being found in the Miami River near Morrow, Ohio. One boy found three which he sold for ten dollars.

Last week it was discovered that a Cincinnati boy was ornamented with a caudal appendage similar to that of a dog. His father has since taken him to Chicago.

The Golos estimates that the cost to Russia of the late war with Turkey amounted to $150,000,000, and that the deaths in the Russian army numbered 200,000.

The Postmaster-General has already received over fifty applications for the position of mail agent on the Cincinnati Southern Road. About all the applications come from the southern end of the road.

Last week a headless rooster was put on exhibition in Cincinnati. It has been living in that condition since the 20th of last March, at which time an attempt was made to kill it by cutting its head off with an ax.

No doubt that hereafter horse-thieves will give Bellevue a wide berth. The way they have of making a prisoner stop when he is running from the guards down there is pretty well calculated to terrorize rascals.

The coming election is being treated with contempt. It is very seldom mentioned, not near as often as is the race in Ohio for Governor, which often furnishes food for a lively controversy between some of the local politicians.

Those hangings on that debauched to Bowling Green and back as representatives of the press, are getting a free blow from several of the editors who attended the convention; but it is a blow they will not enjoy as much as they enjoyed the one they got under false pretenses.

The Democratic State Central Committee has written to our State Senators and Congressmen, requesting them to take the stump in the State campaign. Many other eminent Democrats have also been solicited to take part in the canvass.

On the 10th inst. a terrible powder explosion occurred in California, near the old Standard Incline. The works were blown to atoms and everything near the exploding magazine was leveled to the ground. Several men were killed and many others wounded.

Some person suggests that, "For the Convention" be printed on all the tickets for use at the August election, so that those who are clearly opposed to the calling of the Constitutional Convention may be the only ones so counted, they scratching the ticket they vote to that extent.

One of the first things it was necessary for Judge McManama to do in the Buford trial was to let Judge Curtis, of New York, know that the orders of his Court had to be obeyed. Judge Curtis in reply said that that was one of the first things he learned about his Court when he came to Kentucky.

The Sheriff has been notified that the vote on the proposition to revise the Constitution must be recorded in a separate book, which book is to be returned to the Secretary of State. The proper officer will, doubtless, have the necessary books at the voting places on the day of the election.

The appearance of yellow fever in Memphis, last week, created an exodus in a few hours, and such of the terror-stricken citizens as could possibly leave the city were carried out on the north-bound trains by the hundreds while many others fled by way of the boats. Five cases were reported and the panic created was complete.

The Republican officials at Washington are quarreling over the construction of a sentence in the Court Expense Bill passed at the late session of Congress and approved by Mr. Hayes. The point now raised is, in brief, as to whether or not the United States prisoners can be fed from money appropriated for their transportation.

The other day while the laborers were engaged moving the debris of the Southern Hotel, in St. Louis, they exhumed the skeleton of a woman in the laundry. The remains were supposed to be those of one of the servants of the house, and have been lying where found since the night of the 11th of April, 1877, when the building was destroyed by fire.

The investigation ordered by the House of Representatives of the manner in which the elections were conducted in Cincinnati in the fall of 1878, is to begin in that city now in a few days. Those elections it will be remembered were held under the Deputy Marshal and Supervisor law. Hon. John G. Carlisle is chairman of the investigating committee.

The Court of Appeals has decided that witnesses in felony cases are entitled to pay for their attendance at the sessions of court. This opinion will create about a $300,000 draw on the State Treasury, something near that amount of those claims having accumulated since the State first refused to pay them under a decision rendered by Judge Jackson, of Louisville.

A very disastrous wind and rain storm swept over a portion of Michigan, last week, carrying death and destruction with it. The West and Northwest are sorely afflicted with tornadoes this summer. The elements in those sections are thoroughly demoralized, and the inhabitants live in constant dread of the cyclones which are liable to visit them at almost any hour.

Some of the physicians in Memphis say that the yellow fever cases that have developed in that city were contracted by using beds which were occupied by yellow fever patients last fall. They further say that they apprehend no danger of an epidemic, but at the same time it is known that they advise their friends to go North as soon as possible. This seems to indicate that they are afraid of something.

At 1:30 a. m., last Saturday, Ex-Governor William Allen, of Ohio, died of apoplexy at his home near Chillicothe, Ohio. Governor Allen was born in North Carolina on the 27th of December, 1806, and was, therefore, in the 73rd year of his age. It was in 1822 that he took up his abode in Ohio, and at the age of 20 he commenced the study of law in Cincinnati. It was not long before he commenced labor in the political field in behalf of the Democratic cause, of which he was a strenuous advocate. During his political career he was honored with the highest offices within the gift of the people of his State. Governor Allen had endeared himself to the people, and his death spreads a pall of gloom over the entire State.

The trial of Thomas Buford for the murder of Judge Elliott is well advanced at Owenton this week. The Jury was completed last Friday, and before the court adjourned on Saturday, all the direct testimony for the Commonwealth was in. The defense is relying on the insanity plea, and, no doubt, before it concludes its testimony it will prove that every member of the Buford family is a lunatic.

In 1877, "Many Voters of the Pleasureville Precinct," of Henry County, knew of no better man than Thomas Buford to represent Henry in the Legislature, and accordingly called upon him to become a candidate for that office, and now, one of the signers of that call comes forward as a witness for the defense and swears that at that time he considered him as competent for the Legislature as many who went there.

SOMETHING should be done to relieve the counties of the enormous expense incurred from keeping persons who are lodged in jail in default of payment of fines assessed against them. Very few of those who pay fines by lying in jail consider the imprisonment any punishment; but were they put to work and kept at it the entire time of their sentence, the number of jail-birds would be greatly diminished, and that too in a very short time.

The question now arises, in which State should Marion Douglas be prosecuted, Indiana or Kentucky, he having violated the law of both States? Having stolen property in one's possession is a Penitentiary offense, and as Kentucky has the guilty person in her charge, she will not surrender him until he has suffered the penalty of the law violated; and should it turn out that he got Crigger's horse he will have to answer the charge of horse-stealing also, and after he has satisfied this State, Indiana may take control of him again.

We have heard it said, recently, that the School Commissioner will determine whether the Teachers' Institute for 1880 will be held in Burlington, Florence or Union, by taking a vote on the question the second day of the Institute which convenes on the 12th of next month. If that question comes up, the proper way to dispose of it has been determined upon by the Commissioner. But we see no cause for taking the Institute from where it has been held ever since its organization. All the advantages are in favor of Burlington, the greatest being the house in which the sessions are held, there not being another building in the county as well arranged for the accommodation of the teachers. Another cause why it should not be moved is, a majority of the resident teachers are nearer Burlington than they are to either of the other towns. The teachers get as good entertainment here as elsewhere, therefore, when we consider these facts it is plain that while the distance traveled by some of the teachers going to and from the Institute would be decreased were it held at Union or Florence, that traveled by a larger number would be increased; besides, when the teachers met they would find their room far inferior to the one occupied in the past. No transient teachers should have a vote on the proposition; those who attend the Institute regularly it appears would be the proper ones to settle the question.

LINES

In memory of our darling boy, who died July 30, 1878.
Written by his mother,
Mrs. Mary A. Black.

Dear Tom Bennis is dead, yet we must not Lament his death, for he was not Nor mourn his death from a happier clime,
He but lingered 'below' until He who had sent him
Recalled him to Eden in morning's sweet prime.
Could the beauty and freshness of youth
have retained him,
We would not have been called 'over his slumbers' to weep.
The terrors of death had not power to alarm
him,
He feared not its darkness nor felt not its sleep.

Ere the sorrows of earth or its passions had moved him,
Or darkened the light of his innocent eye,
He bade a farewell unto those who so loved
him,
Said, Mamma, if I don't soon get better I believe I will die, oh, no I won't die.
In his beauty he sleeps, oh, how I mourn for our darling,
But our tears they shall moisten the flowers
on his grave;
He was ever with me or near me, never needed no calling,
The pride of my life though the grass o'er him waves.

Then calm be the spot where his form now
reposes,
May the friends that so loved him come and visit his grave,
And feel, though the cold and his ashes enclose,
He lives in the presence of Him who can save.

AN INDIAN HORSETHIEF.

What Marion Douglas Brought With Him to Boone, and What He Found When He Got Here—His Trial—Delayed for His Recovery.

The town of Bellevue and the surrounding neighborhood labored under considerable excitement, the result of the capture and wounding of a notorious horse-thief of Southern Indiana. The facts, so far as we have collected them, are as follows: On the night of the 2d inst. J. W. Criger, who lives near Hebron, had a horse taken from his stable. Mr. Criger lost no time in sending notice to all parts of the country, and the horse was described as being the stolen animal with such exactness that some of the citizens remembered they had seen it. On the morning of the 4th, a man riding a horse, was seen near the river at the ferry just below town, and no more was heard of him.

Last Thursday afternoon, a message came to Bellevue that a horse-thief from Indiana had come across the river at that point. Thursday morning a stranger, riding one horse and leading another, had stopped in the town and the horse thief shot at him. Mr. Albert Corbin and Thos. Cicero, being satisfied that he was the party wanted, the river, started in pursuit, and overhauled the man and the horse about three miles from Burlington on the Bellevue pike. They returned to Bellevue with their prisoner, who was put under guard, Thos. Baker, Thos. Kiddell, and John Phillips, Dore Atkins and John Coons composing the guard. During the night the thief, who had in the meantime been recognized by some of the Bellevue people as Marion Douglas, attempted to escape. To let him escape by jumping from a window in a room which they occupied over Sutton's store, but the guard would not betray their trust.

Friday morning the prisoner was taken to Mrs. Allen's for breakfast. Having completed his meal, he rose from the table and walked up to Kiddell, who was sitting at the head of the table, and then he went into the room and then made a dash for freedom, followed by the three guards, who ordered him to halt, but not being obeyed commenced shooting at him. Being six or seven feet in front of him, he was hit in the left shoulder blade, the ball passing through the body and lodging under the skin of the right breast. The fugitive fell and was then carried to Mr. William Grant's, and Dr. L. H. Platt summoned to provide such medical aid as was required. The wounded man suffered intense pain, and Friday evening a doctor removed the ball from his lodging-place. Friday morning County Attorney R. C. Green and John W. Criger were sent for, but the condition of Douglas was such that his trial was continued till last Monday, when County Attorney Green returned to Bellevue to take such steps as the condition of Douglas would admit of. Upon the opening of court, the trial was continued till Tuesday on the statement of Dr. Platt, who considered that the excitement produced by a trial would endanger the defendant's life. J. S. Jolly, of Rising Sun, appeared for the defense.

A Mr. Vawter, from Ripley County, Ind., had arrived since the adjournment of court on Saturday with a witness, by whom he proved that one of the horses in the possession of Douglas when captured was his, and which was delivered to him when the case was called. Another Indiana man, who recently lost a horse came to see Douglas Monday, and offered him $25 to tell him where he could find his horse. Douglas replied that he could not do that under any kind of circumstances.

Tuesday when the court met, Dr. I. R. McKenney, Dr. J. F. Smith, Dr. L. H. Platt, and Dr. W. J. Rice were present and examined Douglas, and agreed that his condition is such that by going into a trial his life would be put in jeopardy, whereupon, the trial was again continued. The trial will be resumed from time to time till Douglas is able to be tried.

Constable Rogers has a strong guard about ready for an emergency. Some of the citizens of Bellevue think a lot of the pike of Douglas have been in the neighborhood for the last few days, and they are not resting easy, for fear of some mischief being done by them.

Mr. Criger has not heard of his horse yet. Douglas' record as a professional horse-thief has been pretty well ventilated since his capture, and it is believed that his capture is true, he is one of the most notorious characters of that class that infests the State of Indiana. Notwithstanding his condition, the few of the citizens of Bellevue have a sympathy for him, and are anxious that he should receive his deserts.

Requires M. B. Green and John S. Huey held a court Friday to investigate the shooting and the capture of Douglas.

Douglas is a notorious character, having served two terms in the Indiana Penitentiary at Jeffersonville for horse-stealing, the last term of which expired in April, 1879.

The Picnic at Viola Park.

Notwithstanding the heat was decidedly oppressive, last Saturday, quite a goodly number of persons from Boone and neighborhood at Viola Park, some to witness and some to participate in the amusement of tripping the light fantastic. Unfortunately, the day was not so favorable as was expected, for a heavy shower of rain dispersed the assembly in rather abrupt and unceremonious manner. The order during the entire day could not have been objectionable to the most fastidious, not a single instance occurring to mar the pleasure of any one.

The dinner at Viola Park was suspicious, and with as good music and order as well preserved as on last Saturday, it is destined to become a favorite resort for the "volunteers of Terrell" for all who were present Saturday pronounced the grounds well prepared for the amusement.

Last fall, Mr. John Stephens, who lives in the Francisville neighborhood, sowed 12 bushels of wheat on an acre of land, and last week he harvested 815 bushels therefrom, being an average of 68 bushels per acre. Mr. S. had 80 acres of wheat which yielded 1,162 bushels, being an average of a fraction over 1 1/2 bushels per acre.

One day last week, the horse attached to a spring wagon in which John Furlong and two or three other young men were riding became frightened and ran off, starting near Wm. Coon's horse was injured when jumping out of the wagon. The wagon was wrecked.

Facts and Fancies.

A FARM-LIFE is a luxury.

We should like a bedstead made of the north pole.

It is said ice-water is unhealthy, but it has not killed anybody around here yet.

There are the kind of nights that a person sleeps all over the house, and occasionally wishes for an iceberg to embrace.

When the mosquitoes commence their summer's business in earnest, there will be waiting and gnashing of teeth among those boys who shaved.

A MAN who will ride a horse to town in the morning, and leave it tied to a rack all day long without water or food, such weather as this, will never get to heaven.

It will be just as well for our people, during this hot weather, to be careful how they dispose of their slops and other malarial breeders. A little care may save sickness.

N. S. Sunday the Sabbath-school votes on the proposition to adopt the "International Sunday-school Lessons." How are you doing to vote?

We hear it said that Rev. Buffington contemplates changing his appointment to the city of New York.

Notice the editorial in your last issue, we are impelled to say something concerning it. There is no valid reason why our Commonwealth should not immediately pay every just debt against itself. Why are so many hundreds of thousands of dollars of our country's hard-earned money hoarded away when there are claims against it? The laborer is worthy his hire, and when that labor has been faithfully and conscientiously performed, the laborer should be paid promptly, and not put off because there is no money in the Treasury. When the taxes levied do not pay the expenses of the State government for the current year, how soon the fact is made known to the tax-payers. Yet all this time the hoarded securities are the Treasury gradually growing larger by the accumulation of interest. Probably there is a law authorizing such an accumulation. If there is, the sooner it is repealed the better. Let these securities be sold, and the proceeds applied to clearing off all indebtedness and paying all the current expenses, thus indirectly dividing it among the people to whom it belongs, causing the people to feel that they are in the money. We would ask, what right has any municipality to hold investments? We do not believe it to be good public policy. Some day we may have a State Legislature, who may deem it wise and expedient to improve our own Gunpowder Creek for navigation for steamboats by locks, dams or otherwise. This is the money that we are hoarding. The securities must go for the purpose. It has been demonstrated that all public works require a great amount of milk for someone. We do not know but what this is a serious matter for the consideration and investigation of our next Representatives. At least he could ascertain the facts, and if they justify the assertion that our Commonwealth has investments, and they are bound up by law enacted by some Legislature, to repeal that law, apply the proceeds to the administration of our government. To reduce taxation, simplify an economy in government are not only good qualities of political economy, but would meet the wishes of all tax-payers and add much to the prosperity of a country.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Petersburg.

The boys at the mill were very busy one day last week, moving whiskey from the third story in the warehouse. The building was giving away from under the immense weight. Nice, warm weather for the work. The McLeary boys "ave" returned from the South to spend the summer, and escape the yellow fever.

There are quite a number of young ladies from a distance visiting our town at present.

Hebron.

The mercury stood at about 90° all day on the 12th.

Uncle Cave Clure has returned from his trip to Cincinnati right side up with care.

Received of J. Graves one small car load of old wheat (a little off) at 90c per bushel, by Davis Bros.

Friday, the 11th, at 4:30 p. m., at Davis Bros' store in Hebron the mercury ran up to 100° in the shade.

We have one professional man in our midst who is making (book and cash) about $700 per month good money.

Died near Hebron, on the 11th inst. at about 10 o'clock p. m., the little one-year-old daughter of Jacob Henthorn.

Theo. Criger sent to the Cincinnati market, the first of last week, his first load of tomatoes, which were sold at $1 per bush.

Guinea & Riley, stock jobbers of Francisville, passed here Saturday morning with about 400 very fine lambs for the Cincinnati market.

On Wednesday, the 9th, Ollie Quick, the eight-year-old daughter of Wesley Quick, in trying to walk the fence fell and broke her leg just above the ankle.

We have a hotel in Hebron on the European plan, for the accommodation of tramps. The boarders don't receive anything more than what they call for, and hardly that.

A piece of bread-crust 3 1/2 inches, stuck in a plate of butter, makes a very nice and convenient thing for the diet to alight upon; and, besides, they are not apt to get tangled in the butter.

Potato raisers seem to be very curious to know the best cure for potato bugs. It depends altogether on what's the matter with 'em. Paris green on toast is good when they have the appetite and are hungry, but is good for depression of spirits. So says an exchange.

Died, of heart disease, on Wednesday the 9th, at 12 o'clock p. m., at the residence of her son-in-law, B. Quick, Mrs. Mary, wife of James Varner, aged 75 years. Her remains will, for the present, be placed in the vault at Hebron, until such time as friends from a distance can arrive, after which the remains will be deposited in their final resting-place in the Florence cemetery.

A band of robbers, consisting between Blountville and Hebron (in spots) passed here early this morning (11th), and, according to our judgment, is the best bunch for the number (ten or twelve) ever gathered up in the county. We were credibly informed that they belonged to the firm of Guinea & Williams, stock jobbers. We understand that the above mentioned lot of lambs, with about 30,000 more belonging to the same firm, are to be frozen up on foot (patent process) and shipped to the Feejee Islands, for the purpose of starting a sheep ranch by the above named firm.

The Red-Eyed Law—A Short Story with a Long Moral.

(Quadruple Ind.) Republished.

Cyrus W. Bell and Joseph Miller live in Pooey Township upon adjoining farms.

Mr. Miller has a lot of small pigs.

Mr. Bell has a cornfield.

Mr. Bell gets the cornfield.

Mr. Bell being away from home, his hired man set about driving the pigs out.

The day was hot and the pigs pig-headed. They would not be driven out.

Hence the hired man was obliged to catch them and hoist them over the fence.

One of the pigs was killed.

Mr. Miller had the man prosecuted for cruelty to animals. He was fined $1 and appealed to the Circuit Court.

Mr. Miller also brought suit against Mr. Bell and his man for the value of his pig, and for damages to the cornfield.

Mr. Bell then sued Mr. Miller for the damages done to his corn by the pigs. The case was tried in Carthage.

Mr. Miller was acquitted in the sum of $12 and a half. The costs will amount to $35 or $40. Plus attorney fees.

The pig weighed 25 pounds.

MORAL—The moral is to be sought after diligently.

And, when found, cherished.

UPWARD.

THERE has been a strong advance in Wools and Cottons, and all articles manufactured from these staples have been, of late, rapidly advancing.

We believe firmly that at last prices have touched bottom, and that from now on the tendency will be upward; not only in our line of business, but that farm products, and, in fact, almost everything, will be higher. We believe the near future has in store brighter and better times for all.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Kentucky.

Casey, Timberlake & Co. vs. W. R. Notice of Johnson and Jacob H. Har. sale

is vs. Same.—Consolidated cases. In equity.

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April Term thereof, 1879, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on MONDAY, the 4th day of August, 1879, at 1 o'clock P. M., of the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment, to wit:

BURLINGTON, KY., JULY 17.

CHILD BUILDER.

A child went forth to play.
At low tide on the sand.
"Ah!" said he, "I'll be a builder be!"
So he wrought him a castle grand.

The toll of the evening bell
Summoned him home to sleep;
Still in dreams he knelt and caressed
The wet sand and the deep.

At morn he went again,
His building to survey;
But while he slept the tide had swept
His childish work away.

So pass Wealth, Pleasure, Fame;
The while build not so low;
On Faith's high land those mansions stand
That Death's sea can't overflow.

Facts for Farmers.

Loss of appetite, thirst, diarrhoea, general weakness and emaciation of the comb are the symptoms of the chicken cholera.

For throat distemper, grate fine a small, green, wild turnip; or if dry, give a heaping spoonful mixed with bran or oats. It is good for a cough also.

A few drops of ammonia added to a gallon of water, and applied once a week to all pots of flowers will do much good and keep the pots and earth from souring.

Soak oats in tepid water before feeding them to horses. Old horses with bad teeth can then masticate the grain sufficiently, and greedy young animals will not swallow them whole.

The following rule in plowing is recommended: Never turn up over one or two inches of unfertile subsoil in one season; and, when so turned up, the land should receive a dressing of manure.

A soft, firm, velvet skin is nearly always found on a good cow, and a thick hard hide on a poor one. A soft, firm skin denotes rich milk, while a soft velvety skin denotes quantities of rich milk.

Farmers do not fail so much from the want of knowledge as they do from the want of action. If their knowledge is not applied to labor promptly by energy and perseverance, it will accomplish nothing.

A dairyman says, never keep a poor cow the second year. No man can afford to keep a cow that will not make from two hundred to two hundred and twenty pounds of butter or its equivalent every year.

If farmers were as careful to save their oats, hay, fodder, etc., in the best possible condition as they are to have their own food properly prepared, the cattle's food would be made more nutritious and more palatable.

A porridge made of buckwheat flour, with a little cornmeal added, makes a good substitute for milk for young calves. It must be fed quite warm. After the calves are three weeks old, feed a gill of oats twice a day. These should be boiled before feeding.

Angle-worms at the roots of plants can be made come to the surface by inserting a fine hair-pin or darning-needle into the mold, and then pouring lime water on the soil. This will be found to be good for the health of the plants also, and will keep the foliage fresh and green. Apply once a week.

Grapes, currants, quinces, etc., may be propagated and rooted by laying down a branch, covering it with soil, and pinning it to its place in the moist earth with a crocheted stick; cutting the branches off where roots are desired facilitates rooting. Several vines may be started from one branch in this way.

Experience has demonstrated that the principal portion of the manure should be applied where it will be stirred and mixed with the soil every time the crop is cultivated; this produces a chemical action which lightens the soil, and also prepares a material which is soluble, and which the first rain will change to just the right material for the growing plants.

Carrots form a palatable and nutritious food for almost every species of stock. They may be given unboiled, mixed with cut hay or straw. There are few things that will better support the horse, while coils are brought into excellent condition when fed with them. To the cow they afford wholesome food coloring and flavoring the butter agreeably. The hog eats carrots ravenously and thrives upon them.

A strawberry, to give the best satisfaction, should be left on the vines until fully ripe, and picked up an hour or two before eaten, and always picked so as to leave the hulls on the vines, as a strawberry of the tender-fleshed varieties, when fully ripe, can not be hulled after being taken from the vines without injuring the berries; but with a little practice, the berry when on the vine can be freed from the hull without the least injury.

A correspondent of the Country Gentleman says: Those wishing to grow potatoes especially for home consumption should not so manure, but plow a sod in the fall or early spring. The tubers will not be large, but they will have a fine flavor—that peculiar, indescribable flavor, or rather aroma, only to be had in a potato so grown. Any person used to them can detect the difference between those grown with and without manure.

Pigeons with green peas: Roast a pigeon for say ten minutes, and then take them off the spit and split them.

lay them in a saucepan with three ounces of butter. As soon as the butter is melted, pour in a pint of young peas, a little salt, a pinch of white pepper, and a couple of tablespoonsful of any kind of stock. Shake the pan while cooking, and stew for twenty minutes. Serve pigeons in the middle, surrounded with peas and sauce.

Trees should be placed not only by dwelling-houses and along roads, but they should be in every pasture and by watering places and near every barn, wherever cattle, horses or sheep are to be provided for. All these animals suffer from our burning sun; and to say nothing of their comfort and enjoyment, the cost of the shade trees will be many times paid back in the saving of milk, fat, fleece and strength which will result by protecting domestic animals from the heat of the sun.

All evergreens do better if partially protected from the heat of the sun when young. Brush may be set around the seed bed, or a grating of laths may be placed over them so as to partly shield them from the sun. The natural seed bed for such trees is in the forest, where they are protected from both excessive heat and cold wind. After growing in the seed bed two or three years, they should be set further apart, but they should be at least a foot high before setting in the permanent hedge.

The nervous condition has much to do with the secretions of all animals. The cow, when in an excited state, will not give as much milk, nor that of the same composition, as when in a state of perfect contentment and rest. If the excitement is long continued, the shrinkage in amount will be permanent. In just what manner the structure of the milk is affected is not easily determined, but the effect is doubtless much like that produced by a sickly, feverish state. No naturally nervous cow should be tolerated in a herd, and all milkers who have not learned to control their excitable propensities should be dismissed from the yard.

The Foreign Grain Demand.

[Chicagoist Enquirer.]
NEW YORK, July 9.—Under advice from across the water that the grain crop in some of the chief countries in Europe promises to be very poor, there has been within the past few days unusual activity in cereals here. There has been something of an advance in prices, and the knowing ones of the exchanges prophesy that it will extend yet further, and that our grains will be much sought this year by foreign buyers. The market has responded to this indication of approaching activity. It is thought that France will be compelled to import 80,000,000 bushels. Continuous rain has so damaged the wheat crop of Great Britain that it is estimated that she will import 120,000,000 bushels. In Spain, Italy and Hungary the crops are also represented to be in bad condition, in Northern Italy especially the ruin being almost complete. The usually correct statistician of the New York Produce Exchange estimates that the wheat crop of 1879 will be not far from 385,000,000 bushels, and that, in addition to the importations by Great Britain and France, as given above, Germany will import 10,000,000 bushels, Spain and Portugal 5,000,000, and Italy 25,000,000. Good shipments may be expected from Australia, British India, Egypt, Roumania and the Turkish Provinces. Save in Minnesota, the crop in the United States is most promising, and likely to be the best for many years. Especially is winter wheat in excellent condition and great abundance, and, barring heavy drought or continual rains, it will turn out a most satisfactory crop. Favorable weather would indeed make the Minnesota crop very abundant, say importers here. Corn and oats also responded to the fluctuations in the price of wheat. While the foreign demand will make a market for American wheat, the shippers say that they do not look for a heavy increase in prices, as the bountiful crop here will offset the demand and keep rates uniform. The transportation companies will do a big business, and the importers will handle a vast amount of grain at a reasonable and healthy profit, but the consumers of this country will not be compelled to pay much more for breadstuffs than as though the demand from Europe were not so great.

The market was exceedingly active to-day, the advance being about 2 cents. The rumor that Jas. Keene had secretly visited Chicago and had made a corner there is denied by his friends here. There was not, however, so much excitement in the exchange as on Tuesday or Monday, when the advance was more marked.

Electric Storms on Pike's Peak.
Remarkable electric storms are said to occur on the summit of Pike's Peak. Little thunder accompanies them, but the whole mountain seems to be on fire and the top one sheet of flame. Electricity comes out of every rock and darts here and there with indescribable radiance. An observer says that it played around him continuously, shot down his back, glanced out of his feet, and so completely filled him that he became charged like a Leyden jar. He could not retain his foothold; he bounded and rebounded from the rocks after the manner of an Indian rubber ball; he felt as though powerful battery were throbbing through his frame; and, fearing consequences, he hurried into the signal station.

Mrs. Joblink Takes her New Bonnet to the Theater.
[Virginia City (New) Chronicle.]
"How does it look?" demanded Mrs.
Joblink last evening, as she took a last glance over her shoulder at the mirror before leaving for the theater.
"It" meant the new bonnet, and Mr.
Joblink, concealing his real feelings, replied, like a dutiful husband, "Splendid, my dear."

The wind blew, and the soul of Mrs.
Joblink took flight, and she stopped on the street, while Mr. Joblink carefully tied his handkerchief over the bonnet for the protection of the Mirabeau feather, the Afghanistan bangle and the Zulu bow. Before reaching the theater, a place in deep shadow gave an opportunity to remove the handkerchief, and with one last careful look to ascertain "fit set straight," and also an earnest touching of her Montague curls, Mrs. Joblink sailed into the opera-house with head erect and great modesty, with preoccupied stare spread under the circumstances.

If the new bonnet had been a tray of china dishes, Mrs. Joblink could not have been more conscious of it, nor held her head more steadily. Despite that fixed stare of preoccupation, Mrs.
Joblink was deliciously aware of the triumphant fact that every female eye and Jergnette in the house was fixed critically, contemptuously, angrily, ad-miringly or even enviously upon that twenty dollars worth of trash on her summit.

When sufficient time had been given for the female population to take it all in, the lady recovered from her preoccupation, and suddenly descended into a lighthearted mood, bent the bonnet toward Mr. Joblink and engaged that secretly annoyed gentleman in gay and fashionable conversation, using her eyes for side observation to discover the relaxing temper into which the bonnet had put the two hundred other ladies present.

Picking out those who showed fight,
Mrs. J. leveled her glasses, and in the most prolonged and insulting manner in the world surveyed the disgraceful head-dresses of the enemy. In the meantime the play had begun, and a nervous little man in the seat behind began to swear under his breath, for, owing to the sudden descending glare of the bonnet toward Mr. J., the view of the stage was frequently cut off at the most exciting moments of the drama.
The nervous little man said dammit in a peevish tone a little too loud on one of these occasions, and the lady turned and stared at him, and Mr. Joblink turned and scowled threateningly at him.

At the close of the play, Mrs. Job-link exchanged glances of lofty scorn with several hostile ladies in the vicinity, and ascertained by sense of touch that her own was not one of the "set straight," she stalked out magnificently on Joblink's arm. That gentleman was much impressed by the play, and thought silently over it half the way home. Mrs. Joblink was also impressed with a thought. Presently Mr.
Joblink said, in a tone of warm approval:

"It held the attention of the audience throughout, didn't it?"
"Yes, indeed," smiled the lady;
"there wasn't one of them could keep their eyes off it for five minutes."
"It was magnificent," cried Mr. Job-link.
"Gracious, I didn't know you admired it so much, Joblink. You see, though; if that hateful Mrs. Hink-berry doesn't go and get one just like
it!"

"Like what?" asked the rollicking Job-
link.
"Why, like mine," replied the lady.
"Like your what?"
"Like my bonnet, of course, you stupid thing!"
The strong man pulled out his handkerchief and blew his nose.

The Boone County Standard Line.
To the Editor of the Recorder:
I have been called upon to give an explanation of the "Boone County Standard Line" as the column of the BOONE COUNTY RECORDER; I therefore write the following:

Many of the readers of the Recorder know that the needle of the magnetic compass has a variation; they also know that said variation has caused many disputes and much difficulty between the farmers of Boone County concerning the lines between their farms. Now, since there is a variation, and since it causes difficulty, it is the duty of the Surveyor to overcome that difficulty, if he can provide a way to do so, therefore I say to you that, because the people of Boone have been so kind as to give me this office for this term,
I will do all that is in my power to improve and build up said office.

The Boone County Standard Line is composed of two stones planted in the ground at a distance of 52 poles from each other, thus marking out a north and south line. They also have the date 1879 inscribed upon each, showing that it is a north and south line according to the way the magnetic needle pointed at said date. Should a Surveyor go to the Boone County Standard Line twenty years from now and set his compass at the south stone, he would find that the needle had varied 15 feet to the left, or west, of the north stone. Now, it is evident that if a surveyor goes to the Boone County Standard Line to set his compass, he will soon see how much the compass has varied. He can then go to any line that has been run by said Standard and state so, and he will know exactly what the variation is, because he took it at the Standard.

But the best way to use the Boone County Standard Line is this: Let the Surveyor set his compass so that he can see the north stone through the sights when looking from the south stone; then, if the compass has to be turned, he can turn it until the north on the compass card, or face of the compass is directly under the needle; then fix it tight and he will have his compass fixed by the Standard. Then it is evident that if the sights point with the Standard, the card is changed the same amount that the needle varied; that is, the needle reads the same and the sights point the same that they did when the Standard was established.

Now, since we have shown the use of the Boone County Standard Line, we will also show the disadvantages of surveying without it:
Suppose, for instance, that a Surveyor ran a line in the year 1819, and took its bearing and distance and found them to be N. 30. 320 poles; in 1839 it was N. 29. 320 poles; in 1859 it was N. 28. 320 poles; in 1879 it is N. 27. 320 poles. Suppose again that the bearing of 1819 was to be recorded in a new deed, the surveyor, in running the 320 poles, the surveyor would run 276 feet to the left of the true corner. But if the bearing of 1839 was to be recorded in a new deed, then he would miss the same corner 184 feet.
Also the bearing of 1859, he would miss the corner 92 feet. From the above data we see that a line one mile long varies 92 feet in 20 years; that is, 56 inches every year. Now, from the above data, it is evident that an old deed should not be copied to make a new deed of a later date, neither ought the people of Boone County to tolerate such.

Should the needle continue to vary at the same rate that it does at present, it would take 1,800 years for the north end of the needle to point west;
but, instead of continuing its variation in the same course, it will change to go in the opposite course. The interval of time between the two changes is called a vibration, which will probably last 800 years. Since the variation is a vibration, it is like the vibration of a pendulum to a clock. That is, when the pendulum starts on one side, it moves slowly, but it increases its motion to its swiftest at the bottom; then it decreases its motion until it stops on the opposite side, where the vibration is completed. Thus we see that the variation will not continue to be at the same rate as it now is.

The Standard Line can, then, be of no benefit to a Surveyor to run an old line by, but it will be of great benefit to the Surveyors in time to come; that is, to run all lines by that have been run by said Standard. Thus, we say of a line that it is N. 27. 320 poles by the Boone County Standard Line, it would at once establish a particular course for the standard is established.

This is all that I wish to say about the Boone County Standard Line of 1879 as proposed. But I hope that you will hear from me again this fall upon the subject of what is necessary for the people of Boone to do that they may establish a perfect system of that which pertains to this office.

BREATHERS played a good joke on the Ohio newspapers which were quietly awaiting an outbreak there during the late term of the Circuit Court. They are finding out that that county can not be relied on for bloody items every time a court of justice is convened there.

LATONIA SPRINGS, Kenton County, was the scene of a murder, about 2 a. m. Monday. The parties to the affair fell out at the card-table, and one Louis Hagel, aged about 19 years, killed Jim Bedman, aged about twenty-nine, by slashing him to pieces with a knife. The murdered man was a separate character, and it is claimed that the killing was done in self-defense.

JUDGE McMANAMA is entitled to great credit for the manner in which he has conducted the special term of the Owen Criminal Court for the trial of Thomas Buford. THE Supreme Court in New York has granted a writ of error and a stay of proceedings in the case of Chastine Cox, the negro who murdered Mrs. Hull in New York City, and who was to be hung on the 29th prox. On the fourth of this month, Mrs. Dorsey, who resided in Mississippi, died, and in her will bequeathed to Jeff. Davis $250,000, all her estate, to the entire exclusion of her natural heirs. One of the widow's brothers is going to contest the will on the ground of undue influence. Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars is a very decent present, except when there is so much doubt about holding it.

In a few days the voters will be called upon to vote for or against the proposition to revise the Constitution of the State. Many express a very great indifference as to how their votes are counted, simply because, as they allege, they are not posted in the matter; but still they are making no effort to become informed. It is a question of no little importance, and those who vote in the affirmative will never regret it.

THE 22d annual Fair of the North Kentucky Agricultural Society is not far in the future, it commencing on the 26th of next month. The Board of Directors is working hard to make the coming exhibition excel any ever before given on its grounds, and it is confident of success. If the farmers of the county will co-operate with those working the Fair up, and put on exhibition the best grades of their stock and farm produce, the exhibition is bound to be a success. The people of this county have as fine farm produce as is raised in this latitude, and it is strange that they have not taken more pride in putting it on exhibition than they have in the past. The livestock show could be greatly improved were the stock raisers sufficiently interested to take their stock to the Fair. The success of the Fair depends entirely upon the liberal patronage of the agriculturists, not only in attending themselves, but in putting the fruits of their labor on exhibition.

The Directors are negotiating for Currier's band, of Cincinnati, to furnish music for the week, and if they secure it, the music will be the biggest card of the Fair.

In Memoriam.

Remarks of Wm. Watts in the Boone County Grange upon the death of Jas. Kelly: Worthy Master, Sisters and Brothers: I read this morning, the Boone County Record, the death of brother Jas. Kelly, a worthy member of this County Grange, and I arise to pay a tribute of respect to our departed brother. He died at his home in this county on the 14th inst. in the 66th year of his age, of that dreadful disease and fell destroyer, consumption, leaving a wife and a large family of children to mourn their loss. But recently he whom we now mourn was among us, taking part in our sessions. But his noble heart has ceased to beat, and he sleeps the sleep that no more awakes. We stand and consider his lonely grave and the grand qualities of his life. A good man has gone to rest, and the world is poorer for his loss, though richer and better because he once lived. To these infirmities, which he was known among us, no words of mine could add anything to the income which envelop his memory, or increase the respect which his high character has won for him from all who came in contact with him. Without pretension, he was industrious, earnest and affable; without ostentation, he was firm; without selfishness, he was scrupulously honest and conscientious in all things; faithful to his friends, yet just to his opponents; true to his convictions, yet ever ready to receive suggestions and advice; scornful of deceit, he diligently sought for truth; fearless in action and in the expression of his own opinion, yet respectful to those with whom he differed; public-spirited as a citizen, charitable to the needy, sympathetic with the suffering, a gentle, loving husband and a kind and indulgent father, genial as an associate, he was a man to be honored and loved as he was in life, and sincerely mourned as he is in death. He was my friend in all the friendly relations and intimacies of life; he was a friend who could bear a friend's infirmities. Brother Kelly was a Christian gentleman, and best loved by those who knew him best. His loss will be felt by our body of Grangers, for he was a good one; also by all classes of the community in which he lived, from the highest to the most humble. I mourn the loss of a noble friend. His loss will deeply be felt in the home circle, and his brother sorrow to make home what it should be, the most endearing spot upon earth. A widowed wife and children weep in a home made desolate by the death of their father; but time, with healing in its wings, will soothe their grief, and their reliance must be on him who doeth all things well. Worthy Master, brothers and sisters, our brother is gone; his many form and honest face we shall see in this hall no more; his spirit has had a conflict with the cloud of death, and passed through our brother's hands, and is being beyond the Jordan, and is being with holy spirits in the celestial world, where all just men and women are made perfect through the resurrection of our Saviour. I pity the poor infidel who doubts the resurrection, and contend that after death the beautiful forms of men and women go into nothingness. The stately houses say no; the whole production of the earth says no; the Bible says no! Mary, when she saw the stone rolled away from the mouth of the sepulcher where Jesus was laid, said to Martha, He is risen. So I believe our deceased brother, in the language of Mary, is risen, so, brother, we bid you farewell. Farewell! Join with your bereaved family in dropping a tear to thy worthy name.

The following resolutions were thereupon adopted: Resolved, That the Grange has received with profound sympathy the sad announcement of the death of James Kelly, a member of this Grange. Resolved, That the sympathies of the members of this Grange be tendered to his family in their bereavement. Resolved, That our action be published in the Boone County Record and Cincinnati Grange Bulletin, and put on our minutes, and a copy sent to the family of the deceased. Resolved, That we wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Tuesday about 9 p. m., the report reached town that Geo. John A. Kenney's barn was on fire. In about two minutes every house in town was mounted, and some fifteen or twenty persons were on the road to the supposed fire. As far as the houses could run, while another portion started on foot. A great crowd congregated in the street, and watched for the smoke and flames, and some of them had almost discovered the smoke ascending from the burning barn, when a crowd of horsemen appeared on their return, having gone far enough to discover that a brush pile instead of the barn was being destroyed by the fire.

The Knife.

Last Sunday evening, Petersburg was the scene of quite a "hot" difficulty, in which John Feeley and George W. Theige were the principals. The parties were drinking, and fell out about the colored horsekeeper who was stationed at the distillery in Petersburg. In the altercation, Theige stabbed Feeley in the abdomen and cut him severely on the right arm. The wound in the abdomen is small, but reaches the cavity, and at this time Feeley's recovery is doubtful. After the cutting, Theige and Andy Leonard collided, when Leonard struck Theige two or three times on the head with a board, making two ugly gashes. Theige was arrested and waived his examination, when his bond was fixed at $200, which he failed to give, and Tuesday morning Constable Green lodged him in jail at this place.

K. were printing bills for a picnic when he stepped in and read the phrase "Floor Managers," which he decried as follows: "Fellows who manage to get all the dances, to the exclusion of those who pay the fiddler. They generally wear large blue badges, ornamental with a diamond on the breast, and keep out of the way when a visitor desires an introduction. We silenced him by telling him some of them might perforate him with the point of their boot, were they to hear his definition."

Last Friday evening about dark, J. Deha Pickett, Democratic candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction, arrived here with the intention of making a public speech, but, owing to the fact that he was not looked for by those who had invited him to speak, he abandoned. He remained in town over night. Those who met him were favorably impressed with his appearance and happy manner of entertaining.

EDWARD TARKS, of Shelby County, Indiana, stayed in town last night. He was in search of a horse which was taken from his stable on the 20th ult., and which he tracked as far as Petersburg, where the thief with the horse stayed over night. There he lost the track, but he thinks the horse is in this county, and accordingly advertises for him.

CIRCUMSTANCES indicate that a portion of Douglas' band of horthelth is located in this county, but there is no probability of him ever revealing any of their names. We understand that he was offered a hundred dollars the other day if he would "sneak" on the band, but he refused, saying: "If I were to tell, it would cause a good many families trouble who are now living quiet."

Two sheep and 10 chickens were sacrificed, to say nothing about the other fixings, wine, lager beer, etc. Some of the young men were so excited that they rotten-egged the residence of Mr. McDonald, a quiet, inoffensive citizen of the town. He was sitting at the window reading, when the eggs struck him on the forehead, causing him to be stuck up. He didn't know his friends. He offered $500 reward for the perpetrator of the offense.

Your readers will, no doubt, remember the item published in the Record two weeks ago, in regard to a fine, large radish presented to the editor by Mr. Lewis Dill, who said he raised it in his own garden, and challenged the world to beat it. Well, that identical radish was raised by Mr. Bob Ingram, and by him presented to Mr. Felix Koss, the celebrated wool merchant of this city. Felix says that Lewis told him that from him, and passed it off on the editor as one of his own production. Nothing but our love for the truth could induce us to expose him in this matter, and we hope that it will be the means of his reformation, for the love of the radish dealer, like that of the transgressor, is hard.

WILLIAMSTOWN LETTER.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Ky., July 17, 1879.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The political condition is still on the boil, and next week will end in bubbling over. The contest between Messrs. Poyas and Hogan grows hotter as it draws the decisive day when it will be definitely settled who is to be the next Representative from Grant County to the Legislature. The friends of each are very hot about success, and after many inquiries of the adherents of both men, I would not be surprised if the majority of the successful one didn't name more than that of the other.

Monday was County Court day at Williamsburg, and the candidates were to speak, I drew a large crowd, estimated at 1,400 persons, and it was held by the oldest inhabitants of the town.

There were a few many drunken men in the town before. Whisky was plenty and as free as water. There were several fights but no serious results, as the combatants were too drunk to hurt each other. There were several arrests during the day, and a good many others who ought to have been arrested but were not. In the afternoon the crowd gathered in the Court-house to hear the speeches; and, as the weather was extremely warm and the house crowded to its utmost capacity, a seat amidst the mass of sweating, sweating humanity was anything but pleasant. The speeches were mainly in reference to local issues, and there didn't seem to be much difference of opinion between them in regard to their treatment of the people, as not much enthusiasm shown during the speeches except when some vulnerable point in the past record of the other was held up to view and punctured, with a denouncing yell.

Mr. Squire Poyas has improved very much as a speaker since I heard him a month ago when he was as awkward and diffident as a schoolboy. The majority of the crowd in the Court-house seemed to be for Poyas, but the Hogan men say that nothing to judge the general result by. There was a good deal of money bet on the election. The bets are made even, no odds being asked or given by either side. The candidates are to stump the county together before the election, and have made appointments for each of the voting precincts. In the meanwhile, the buying and selling of votes goes on, the friends of both candidates shelling out money and whisky freely.

Cupid, that little fellow, in casting about his darts, pierced the bosoms of Mr. E. L. Lemaire and Miss Ida Lemaire, but the lady's parents, regardless of the wounds inflicted, refused their consent. Ben's motto was, "go in Lemaire if you do get squeezed."

While at Sunday-school, last Sunday week, at Dry Ridge, he induced his lady love to take a buggy ride and went to Walton, took the evening train for the city, and, registering at the Gibson House, the license was procured, a minister called in, and in less time than it takes to tell it the two were made one. The parents of the bride were very much ruffled for a few days, but finally sent the runaway, and with a "Bless ye, me children!" as a benediction they were forgiven, and everybody is happy. May their crop of Lemons be an abundant one.

Miss Lemaire, who is a daughter of Mr. Boone, are visiting friends here at present.

The Grant County Herald has again made its appearance under the supervision of Chas. Bradley. A paper from Christiansburg came here a month ago and started a paper and said. Cause, bank account wasn't large enough. One of the party, a compositor named Humes, was the author of the article, and Bradley, who kicked one morning because Hughes didn't come to work soon enough, Hughes got angry and put a head on Bradley's shoulders. Bradley is now monarch of all the surveys.

The county built a bridge across Eagle Creek, a few years ago, at a cost of $10,000. They employed an engineer to guard the interest of the county in the construction, but shortly after it was built it was noticed that the structure was faulty, and though efforts were made to make it safe, it tumbled down the other day. The contractor, who is an old bridge builder from Louisville, said it was the fault of the engineer, who didn't know anything about bridge building, and decided to let him make a mistake instead of allowing him to pursue his own plans. He has brought suit against the county for $2,000 for extra work ordered by the engineer, and the county suit will be brought for the $10,000 paid out.

The late residence of Jerry Poor was sold last Thursday at Commissioner's sale for $4,500. It was a fine residence, and the improvements cost some $12,000 about twenty years ago. John Meyers was the purchaser. Mr. Poor is now in Sherman, Tenn., in the lumber business.

The oldest son of Mr. Lefe Collins, was drowned while bathing in the Licking River. Last Monday the family, who reside near Crittenden, went to the river to gather shells and fish. The three boys went across a bend in the river bathing, and the younger boys got into a suck-hole and were in great peril, when Dick went to their assistance. He held them up until Mr. Wooten, who is an old, came to his assistance and took them home. Seeing that Dick was nearly exhausted, he told him to hold up and he would come to him. When he got the younger boys to shore Dick had sunk, and after peering down the body was found about twenty feet below where he sunk. He expired immediately on being taken from the water. He was a noble boy, and his parents are almost distracted over his sudden taking off.

Crops are looking well at present, but we are needing rain. Uno

FARM NOTES.

When you plow deep, even though you don't plow as many furrows in a day.

Sheep, owing to their shyness, should be treated with great kindness. Their treatment should be such that they will actually learn to entertain an affection for their keeper.

Cows should never be pastured with pigs, sheep, geese or chickens. They all make the grass offensive to the nearest animal. The horse can pasture with neat cattle.

A little dry sand covered over potatoes when they are first put in the cellar will destroy any unpleasant odor they may have. A sprinkling of dry, air-slacked lime will mitigate a tendency to rot.

It is supposed that eating rich clover partly wet with dew or recent rain is dangerous to cows, as producing bloat. But when dry there is but little danger if the cows are not too hungry and unused to such food.

Professor Lacey says that for feeding silk worms there is no appreciable difference between the Osage orange and the mulberry. It would be a step in advance if the hedge should become the feeding ground of the silk worm.

While birds sometimes destroy weed seeds, it must also be born in mind that they often disseminate them. Observation and experience amply prove that many, if not most, of the seeds excreted by the feathered tribes, retain vitality enough to germinate.

A most valuable remedy for heaves and said to be a sure cure: Forty undermined, one pint of resin, a pint of ginger, half a pound of mustard, one pint of unslacked lime, one pound of sugar, four ounces gum guaiacum, six ounces cream tartar. Mix thoroughly and add to thirty powders, and give one in the feed every morning before watering.

The original Southdowns were the purest blood of any English sheep.
Their improvement was accomplished by judicious selections from various flocks. Good symmetry of form has been attained, large size and fine wooling qualities. By reason of this, purity they have stamped their fattening qualities more certainly upon their offspring than any other English breed. Lord Walsingham's flock is the most celebrated. —Stock Journal and Farm.

One of our Brooklyn friends states that he has accidentally discovered a very efficient remedy for gapes in chickens. It is a dry caustic lime. One of his chickens got the gape; he caught the fowl and with a penknife dropped some caustic lime that happened to be standing by into its throat, and let it go.
He mentioned his success to a friend of his, who applied the same remedy to three chickens with the same result. —Rural New York.

There is no driving of the flock in Spain. When the shepherd wishes to remove his sheep he calls a tame wether, accustomed to feed from his hands, and the favorite, however distant, obeys his calls while the rest follow. One or more of the dogs, with a large collar, armed with spikes in order to protect them from the wolves, precede the flock; others skirt it on either side, and some bring up the rear. If a sheep be ill or lame, or lagging behind, unobeyed by the shepherd, the dog stays with and defends it until someone returns in search of it.

Experience with the Colorado beetle should prompt the early planting of potatoes; abundant manuring and good preparation of the soil. The latter often doubles the crop. An extra one hundred bushels of potatoes per acre are well worth working for. It does not pay to plant large seed. Small, well-ripened seed will be the most profitable when its cost is considered.
After much observation, there appears to be a difference in the crop from the small seed and from the large seed. Of course there is a limit, and potatoes are such a hickory nut are not referred to.

A farmer says: "Four years ago my farm was infested with rats. They were so numerous that I had great fears of my whole crop being destroyed by them after it was housed; but having two acres of wild pepper mint that grew in a field of wheat cut and bound with the wheat, drove the rats from my premises. I have not been troubled with them since, while my neighbors have any quantity of them. I feel convinced that any person who is troubled with these pests could easily get rid of them by rubbing a good supply of mint and placing it around the walls or bases of their barns."

The Pig.

Black or flesh-colored pigs are freest from skin disease in hot climates. The choice is practically between the Essex and Berkshires for males with which to improve the native stock of hardy grubbers of the root-or-die variety. Those who have tried the former have been delighted at first, but after a few years began to recall with longing the lean ham and skin, but solid and flavorous bacon of the old race-horse breed. The trouble with the Essex pigs for the South is that they are not active enough. They are the eat-and-sleep, to-sleep-and-wake-to-eat kind, and their grades are, of course, like them. The side fat is superb, and is the leaf lard, and so far the breed is all that could be desired; but the hams and shoulders are too fat for profit, and the ham is not marbled with fat like the Berkshires.

These (the Berkshires) are much more wide awake, less easily controlled, but good foragers. Their grades are a wonderful improvement on the original stock, may be made very fat, and get the proportion between the fat and lean hams, shoulders and side pork or bacon, is such as to develop and preserve the excellence of the meat. The hams are large and rich and juicy, with diffused fat. Berkshires are not quite so easily fattened when penned and systematically fed as the Essex grade, but they will take much better care of themselves in the woods, and when penned, or fastened for fattening, may be finished off with half the feed the original "eat-and-sleep" could require.

With rich, succulent and well breeders, the Essex is a more profitable pig than the Berkshire, because his nature leads him to take little exercise, so that all he eats goes to flesh and fat. Respiration, which, if rapid, reduces fat greatly, is with him never accelerated by moving about, and with plenty of feed, the sole burden of life is to digest it. This breed is pre-eminent among the black breeds, and excelled by none as fat producers. —

Care of Sheep.

Keep the sheep dry under foot with litter—even more necessary than roofing them. Never let them stand or lie in mud or snow.

Take up lamb hocks early in the summer, and keep them up until December, when they may be turned out.
Remove the lower bars as the sheep enter or leave the yard, thus avoiding broken limbs. Count them every day.
Begin training with the greatest of care, and use the smallest quantity at first.

If a ewe loses a lamb milk daily a few days and mix a little slum with her milk.

Let no hogs eat with the sheep.

In weaning lambs use a little mill feed.

Never frighten sheep if you can avoid it.

Save for weak ones in cold weather
Lard is a poor food for the weak, thin or sick sheep, from the strong, and give extra care.

If one is hurt, catch it at once; if in fly time apply spirits of turpentine daily, always with something healing.
Splinter broken limbs tightly, loosening as the limb swells.

Keep a number of good bells on them.
Don't let them spoil wool with burrs.
Cut tag-larks in early spring.

For scours give pulverized alum in wheat bran. Prevent by taking care in changing dry for green food.

If lame, examine feet, clean out hoof;
pare off hoof, if unsmooth, apply tobacco boiled with blue vitriol, in a little water.

If the weather is not too cold, shear a ewe sheep that are beginning to shed, and carefully save the pelts of those that die.

Have some good book on sheep to refer to.

Warbles in Cattle.

A correspondent of the Iowa State Register wishes to know the origin of,
and a way to prevent, warbles getting into the backs of cattle. The eggs which produce this warble are laid by a large and beautiful gad-fly on the backs of the cattle in August or September. They are scientifically called Estrus Bovis, and are much larger than the horse bot-fly. The latter lay their eggs on the hair of a horse, while the cattle gad-flies deposit their eggs in the skin by the means of a sharp instrument, which causes great pain to the cattle, making them run and bellow about the pasture. In the spring of the year they are still in the cattle's backs, but will work their way out in June or July and fall to the ground in a chrysalis state, where, in about forty or fifty days, it comes forth a beautiful bot-fly. Cattle owners can, by moving their hands along the cattle's backs, feel the bunches caused by the warbles.
With the fingers they can be squeezed out and destroyed, which all farmers should attend to, as no cattle can thrive with them. It is difficult to prevent them from being deposited in the cattle, as the eggs are placed under the skin and cannot be found or removed until they assume the chrysalis state, when they are found enough to be felt. They can be found and removed late in the winter or spring. They are a nuisance and disagreeable animal, and very annoying to stock.

Flasks of arabesque pottery, containing ambergris, which the passion for Oriental notions has revived, are in high favor. Others, of glass, very fragile, too, are favorite monuments, though they seem out of place there.

Cousins for the Fair.

The way to find a woman out is to call at her house.

There is not a friend to man so true,
so kind, so real, so good as woman.

Two female physicians residing in Chicago realized from their practice $12,000 and $15,000 respectively.

The Boston Herald is sure that the true way to secure a friend is to mistake an elderly lady for her daughter.

It is now definitely decided that a woman can keep a secret—particularly if she happens to be a woman as it is told her.

If the ladies wish to much to vote, let a law be passed permitting all the fair sex over twenty-six years old do so. It will be a safe experiment probably.

The Delaware Republican man must have had a sad experience. He says:
The fellow who wants to know what will bring out the hair should get married.

The Princess of Wales is the innocent cause of turning the heads of half of the women in society. She invented the little silk handkerchief turban now so fashionable.

It is a fact generally observed says the Troy Times; that the man who dis-honors the institution of marriage is generally the man who thought he was getting a rich widow and didn't.

The cabinet is the favorite piece of furniture for drawing rooms or parlors.
They have spindle balustrades and be-veiled glass doors, and many are Jarnes open cabinets with irregular shelves.

A new caprice in evening gloves is to have them laced instead of buttoned.
Cyclet holes are not used, and they are laced in a very simple arrangement, which adds greatly to the neatness of the fit.

Many elaborate suits are rich with carving or inlaid panels. Large-sized mirrors for bureaus, and dressing-stands are insisted on by purchasers, even though they may not be in keeping with the style of the furniture.

Libraries are fitted with mahogany or walnut, usually. The book-cases are low and the table in the center of the room is square. Figured stuffs are much used for the hanging and the furniture coverings in libraries.

The light woods, such as ash, oak or Virginia pine are shown for sample English bed-room sets, while mahogany, rosewood and ebony are far more costly. The light, natural tinted mahogany is much used for this purpose.

The Variety of Lands and Labor Represented at the Breakfast Table.

A recent number of the London Telegraph calls to mind the wonderful exhibition of human energy and ingenuity that appears each morning upon the breakfast table of a Londoner. The tea he drinks comes from the far-off land of Cathay; or, it may be from India or Assam; his coffee is the production of a strange eastern port known as Mocha, on the shores of the Red Sea; for his sardines, ships have been chartered in the Mediterranean; his bacon has probably been reared in Canada or the Western States; the cane of the sugar he delights in has not long before arrived in the hardy breezes of the Indies; his preserves are made from the fruits of the tropics; his currants that fill his cake have been gathered on the shores of Greece, and the beef which makes his meal substantial, has, in all probability, grazed in Holland, or in the farther pastures of the Western world. Almost every race, certainly each of the four continents, has been under tribute ships; trains and car-vans have been set in motion, the soldiers have been invited to industry in the remotest corners of the earth, countless people have been employed in order that he may have a satisfactory morning repast. Long acquaintance with such luxurious wealth, however, has the effect to make him undervalue these resources. To him, the thought of the Arabian desert wanderer, with the camel-loads of coffee, or the negro laborer in the sugar mills, the Chinaman peasant, or the Chinese tea-growers, seldom or never comes. He has been so continually used to the possession of the treasures, which their art and toil supply, that the wonderful breakfast he eats is regarded with no surprise, and scarcely worthy of a passing remark.

Paint for Farm Buildings.

The following is a very cheap and excellent paint for farm buildings, forming a hard surface, and as its hardness increases by time, it is far more durable than putty.

Take freshly burned unslacked lime and reduce it to powder. To one peck or one bushel of this add the same quantity of fine white sand, or fine coal ashes, and twice as much fresh wood ashes, all these being sifted through a fine sieve. They should then be thoroughly mixed together while dry. Afterward mix them with as much common household soap as will make the whole thin-enough to wash with a painter's brush. It should be washed on of both gray stone color, newly white, red, and Indian red; if drab is desired, add burnt amber, Indian red and a little black; if dark stone color, add laumblack; or if brown stone, then add Spanish brown. All these colors, of course, be first mixed in oil and then added.

This paint is very much cheaper than common oil paint. It is equally well suited to wood, brick or stone. It is better to apply it in two coats; the first thin, the second thick.

We now have on hand a lot of summonses for Justices of the peace. Call in and get a supply when in town. Price 50c. per 100.

The Robertson County Tribune, of the 3d inst., tells of rain and hail falling on the morning of the 12th. That's going into the future for items.

NEXT Saturday is the "big day for everybody" at Woodside Park. The managers anticipate a large crowd and lots of enjoyment for all who attend.

Mr. M. S. RICE is suffering with a very sore eye, which confines him to his room. It is very painful, and the primary cause of the trouble is unaccountable.

A. O. HALE, T. W. Finch, F. Riddell, J. P. Bylbo and Charles McKim have been appointed Trustees for the town. The "dads" have a splendid field for labor.

ONE cow, a yearling, and a calf which had been wanted a few months, were sold on the street by the Sheriff, Tuesday. The stock was leveled on and sold for taxes.

A VERY refreshing shower visited this locality last Saturday at 12 m. It came not before it was needed; for vegetation had commenced showing signs of distress.

In a short time Mr. L. H. Dills will have in front of his residence the handsomest yard in the burg. He is having it arranged with an eye especially to the beautiful.

An exchange has a beautiful recipe for making "Dutch roll," but none of the materials are scarce in our supplies, either of which is sufficient to accomplish the desired effect.

MONDAY George Thetage, who was lodged in jail last week, was released, giving bond in the sum of $200 for his appearance in the Criminal Court. Capt. Geo. W. Terrell went on the bond.

The colored female ment was unquestionably "off" last Saturday. Two of them engaged in pugilistic amusement, while two others had a fiery and emphatic interview, spiced with profanity.

The appearance of the Burlington graveyard has been greatly improved within the past few days, be it said to the credit of the Trustees. The fences have been repaired and the ground given a general cleaning.

We have given that brush-pile on the side of the street three several blasts, but the blasted thing is right where it was when we commenced. If it is not removed before Christmas, the boys may use it for a bonfire.

The wheat in the Petersburg bottoms is bulging out surprisingly. Some of the farmers have been deceived to the extent of 200 bushels in their crops, which they yielded at about more than their most liberal estimates.

We hear it reported that during the last month or two, Mr. Scott Rice has lost a cow or two, a $500 sheep and a valuable mule. This looks very much like something other than natural cause in taking the lives of this stock.

Mr. F. F. BLYTH is putting a portion of the Boone House through a course of repairs. In a few days he will hold a large sign on the corner, that the weary pilgrims may, upon coming within eye-sight, recognize it as a haven of rest.

SATURDAY, Mr. Joe H. Cloro, who lives a short distance from Burlington on Union powder, brought to our office two very large potatoes which he had raised this year. They weighed 27 ounces and were unusually fine specimens of the Early Rose variety.

If there is any enterprise in a man it will crop out, it makes no difference if the man is out of the county of thermometers. It was that spirit which induced Mr. W. F. McKim to mandamazo and gravel the public street in front of his place of business, last week.

Oh, ye skeptics who believe there is no efficacy in advertising, read this and be convinced of your error! Last week we advertised the single line, "Wanted—A good rain," and before Saturday night this part of creation was visited by a splendid rain, the value of which was many thousands dollars to the farmers.

ONE day last week, Mr. F. L. Gordon had a very valuable horse go to death, and another one badly hurt, by an enraged bull. It was almost impossible to subjugate the animal, which, after having 15 hours sawed off, was taken to Petersburg for sale, where it could not be disposed of on account of the rough treatment given it before capture.

Personal Mention.

On Monday, Robert Graves, of Covington, called on his friends in town.

CLINTON SMITH, who for the last six months has been out West growing up with the country, has returned, looking well and as handsome as ever.

Dr. FRED YOUNG, of Cincinnati, has been in our atmosphere last week in Boone County. The Doc. came in to see the Recorder for while out rusticking.

Mr. C. N. CROPPER, an ex-Bonnette, who is now a resident of Jefferson County, Ky., spent the first of this week with his relatives in the north part of the county.

On Thursday last week, Esquire Reuben Connor called in about 25 minutes, in which time he expressed his desire that everybody vote for him Monday, although he has not canvassed the county.

MISS SALLIE HOOKER, after a lengthy and pleasant visit in the Blue-grass region of Kentucky, returned to her home in Boone County, Ky., to the delight of her numerous admiring friends, says the Enquirer of last Sunday.

FRANK Sunday morning, Tim Westbay and Frank Hall left for a camp-meeting at Loveland, Ohio, where they remain this week. Tim and Frank love to attend religious meetings; they attend as often as once a year at home.

The Masque Picnic at Parlor Grove, last Saturday we tore ourselves away from business (?) and in company with our hand-and able young friend, A. W. Bradford, were off to Parlor Grove, where the North Bend Lodge F. & A. M. was holding its annual picnic. We made a safe arrival, there being no quarantines on our route, exactly as we expected to find it.

We arrived at 2 p. m. and found a host of the blithe and gay in the mazy dance keeping time with sweet strains of music, while a multitude of wiles drew for such amusement have long since entered the eternal past, occupying the seats around the platform, contented on the dancing and discussing such topics as to them were the most interesting. The very laborious condition and rendered dancing very tedious. This was generally complained of, but taking it all in all, the picnic was a perfect success, and everybody went home in a good humor, rejecting that attended.

When the Minnie landed her precious cargo was estimated at 150 souls.

We arrived on the grounds too late to make connections with the dinner-table, but understand there was an abundance of both substantial and luxuries.

It is really conceded by the best judges that a quantity of ice in a barrel of water is a good thing to have at a picnic.

We saw the steamer Minnie disintegrated when she struck the Delphi quarantine station Saturday morning.

When wearied and discovered a small regiment of prospective doctors were not so positive we had not encountered a quarantine corp. One took for a chirp-dip, from the fact that he carried a small patch semi-continuously.

How many were there? His question which has been repeatedly asked, three hundred, more or less, and you will be correct.

Fairs, &c.

We have on our table the catalogue of the North Georgia State Fair, at Atlanta, commencing Oct. 20th and continuing one week. There are 1,384 entries, and many of the premiums are very liberal.

We are in receipt of an invitation to attend and give the address at the Union Agricultural Society of Southern Ohio, at Blount, commencing Tuesday, Sept. 9th, and continuing five days. The premiums to be awarded are very liberal.

We have before us Edwin Allen's Catalogue of American Newspapers, a neat pamphlet containing 128 pages of valuable information for those wishing to do so.

A greater portion of the composition in the book is the work of E. W. Smith, who com- mended his trade on the Recorder nearly four years ago.

W. A. WALKER, a student at Meigs, Wood- ard, Thornton & Ginter for a complimentary ticket to the Eminence Fair, August 12th, 13th and 14th. They say that their high school is improved by the livestock, and promote the nutritional interest of the county, and promote the happiness of mankind. They will be trotting and running races every day.

"Our Love of Truth."

To the Editor of the Recorder.

The readers of the Recorder no doubt noticed the statement purporting to be from the Florence correspondent in regard to the race which was held at the late fair.

We thought it a little strange to see a statement which should have been made to the editor. Well, on meeting with a few days since, he voluntarily told us that he was the author of said statement.

Well, now, Mr. Editor, who did not tell you that the race was in our garden, correct you by telling us you published it. It is only our love of truth, and the hope that it may bring about a reform in our Editor's conduct in life, or at least cause him to take upon himself the responsibility of his own productions, that causes us to take notice of this little matter. L. H. DILLS.

Just so! you did correct us as to the ownership of the race, and we did not think importance to inform our readers with a paragraph setting aside the impression left when you brought the race to our office and said, "Great!"

or word of that import; and, as the afore- said Jesse cultivates your garden, we thought the statement was justifiable—Love of truth should be the motive in the giving of the proper person when the race was laid on our table. As to our Florence correspondent, he would better voluntarily throw away his "great" and "truth." It is mighty and it is great.

The following marriage licenses were is- sued since our last report: John Eudon, farmer, aged 22, and Nellie Drey, 17 1/2. J. J. Uz, 22.

LAST year, Judge F. A. Boyd planted a single sweet potato "Southern Queen," which he took therefrom 21 1/2 pounds of splendid potatoes.

The light fantastic was not tripped at Vi- lona Park, last Thursday afternoon. The "interfered, but the c." as to the outside, repaired to the school-house, where they enjoyed themselves a few hours. Fowler & Fowler manipulated the stringed instruments.

JAMES M. RIDDLE, of Rohville, Mo., in sending money to renew his old subscriptions to the Recorder, writes, under date of July 23d, that they are having considerable rain—too much for farmers and hay-making—and that they will certainly have a tremendous corn crop.

EVERY young lady desires a clear complexion, which is often prevented by some of the diseases arising from torpid liver, which are cured by Portia, or Tahler's Vegetable Liver Purgative, the great remedy for stomach, biliousness, dyspepsia, etc. For sale by A. W. Smith, Burlington; price, 50c.

MONDAY, Marion Douglas was tried at Bellevue for horse-stealing. One case was tried, while the examination in two others was waived. His bond in each case was put at $500. He was charged with stealing a horse, thus Bellevue is ridden of her white elephant. Tuesday afternoon, Mr. J. W. Crigler and Mr. Albert Corbin started to South-

Indianapolis where they heard of Crigler's horse.

GERMAN—On the 21st inst., at the resi- dence of his son-in-law, in Pendleton County, Fergus German, in the 77th year of his age.

Mr. German was born in Campbell County in 1792, and united with the Licking Baptist Church in 1818, and was an active worker in the cause of religion till his strength failed him. Many of our readers were personally acquainted with him, he having been engaged in his ministerial duties in this county for some time. He leaves seven children and an extensive circle of friends to mourn his death.

County Court.

Last Monday, a special term of the County Court was held for the trial of the County vs. Ernest Rice, charged with the prosecution of the witness Hester Henly of the county. The child is about five years of age, and the defendant is charged with the same. The jury found for the plaintiff, and the defendant is to pay for the child for the support of the child. The payments are to be made semi-annually, the first to be paid on the 1st of January in 1889, and so on.

Monday in February 1889, and so on for the defense. An appeal has been taken.

Preparing to Leave.

The tramp of the masculine gender who was lodged in jail for feloniously entering J. W. Davis' house, some time since, has been discharged with his lodging, and last week commenced arranging with a program for making his escape. Saturday morning Mr. Cowen searched the jail and discovered a heavy iron bar about two and one-half feet in length, which the tramp had suspended by a string between the brick wall and iron lining at one of the windows; also, a piece of a bucket hoop, concealed in a like manner.

By a huge rope, the tramp had cut off one of the windows, the hoop iron of the water bucket, but how he got the buggy-spoke is unknown. The jailer put shackles on the prisoner's feet, which renders his stay certain.

At the present rate and increase the Democ- rat will have over 2,000 subscribers in a short time. The Sun continues to grow. If its subscription list continues to increase like it has the past six months, by the time the Sun is published in the County Democrat, it will have 16,400 subscribers—Winchester Sun.

We obtained, one day last week, three new subscribers in five minutes. If we continue in that proportion for one year, counting eight hours to the day, and 300 working days in the year, our subscription list will increase 86,400—Kentucky Sentinel.

Now, you men listen a minute. The other day we got a subscriber in one-half a minute. At that rate, counting eight hours to the day, and three hundred days in the year, we will increase our subscription list 288,000.

Religious Items.

"On what day of the month and in what month of the year was the feast of the Lord's Passover?" is submitted for an answer in the Sabbath-school next Sunday.

Mr. J. S. HARRIS, Chairman of the Sunday- school Committee, North Bend Association, says that, having learned that the Sunday-school Convention of the Campbell County Association has made arrangements to hold a meeting at the time chosen by his committee to hold one in Burlington, it has been thought best to postpone the latter meeting till some time during the fall.

Mr. A. C. WATSON furnishes us the fol- lowing item: The Rev. Mr. Buffington ever since he commenced preaching in this town, has expressed a desire that his services in the church here should not be in conflict with the services in any of the churches in the town. Learning, on Sunday last, that the second Sunday in the month is a recent Sunday in all the churches here, he occupied the pulpit, and requested his audience to make the change generally known. Mr. Buffington is an interesting speaker, and his sermon was a most timely and helpful one. We have no doubt, now, that the above change has been made, that he will be favored with good audiences.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Owl College.

July 18—There has been a fair crop of tobacco planted in the neighborhood. Cyra is looking well, considering the weather the backward spring. There is a good yield of wheat, ranging from 15 to 30 bushels per acre. The crop is very good; oats very short; and the corn is looking well. The weathering machine began its work a week ago.

The farmers are busy now hoeing their tobacco. The worms are plentiful.

Belcher District Judge is not using a car and wants one. W. B. Craven is chairman of the Board of Trustees.

The negroes had a rousing hush-meeting in the woods near here, Sunday. A large delegation from the city was in attendance. This makes the third meeting they have had here this summer.

Saturday, Esquire Reuben Connor was in town. He said he had, according to promise, visited Burlington, Bellevue, Petersburg and Taylorport districts, and that he would visit the others this week.

Petersburg.

All is peace and happiness once more. The war is over, and with the exception of one of our citizens boarding with Capt. S. Cowen and one abed with a few knife wounds injudiciously distributed over his anatomy, not a vestige of the battle remains. The additional officer at the distillery has been relieved by Mr. Reynolds, and has shaken the hands of this inhospitable and warlike town in his number for fourteen. The Masonic lodge at Parlor Grove has been and gone, leaving behind a long train of memories of its mixed with mud and a small sprinkling of the trials that such affairs are best with. Brother Reuben Connor, the genial candidate for Legislative honors, has paid this town a flying visit and left, expressing innumerable regrets that he did not himself. The questions of "for a Constitutional Convention" and "vice versa" have passed without a discussion, showing the same indifference among the voters here as appears to exist upon this subject all over the State.

The crop of sick patients in the surround- ing country appears unusually large, and, like the wheat crop, turns out beyond the most sanguine expectation.

Mr. William Gray, of Louisville, who re- cently spent several weeks at Mr. Jas. Shepherd's, where his wife, Miss Lizzie Gray, resides, died suddenly at the residence of his sister in Central Kentucky, one day last week. Unfortunately, the news of his death did not reach his relatives here until a day or two after the funeral. His daughter is overwhelmed with grief at the death of her father, which leaves her an orphan. She has the sympathy of her numerous friends in her bereavement.

Judge Cave got an overdose of cucumbers at the distillery, last Saturday, and made the whole night with his warwhoop of distress. Dr. W. M. Condit helped him out. No more cucumbers for the Judge until next time.

An American, who officiated at the dedi- cation ceremony at the Webster bridge, has just moved her family and all her friends into a handsome residence on the corner of Market and Second streets, and her poultry into an open cage with the same premises. When it rains she throws a few boards down, and the fowls go sailing on their little lake, while the dog's proprietress gazes on them placidly down from its dizzy heights above.

Our sister city, Bellevue, continues all tore up with her wounded horse-thief sensation, and rolls the sweet morsel under her tongue at all hours of the day and night, thus exhibiting her rare ability to appreciate a good thing when it falls in her way.

The dear old soul who pilots the uncertain sailing of the editorial department of a certain shaky craft on the political waves of Lawrenceburg, Ind., known among an unfortunate few as The Press, has allowed her pen to be sharpened by her righteous center a short notice of the colored newspaper at the distillery here which appeared in this column a few weeks since. Begging her pardon, but can't she just make an extra effort to attend to her own side of Jordan, and let this side take charge of its own affairs.

BURLINGTON, KY., JULY 31.

THE LITTLE GRAVE ON THE HILL.

BY GEORGE L. CATLIN.

There's a spot on the hillside far away,
Where in summer the grass grows green;
Where, beneath a rustling elm tree's shade,
A moss-covered stone lies in vain.
The quiet and unrequited spot,
A solitude lone and wild;
Yet somebody's hopes are buried there—
The grave of a little child.

In winter, when the snows are deep,
And the "hush" a "hush" of now;
But around it in springtime, fresh and sweet,
The daisies and violets grow;
And over it the summer breezes blow
With a fragrance soft and mild,
And the autumn's dead leaves thickly straw
That grave of a little child.

And every year there's a redoubt comes,
When the month of May is high,
And builds her nest in that quiet spot,
Mid the elm tree's branches high;
While her melody sweet by the hushful trills,
As if by the scene beguiled,
Perhaps—who knows?—an angel comes
To the grave of that little child.

For, somebody's hopes lie buried there,
Some mother's weeping in vain;
For, though years may come and years may go,
"Till never come back again,
Yet blessed are those who die in youth,
The pure and the undefiled;
Some road to heaven, perchance, runs through
That grave of a little child.

—Andrew's American Queen.

The World's Granary.

A very shrewd French merchant, who is a close observer of all matters connected with the commercial relations existing between France and the United States, writes as follows:

"During one of the last sittings of the French Chamber, the Minister of Agriculture said: 'I am proud to say that our farmers might as well make up their minds that the United States will be the granary of France.' He was perfectly right, for the price French farmers are obliged to submit to in order to realize in competition for American grain is simply ruinous. One of the largest farmers in France writes to me that his wheat costs him, in his granary, 27 francs per hectolitre, and that millers can buy American wheat fully as good for 22 fr. per hectolitre. Just imagine what a loss."

The official recognition of the inevitable comes none too soon. Forewarned is forearmed, and the producers of Western Europe must speedily arrange their affairs to meet the new order of things. The area of the United States is nearly fifteen times greater than that of France, and over nine times greater than that of the French Republic and the United Kingdom combined. In 1876 there were devoted to the cultivation of cereals in the United States seventeen million more acres than the entire area of the United Kingdom, and 30,000,000 acres more than the entire tilled land of France. In 1878 France devoted 37,000,000 acres to cereals of which 17,000,000 were in wheat. In 1876 the United States raised wheat from 27,500,000 acres, while the crop of 1878 is over 130,000,000 bushels larger than that of 1876.

Added to the advantages given to the United States by the possession of an area suitable for grain growing greater and more accessible than that of any other nation, our producers can compete successfully for Europe's trade on account of the lower cost of land, a more productive soil and the general use of agricultural machinery. Combined with this is a spirit of enterprise and industry that is enhanced by a climate which acts as a stimulant in infusing life and energy into the people inhabiting the grain-producing belt. While the farmer, in obedience to this spirit, pushes production and avails himself of every new labor-saving appliance in order to increase his crops, a like spirit of enterprise is developing and improving transportation facilities upon land and sea.—American Grocer.

Stick to the Farm.

In the long list of business houses and lots advertised for sale for taxes, which we find among our exchanges, says the Atlanta Constitution, none of them are owned by farmers. Very recently, while some men have made money speculating in cotton, a large number have lost in the same way. If true to himself and his farm the owner of the farm in the long run is about as happy, lives as comfortably, and has about as little to annoy him and try him as a man can have at any other business. The successful merchant of Atlanta brings skill, forthrightness, energy, economy and judgment to his every day business. Now, farmer, you do the same. There is no royal road to earnings; there are no crowns without thorns—in fact there are various old sayings and adages that may be applied to the farmer. He true to your farm, give it your time and attention. Get you some agricultural books and papers, and then, if you find in them new ideas and new methods which seem reasonable, try them. Plant cotton not only to make all you can at as little expense as possible, but cultivate and so handle it as to put a desirable article in market. As of cotton so let it be with corn, wheat, oats, in fact of all you grow or raise. You can not make a fortune on a farm in one or two seasons, but persistent labor on that farm will bring a sure reward. The foundation of our national wealth and strength is agriculture, and it will liberally support that man who will engage in it properly.

The Chilean war was brought on by the fates—phosphates.

Over-Production.

The Rural New Yorker says it is to be regretted that any economist should intimate the belief that there is, or threatens to be, over-production of the fruits of the farm. Already our agricultural interests have too much and too many kinds of opposition. The prevailing low prices of the articles raised by the farmer are not to be accounted for on this ground. Neither is the widespread financial trouble to be attributed to such a cause.

It is readily admitted that local or general markets may easily be overstocked with various kinds of manufactures, and also with those articles of consumption that are regarded as luxuries; but these bear to the community an entirely different relation from that sustained by the usual products of agriculture. All kinds of articles of commerce have shown a corresponding decline in price. If farmers need much that they can not buy, the same is true of those engaged in all other occupations. The low prices of farm products are not attributable to the absence of a demand for them, but rather to the want of the money with which to purchase them.

All over this vast land there are now, and probably always will be, districts which need far more meat and grain than they have or can obtain. Taking a broader view, the worn and denuded lands of the Old World are scourged with terrible famines from time to time. China in a few years has lost millions of her people from this cause. Syria and India have been—and the latter even now threatens to be again—the scenes of horrible mortality and desolation from the same calamity. Brazil and Morocco have also been grievously affected by famine during the past year. For the following reasons, we believe that no section need to fear over-production of the necessities of life. The means of transportation are so rapidly multiplying that there are always near or distant communities that may be reached that are in immediate and urgent need of what the farmer raises. These means of transportation are constantly increasing. The growth of population and the vast extension and multiplication of non-productive callings will prevent any diminution of the demand for the direct and indispensable means of subsistence.

The nature of the products of the soil is such that in many instances they can be converted into many other forms that may prove more marketable. If there be more corn than is needed, there may be a scarcity of good beef, butter, mutton, pork, etc., and these can readily be raised from the corn. Again, there is such wonderful adaptation in our soil and climate that, at least in many parts of our country, there is a vast privilege of choice as to what articles shall be produced. This ought to protect the intelligent farmer from the disappointment on an over-stocked market.

Millions of our people do not have a pound of fresh fruit of any kind for a great part of the year. Millions do not have a pound of butter for months. Millions scarcely know the taste of good, rich milk. Millions are living almost entirely without meat. Millions are to-day without a single article produced in the garden. Millions do not taste mutton once a year. Millions have to live nearly or quite without wheat flour. Millions have not enough corn-bread. Does that look like over-production?

The Stinging Tree.

[Scientific American.]
Though the tropical scrubs of Queensland are luxuriant and beautiful, they are not without their dangerous drawbacks, for there is one plant growing in them that is really deadly in its effects—that is to say, deadly in the same way that one would apply the term to fire, as, if a certain proportion of one's body is burnt by the stinging tree, death will be the result. It would be as safe to pass through fires as to fall into one of these trees. They are found growing from two to three inches high to ten and fifteen feet; in the older stems is whitish, and red berries usually grow on the top. It emits a peculiar disagreeable smell, but it is best known by its leaf, which is nearly round, having a point on the top, and is jagged all round the edge, like the nettle. All the leaves are large—some larger than a saucer.

"Sometimes," says a traveler, "while shooting turkeys in the scrubs, I have often forgotten the stinging tree till warned of its close proximity by its smell, and I have then found myself in a little forest of them. I was only once stung and that was very lightly. Its effects are curious. It leaves a mark, but the pain is maddening, and for months afterward the part, when touched, is tender in rainy weather, or when it gets wet in washing, etc. I have seen a man who treats ordinary pain lightly roll on the ground in agony after being stung, and I have known a horse so completely mad after getting into a grove of the trees that he rushed open-mouthed at everyone who approached him, and had to be shot in the scrub. Dogs when stung will rush about whining piteously, biting pieces from the affected part. The small stinging trees a few inches high are as dangerous as any, being so hard to see, and seriously imperiling one's ankles. The scrub is usually found growing among palm trees.

A SASSAR girl, eating her first gooseberries—"N'um! N'um! yum—m—m—m! wouldn't I like to see the geese that laid these berries."

The Newspaper Law.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.
2. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their periodicals, the publisher may continue to send them until the next order is received.
3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their periodicals from the office to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have notified their bills and ordered them discontinued.
4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the papers are sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.
5. Any person who receives a newspaper and makes use of it, whether he has ordered it or not, is held in law to be a subscriber.
6. If subscribers pay in advance, they are bound to the publisher, at the end of their time, if they do not wish to continue taking it; otherwise the publisher is authorized to send it on, and the subscribers will be responsible until express notice, with payment of all arrears, is sent to the publisher.

More Sheep Wanted.

The United States needs more sheep. In all parts of this great country to secure health and comfort its citizens must have food and clothing. The sheep furnishes the best and most wholesome animal food, and the most comfortable clothing yet tested by the masses of the people. In malarial districts—especially those where extremes of heat and cold are frequent—woolen clothing and a freer and more common diet of good young mutton, would insure better health and better vigor than generally characterize pork eaters and the wearers of cotton and fine linen.

From the best data within our reach, we ascertain that there are on the globe about 500,000,000 sheep. Of these the United States has but 86,000,000. Our manufacturers consume annually more than 225,000,000 pounds of wool. If each of our sheep furnished five pounds of wool, there would yet be a yearly deficit of 50,000,000 pounds.

Here is a good field for enterprising stock men. We need double our present number of sheep. Let no one indulge in a single farm of an over-production of either mutton or wool. Could our flocks be tripled or quadrupled, they would add not only to the healthfulness and sobriety, but also to the productiveness of every field used as a sheep pasture.

We hope every farmer who reads this will at once consider how much his interest would be subserved by adding a score of ewes to his stock. These furnish choice food, and their increase and fleeces are always in demand, and that, too, at fair prices.—Chicago Drovers' Journal.

Elimination.

Our bodies are in a state of incessant waste and repair. At countless millions of points, old material is being used up, and instantly replaced by new material that is instantly cast aside. For this reason it is true that one's body is wholly changed every year, and that it is not the same at two successive moments. Hence the importance of eliminating organs, to drain off this dead matter.

Arterial blood furnishes all the new material, while the old is brought away in the veins, it having been eliminated, the residue returns to the heart, purified for further use. The eliminating organs are the lungs, liver, kidneys and skin. The lungs eliminate carbonic acid—the most abundant of all the waste; the liver, cholesterine—waste of the brain and nerves; the kidneys, the waste of the muscles; the skin more or less of carbon, but especially the salts of the system.

The skin often does so much of this vicarious work, that a single glance at the diseased man's face will sometimes enable the physician to know what eliminating organ is diseased or torpid. The waste matter left in the system results in various diseases—sometimes in blindness, sometimes in ulcers, and in various irritations, and often in death, the system becoming at length fatally poisoned with it.

Care of Summer Butter.
Having made good butter, the next thing is to handle it so as to keep it sweet and fresh for winter use. The package must be water and air tight, and the butter covered with strong brine made from first-class salt and pure water. The shape of the package is not material, and expensive ones are not essential. The old oak firkin is good enough for anyone. Soak well in hot brine, and then cool before putting in the butter. The butter must not only be good when first made, but the buttermilk, casein and all other foreign substances must be got out of it thoroughly before packing. The cellar or other room in which the packages are placed must be cleanly, well ventilated and cool. A room in which the temperature reaches above 60° is not considered a fit place for butter, and five or six degrees lower will be all the better; and the temperature must be kept at a uniform standard.

When to Water Horses.
Those who have the care of horses should let them have what water they want to drink before feeding them oats, or corn, or if half an hour before, so much the better. If the latter are fed to them first, and they are allowed to drink a good deal of water soon after, much of the oats or corn consumed will be washed or carried down the stomach into the intestines, without being digested, when, instead of being benefited, the horse is positively injured, frequently causing colic, inflammation of the bowels, etc. A small quantity of water after feed would be attended with no such results, but the stomach of the horse is small, and can not hold much feed and water at the same time.—Rural World.

THE LOVERS' SOLILOQUY.

I have in my thoughts two maidens.
And they dwell not far apart;
They are the daughters of my heart,
And I shall call them my dear ones.
One is Ada Arabella,
And the other Susan Jane;
One is poor but she is handsome,
And the other rich, but plain.

The maidens both have fathers
On their daughters' welfare bent;
One is worth a hundred thousand,
And the other not a cent.
Arabella sports in jewels,
And her beauty I admit;
But in Susan's eyes are diamonds,
And she has the gems of wit.

I have heard it said that riches
Will take wings and fly away;
And perhaps that hundred thousand Might on pinions go astray.

As there is a wealth of sustenance,
Called the wealth of heart and brain,
Arabella's hundred thousand
I will marry Susan Jane!

For with her I must be happy,
Though my earnings may be small;
I can buy my clothing cheaply
At the Mammoth Tower Hall.

And with that I have on clothing—
If there's truth in what is said—
I can buy my wife's apparel
And have something left for bread.

With my Susan for a helpmate,
I shall be in courage bold;
She will know the heart that loves her
Was not bought with sordid gold.

And her lips at eve shall greet me,
Breathing the words which I adore;
I shall see the pleasant picture
When the cherubine comes near;

And shall feel that strength to labor,
With the health that labor brings,
Is far better than the riches
Which may to themselves take wings.

NECESSITY may be the mother of invention,
But laziness is certainly the father of it.

The Baltimore Gazette says it is reported that the cotton crop this year will amount to 5,250,000 bales. This is a decided increase over last year, and is 400,000 more bales than the South produced before the war, when in the full enjoyment of the profitable slave labor about which we have heard so much.

On the night of July 17, a six-year-old child of William Kohrt, of Owensboro, Ky., on a visit to her grandmother in Jeffersonville, made such complaint from acute pain in her back that a physician was sent for, who, on examination, found a needle working through the skin and extracted it. How long it had been on its travels through the child's body is not known.

PROFESSIONAL tramps in Northern Pennsylvania threaten that they will burn barns and do all the mischief they can in a quiet way if the new tramp law is enforced. They claim that the highways are free, that the world owes them a living and they are bound to have it. The Binghamton Republican thinks that a few doses of buckshot, with four or five drachms of powder burned behind them, will doubtless have a soothing effect.

The Des Moines-Register reports that there is universal and intense satisfaction throughout Iowa over the recent decision of the Supreme Court in regard to the practice of getting the farmers and other unsuspecting people to sign notes for small sums, which were afterward raised to large amounts and sold to banks. The courts had hitherto held that the victims must pay the notes in full, and that the third parties in whose hands the notes fell must be protected. The new decision reverses this, and throws upon the purchasers of such notes the duty of satisfying themselves they are genuine.

That was quite a heavy storm here last Friday night, or, rather, Saturday morning, says the Braeklen Chronicle. The lightning flashed continuously in the most vivid manner, and the sharp reports of the thunder were startling. A house in the lower part of the city, occupied by Mrs. Patrick Burke, was struck by lightning and the end torn out. The bolt shivered the footboard of a bed on which a man was sleeping on feathers, but, strange to say, he escaped. It is supposed the feather saved him from harm. The light was the warmest one known for several years, and some of our old friends say the warmest they ever experienced. It was a scorcher, surely.

According to the Chicago Tribune, this is the way in which seals are saved in that city: A few young girls belonging to a West Side church have set about a noble missionary work to increase the attendance on their beloved pastor's ministrations. They go out just before the evening service hour and lure young men to follow them; pilot their victims in by a harmless-looking side door, and give them in custody of two venerable deacons as sinners desirous of turning from the error of their ways, and before those young men have recovered from their shock of surprise and disappointment, they find themselves stowed away in front seats between trustworthy members, and being prayed and preached at by the officiating clergyman in a manner which for directness discounts that of Nathan.

A Hundred Years Hence.

Man for the future can but reason from the past. In a hundred years hence, as has been or heard of many changes on this wondrous globe he will find home. Great souls have come and gone; great souls will come again. Intellect has quickened in the means of his locomotion, lessened the Adamite course of toil; intellect will do still. So he reasons, and so his logic rests upon the past. One hundred years ago the world traveled in lumbering coaches and sailed to sea in slow-going ships. To-day the iron horse goes tearing through the land and steamers bridge the widest oceans. Months have changed to weeks and hours. One hundred years ago a traveler between New York and Illinois would have made up his mind to a three month's trip in lumbering wagons, sleepy ferries and uncomfortable stages. In this year of grace, 1879, two days and one night passed in ease and comfort, see him safely at his journey's end. When his Majesty's troops sailed from the shores of England to give these colonies a lesson, they were fortunate if three weeks' tossing on the broad Atlantic brought them within sight of Newfoundland. To-day an eight day passage is a matter of course. Who knows what is to be? Already whispers fill the air with wondrous works. The busy brains of men work. "Across the ocean in fifty hours!"—So reads the latest tale—a boat raised by gas and sailed by steam.

A hundred years hence! Who that is born to day will live to see it? And what if he does? Shall he see a daily balloon to London, and an afternoon trip to Florida? Will the docks, now going to the hiss of steam, be filled by strange, uncouth shapes, with wings and fans, and gaudy bags of gas? Will freight trains drawn by noiseless power pass swiftly beneath the sea, and parcels dart like lightning around the world? Stranger things than these have happened within a hundred years, and some may live to see greater wonders.

Whacking the Doctors.
[Memphis Avalanche.]

The medical profession has a great advantage over all others—when the family don't understand a disease, they give it some dark and mysterious name, that of itself awes and silences the outside barbarians. For instance, there are "pernicious" fever. That the disease is rightly named no one can deny, because it kills about nine out of ten, and can not help being highly pernicious; but that the term means anything beyond that has never yet appeared. And then there is "sporic" disease, a fancy word, and nothing more. It was first brought into use in Memphis after Mulbrandon's death, and was supposed at the time to describe the disease he died of. It must have been all right, for the Faculty indorsed it; so any man who disputes it is simply an unmitigated, presumptuous ass. Of course, having determined this point, the learned pundits of the lancet and pill-box declared that there was no danger of an epidemic, because no well defined sporadic had ever been known to disseminate in a community, against the peace and dignity of the name. But, alas for the predictions of the wise! It turned out that it was not a "sporic," but a "spore," that the autopsy of poor Mulbrandon had brought to light. The lively "spore," unlike the other, has never been known to keep within bounds, and we see the result of its researches in the spread of the fever over almost the whole city. It is best not to mention the term sporadic in the presence of a physician—it is obsolete now, and arouses unpleasant reflections in his mind.

Don't be an Editor.

The profession, though honorable, is far from gainful. It involves steady, persistent work; a constant strain on the mental faculties, and no end of untelligence, yet, annoying criticisms. There is no profession that exacts so much work for so small a return; none in which the steps of promotion are more numerous or more difficult to ascend. The candidate for journalistic honors must depend for promotion upon his own industry, his ability, and accident. The demand for service such as he can render is necessarily limited, the supply large and increasing, and he must be content to accept the best position and the best pay that he can get. One thing more can be said, and should be carefully considered by the would-be journalist at the start. Hard as it is to get into journalism, it is harder still to get out. The training which a newspaper affords is not calculated to fit a man for any other vocation or profession. In nineteen cases out of twenty the novice enters upon it "for better or for worse," for all time. If he can make an honest living in any other way he had better eschew journalism. If he must engage in it, let it be with his eyes open to the difficulties and disappointments that will inevitably beset his path.

During the six months ending June 30th, there were 368 failures reported in New York city, with total liabilities of $11,532,566; assets, $5,950,340. In the corresponding months of 1878 there were 514 failures, with liabilities of $39,039,705, and assets of $11,013,602.

That Dam Roaring.

A young buck went to see the daughter of a Presbyterian Elder, lately, whose house was near a mill-dam. It being spring of the year, the water made considerable of a roar as they tumbled over the dam. The modest young gentleman tapped lightly at the door at first, but received no answer. He tapped again—still no answer. Again and again he repeated his knock, but still he was unheard. Mustering up courage, he proceeded to administer some very heavy thumps on the door which brought the said old gentleman out.

"I suppose," said the youngster, who had by this time become slightly savage from being compelled to wait so long, "I suppose you could not hear my knocking for that dam roaring!"

"That dam roaring! What do you mean, sir? How dare you speak that way?" said the divine, somewhat angry at hearing the young man swear in his presence.

"I mean, sir, that I suppose you could not hear me on account of the dam-roaring."

"I mean, sir, that I suppose you could not hear me on account of the dam-roaring."

The Misses Platt, of Glendale, Ohio, are spending the heated term in this vicinity.

Married, in Lawrenceburg, last Thursday, William (Buffalo Bill) Williamson to Miss Lizzie Conner, of this place. No cards.

Mr. Albert D. Nichols, who has been suffering from a severe attack of typhoid fever for several days, breathed his last at the residence of his father, on Ashby Fork, last Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. The bereaved family has the sympathy of the entire community in this, their affliction.

There is considerable sickness in the neighborhood at present, owing in part, no doubt, to the excessive heat and drought.

The Crop Condition.

The following, which we condense from Special Report No. 15, Department of Agriculture, will be of interest to our readers, as it is made up of returns from all over the United States:

Corn—As was foreshadowed in the June report, the area planted in corn shows an increase of 3 per cent. In the New England States the area does not differ materially from that planted last year. None of the Atlantic States show any great change except North Carolina, which reports an increase of 3 per cent. Of the Southern States, Arkansas shows the greatest gain, being, as compared with last year, 108. Tennessee increases 6 per cent, and Mississippi, 4. The average condition of the crop for the whole country on July 1 was 98; not so high as last year by 2 per cent. The returns from the New England States show a low condition, resulting from a late spring and heavy frosts. The Middle States report a fair condition, except some complaint of drought in Pennsylvania. The South Atlantic States, with the exception of North Carolina, all report a low condition. In fact, the drought is almost universal in all the Gulf States. Texas has suffered most from this cause, and the crop is reported as being very low. Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee each report high condition, but not so high as at the same time last year. In Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana the condition of the crop is reported as being high, being 107, against 87 in 1878.

Wheat—The condition of winter wheat in the States July 1 averaged 91, against 101 July 1, 1878. This is, however, a slight improvement upon the June report, which made the average only 90. Our first returns for the season gave the average at 98 on the 1st of April. The drought of spring has cut the wheat in the West and South by general rains. The quality of the crop, from incidental remarks of our correspondents not called for by direct inquiry, appears to be considerably better than last year. We inquire in regard to quality later in the season. Of the different sections of the Union, the New England States average 99, an improvement of 6 per cent, since June 1. The conditions of growth during the last month were, on the whole, quite favorable.

Cotton—The condition in the different States, as compared with the returns for the month of June, shows that only three States, viz., North Carolina, Arkansas and Tennessee, have improved their condition, while all the others have fallen off. The drought, which was so severe, was the cause of the decline. In South Carolina, Georgia and Texas, its effects have been felt the most. In Mississippi the reports from Holmes and Yazoo counties represent the crop as very defective. In stand of cotton, the whole belt is good, and is reported as well worked and free from grass; it is some two weeks late, as compared with last year.

Tobacco—The acreage of this crop, compared with that of 1878, is placed in Kentucky at 89 per cent, in Virginia at 90; Tennessee at 95; Ohio, 75; Maryland, 96; Indiana, 70; North Carolina, 103; Pennsylvania, 112; Connecticut, 119; Massachusetts, 110; New York, 110; West Virginia, 78; Wisconsin, 123; South Carolina, 100; Georgia, 92; Alabama, 95; Mississippi, 100; Texas, 95; Arkansas, 80.

Oats—The condition of the oat crop shows no improvement since our June report; on the contrary, there is some decline. The New England States show a fair condition, but New York and Pennsylvania show a condition no better than in June. Virginia declines from 88 in June to 76 on July 1, caused by drought. The Carolinas, Georgia and the Gulf States, although the amount raised in these States is small, as compared with the more Northern States, all have fine crops for this year. Tennessee, Kentucky and the States north of the Ohio River are all much below average on account of drought. Wisconsin being the only exception, where the average is 98. Minnesota, Iowa and Nebraska report good average condition, but Missouri and Kansas are very low.

Rye—Winter rye is nearly all average in New England, as also are the small amounts grown in the more Southern Atlantic and the Gulf States. In the Ohio Valley, west of the Mississippi River and on the Pacific coast the condition is more or less depressed. Oregon averages but 79. Spring rye has a higher general average than winter rye, but is reported in a much smaller number of States. Its maximum condition, 108, is in Minnesota; its minimum, 55, in Oregon. Rye has been largely affected by the same influences that depressed the wheat crop.

Barley—Full average or above, in New Hampshire, 101; Massachusetts, 100; Connecticut, 104; Georgia, 101; and Oregon, 108. In all the other States it is below average, the lowest condition, 63, being in West Virginia.

Potatoes—There has been a decided increase in the area planted in potatoes, amounting to 3 per cent, for the whole country. The increase was largest in Pennsylvania, and was 9 per cent; in New York it was 4 per cent; Maine, which is a large producer, shows no change from last year. The Southern States, from Maryland to Texas, show some decline, Alabama alone making an increase of 4 per cent; Tennessee and Kentucky each fall off from 5 to 3 per cent. Of the States north of the Ohio River, none show a decline, and almost all make an increase. Michigan reports, as compared with last year, 107; Illinois, 104; Wisconsin, 104.

Fruit—The condition of the fruit of the country shows no change since the June report. The weather had been favorable for those that had escaped the frosts of May. In the North Atlantic States the crop is good; reports of some injury by frost in June in Vermont, and in New York and Pennsylvania some complaint of the fruit falling from the trees. The peach crop of Delaware, Maryland and Virginia is very good. The South Atlantic States, from North Carolina down, and all the Gulf States report very poor condition, especially in peaches. Kentucky, which is a large producer, reports great disaster to the peaches and a low condition for apples. The Northern States in the belt, comprising Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, report a very good crop. The Pacific coast has a full average.

THE skeptical no longer indulge their doubts as to the many cures effected by this incomparable cough medicine, Coussens' Honey of Tar, strongly asserts its claims to public esteem as the best remedy ever compounded for coughs, colds and all diseases of the throat and lungs. Daughters' College.

At Harrodsburg, Ky., whose advertisement appears in this paper, is one of the oldest and most celebrated institutions for the education of women in the State. Many of the most accomplished and useful women of the country claim it with pride as their alma mater, and are now sending their daughters to take their places in its halls. It is beautifully situated on the site of the old Green Valley Springs, whose waters are so famous, and is surrounded by one of the most lovely and healthful regions in the West. No institution has done more to elevate the standard of female education, and the constant patronage it has received from all the surrounding States, as well as from Kentucky, indicates the high esteem in which its methods and appointments are deservedly held.

No. 36 Pike street, Covington, Ky.

BURLINGTON, KY., AUGUST 7.

THE SOFT, WHITE HAND.

I've seen them sitting side by side—
A lady fair, of gentle mien,
And he in strength of manly pride,
In many a gay and glittering scene.
And sometimes, when from harp and band
The thrilling sounds of music stream,
I've seen her little soft, white hand
A moment on his shoulder gleam.
And oft at home, when passing by
As he reclines in his arm chair,
I've seen her little, soft hand
Unheeded on his shining hair.
But oftentimes when they're alone—
For hearts like hers are pure and shy—
Her little, soft hand seeks his own,
Alas! unnoticed there to lie.
He loves her? Yes; but love of man
"To his life a life apart;"
He can not, as a woman can,
Enshrine an idol in his heart.
Love is, with him, a pleasant hour
Spent from the ardor of the day;
Enjoyed as perfume of a flower,
And then as lightly cast away.
He dreams not of the longing there
In her much-loving, trusting breast,
That makes her life one yearning prayer,
So dutifully, touchingly expressed.
A prayer that, if he love her yet
With that sweet love of early years,
In mercy never to forget
That hidden love makes hidden tears.
And oh! if yet may come to this:
That all of earth at his command
He'll give that one translucent bliss—
The vanished touch of that soft hand.

Culture and Growth of Trees.

People who have never tried cultivation upon ornamental trees have little idea how much more rapidly they grow under culture than set in the grass. A year ago the writer planted a lot of ornamental trees in rows for cultivation until they were needed for planting out, and at the same time put a few in a place upon the lawn of the same lot. While the former have grown several feet of wood in the year the latter have developed but a few inches of growth. The reason lies largely in the fact that the grass requires an immense amount of water in its growth, and the grass of the lawn has so deprived the trees of moisture as to actually almost kill them. The lesson is an obvious one, but how shall we profit by it? The answer is this: Plant trees in groups altogether, and then keep the area of ground in which they are planted entirely under cultivation. This may be done by horse and cultivator, if the lawn is large, or by hand if the groups of trees occupy a small area. The objection that it renders the lawn unsightly is not valid, for if cultivated ground be kept with clean edges that are in nice curves, and no weeds be allowed to collect, the lawn is in no wise injured by the cultivated portion.

Late Cabbages.

[Vict's Magazine.]

Speaking of the late planting, I wish to say to the readers of the Magazine that if they wish a delicious winter cabbage, the very best way I have ever found to obtain it is to sow seed of the Winningstadt the latter part of June or July in a cool place; transplant as soon as ready, and before very hard frost gather the tender heads and store them for winter. Not being quite matured, they will keep better than older heads, and will be as tender as cauliflower and almost as good. In cooking, cut the heads in quarters and serve them without breaking or "mashing," each quarter or eighth being nicely laid, out on the plate and dress with gravy or drawn butter, and you have a feast fit for a king. Those who grow nothing but the larger cabbages, that are sown early and grown until late in the season, know nothing of the real delicacy of a good young cabbage, and had better enlarge their knowledge and gratify their taste as soon as possible.

The Best Hay.

It is a fact that badly made and less nutritious hay has often a finer aroma than sound, well made and more nutritious hay, and an inexperienced person would often decide from appearance in favor of a browner and "finer-smelling" hay, in preference to a green hay with less aroma. That this, however, is practically a mistake, appears evident from the comparative chemical composition of such samples, though some stock feeders prefer brownish hay, as being more relished by cattle, even though its actual nutritive value may be less. Whenever hay is decidedly brown in color it is a sign of excessive fermentation. Having lost a considerable quantity of its actual nutritive constituents, such hay will necessarily be proportionally richer in indigestible woody fiber, and will approximate nearer in its character to straw than in the case of greenish or less fermented hay.

THE rare, pale Margaret is a very orderly young lady. Not in vain has her fond mamma impressed upon her the advantages of keeping an exact account of all the doings. On one page of her neat little pocket diary is the following account current:

Feb. 20.—To I kiss returned, Cr.....

Success in Sheep Husbandry.

Sheep husbandry, as an avocation, has no distinguishing peculiarities. Its valleys of humiliation and disappointment are peopled by those plodders whose dreams have failed of realization; others of its votaries struggle with the throng along the plains and uplands of mediocrity, while the few reach the mountain top and impress their names and fame upon the deep blue of a complete success.

The plodder may live, and he who moves only to keep from being run over by his surroundings, may be floated beyond rank by a better—than he merits; but the flockmaster's ultima thule—those grand results which leave ineffaceable tracks upon life's highway, and bring honor and wealth in their train—are achieved only by those who, through untiring study and persistent effort, have come to deserve them. The 'luck' of sheep husbandry is so thoroughly within the control of the flockmaster that he rarely need look beyond his own management for those causes and effects which go to make or mar his fortune.

The cornerstone of success—proper selection, judicious blending, liberal alimentation, and adaptation of variety and number to natural and artificial surroundings—are so readily accessible, that no one need lay his foundations improperly or unintelligently build upon them. Secondary influences, such as fluctuation of prices, unpropitious seasons, and unforeseen casualties, may intervene and occasionally disturb the surface of the tide, but under prompt and thoughtful and judicious management, the ripple will soon disappear, and the general flow will tend surely on toward comfort and competence.

Many disasters have overtaken those who have essayed sheep husbandry. Extravagant purchases, unintelligent breeding, improvident feeding, negligence in supervision, and absence of any well defined policy, are the rocks upon which the majority of such efforts have been stranded, and he who would do more of his ventures—a better fate, must needs avoid the dangerous rocks marked out by their wrecks.—National Live Stock Journal.

How to Get Fat.

A poor fellow, so awfully thin that he was ashamed of himself, made his complaint in the columns of the New York Sun, and asked for advice as to how he could gain flesh. This appeal from the Shadow has elicited some replies which may be interesting to others thus afflicted:

"J. G. S." recommends the use freely of those foods which contain the most starch, as potatoes, arrowroot, rice and sago. Animal food should be partaken of twice a day, a small quantity each time. Peas, beans, and lentils will also develop fat. Potatoes are not so fattening or nourishing as persons imagine, and should be avoided. Your correspondent will find cocoa beneficial. It is the most fattening beverage in use, is cheap, does not cause nervousness, like tea or coffee, and should be more popular than it is, particularly with thin people. Cider, lemonade, vinegar or ice-water should not be taken. Liquor or tobacco must not be used in any form, as it is worse than useless to try to acquire fat if the use of either of both is persisted in.

"A. S. Symonds" advises the sufferer to take two iron quinine pills three times a day. That will enrich his blood. Eat cooked corn flour with milk every morning, and take one tablespoonful of cod-liver oil twice a day, one at 10 a. m. and one at 5 or 6 p. m. Also eat every meal a glass of good wine—the red French wine. Let him retire to bed early, not later than 10 p. m., and never drink ice-water nor eat ice-cream.

"Ex-Shadow" says: Three years ago I was probably as thin as, or thinner than, he is. My remedy was to drink plenty of good lager (not schooner), and to-day I am hale and hearty, and yesterday I tipped the scales at 161 pounds. I never enjoyed better health in my life than I do now.

Butter Making.

"If I have made a discovery, or if everybody knew it before me, I will tell it all the same. As soon as the cream shows signs of coming, pour into the churn two or three quarts of water—near ice-cold as it is possible to get it—and the butter will gather a great deal quicker and come hard and firm. I tried ice-water on the start, and found it made the cream too cold and kept the butter from coming; but put in at the last end it is a capital idea, and will save hours of churning in the season. Butter will come in fifteen or twenty minutes, as a rule, if the cream is the right kind and the temperature is a cool cellar is cool enough to start the churning, and as near right as the most farmers can get it without thermometers and ice, and cold well water will lower the temperature for gathering. The temperature of our cellar is 46 degrees, and the butter invariably comes quick, with the help of the cold water, which is probably two degrees colder. When the cream stands too long on the milk before skimming, the butter will not come so quickly, and it always occurs, and such butter will not keep well. This is one reason, and the main one, why there is so much rancid butter. Better churn oftener, and have good, sweet butter, and skim oftener also.—Rural New Yorker.

It is remarkable how people who are living in the country are last day to have visitors from the city come to them, so that they can show and wait on their guests in hot weather.

FASHION NOTES.

BROAD sashes for children.
BONNETS are growing in size.

LACE is worn very high in the neck.
PALE blue is a favorite evening color.
LAWNS of a pale green are fashionable.

MEXICAN filigree jewelry is the coming thing.
FANS of embroidered satin are shown for full dress.

THE last novelty in fringe is made of pack thread.
THE dressmakers say that alpaca will be much worn next fall.

SETS of three small brooches are worn with high dresses.

LINEN serge slippers are cool for home wear in warm weather.

COVER a Japanese fan with a piece of silk and it is quite "chick."

SILK gloves are taking the place of kid during the summer months.

NEW shawl cases for traveling are made of gossamer rubber cloth.

THE French ladies knot their hair very low and enclose it in nets.

TUXE waists have been super-seeded in Paris by the fan waist.

SILK nets are more popular than ever, especially for young ladies.

THE latest way of wearing an Indian shawl is to make it into a tunic.

HIGH colored stockings are the rage still, and especially for young ladies.

IT is difficult to tell the difference between some of the new styles of caps and babies' bonnets.

THICK sets of beads for ladies collars, that is the latest, but it looks too loud to be generally adopted.

THE wooden fans shaped like hand-screens and decorated with water-color painting are sold for $12.

IMITATION lisle-thread gloves, costing but ten cents per pair, are just as handsome as the real which cost ten times as much.

IN London, lately, many ladies carry baskets of flowers in the place of bouquets. They keep better and do not soil the gloves.

A PARIS idea is to wear flesh colored stockings under open-worked ones. Preposterous as this is, it is fashionable on the boulevards.

VELVET is more used for trimming now than at the beginning of the summer, but it is placed on cotton materials rather than woollens.

THE embroidered flowers that seem to rest so lightly on the top of some of the new sunshades are often wrought in worsted instead of silk.

Useful Hints.

Almost all fruit-stains can be removed by soaking and rubbing in sweet milk before washing.

An infusion of hay will keep the natural color in buff linens; an infusion of bran will do the same for brown linens.

For hoarseness, take a lemon and slice it into a tureen; add a couple or three tablespoonsful of loaf-sugar. Take a teaspoonful of the mixture every little while till the obstruction is moved.

French chalk is a specific for grease spots. It should be scraped on the grease-spot and left on until it absorbs the grease. Two or three applications are sometimes necessary for the purpose.

To clean black cashmere, place the dress in strong borax-water, made lukewarm; let remain in soak all night, then take out and hang on the line to drip, and when nearly dry, press. Do not rinse or wring.

When black or navy-blue linens are washed soap should not be used. Take instead, two potatoes grated into tepid soft water (after having them washed and peeled), into which a teaspoonful of ammonia has been put. Wash the linens in this and rinse them in cold blue water. They will need no starch and should be dried and ironed on the wrong side.

To make hard soap take 6 pounds of soda, 7 pounds grease, 3 pounds of unsalted lard and 4 gallons of water. Put soda, lime and water into a kettle and boil until dissolved; let it stand 2 days, pour off the liquid, throw away the dregs, add the grease to the liquid and boil until it is of the thickness of honey. Then turn out into a washbuck to harden, cut into whatever shape you like, dry and pack away for use. Any grease will answer if cleaned.

PAPER BRICKS.

A California correspondent writes: Paper bricks now being made in Wisconsin, strike us exactly what we want here. One of our paper-mills made a few, which need but a touch to bring conviction. It is a paper-mache compressed. San Francisco shanties will soon tumble to pieces. Yet brick is objectionable in this dense atmosphere. No country on earth has more or better fibrous materials. Aquatic rushes cover all our still waters, and one mill uses that material for its pulp. Then we have the paper cactus in vast forests, in the southeastern desert, which excels all others for bricks. Such houses would need no plaster, and they would be easily moved on wheels. The soles of all Chinese shoes are made of paper after this fashion. Their shoes have more soles than ours. They are made without elevated heels and so shaped other-wise that neither corns nor bunions can be generated.

SONG OF THE DRESS.
Ruffle and puff and scallop,
Scalloped and ruffled and puff,
Sash and slash and binding and bow,
Button and collar and cuff,
And I dare not rest my weary hand
Till Fashion shall say "enough!"

The May-flowers blossom upon my lawn
With beauty and grace and fragrance fragrant,
And ever on my book-shelves wags
The fairer flowers of thought.
But the skies may glow and the poetising,
And the world its measures tread;
I, day by day, find woman's way
Hemmed in with needle and thread.

Summer and winter, spring and fall,
Heedless of heat or cold,
Making our last year's dresses
Over in this year's style.
Baquet and jacket and blouse and train,
Serge and cambric and lawn;
Drapings, so mockingly graceful to see,
So homely hard to put on.

Under our feet, unnoticed,
We never can reach our faces creep;
O'er our poor, bewildered heads
Mazes of frizzy sweep—
Plaiting and stitching by leagues and miles
And ruffling billows deep—
Poor dupes of the restless goddess,
We never can reach our faces creep.

With needless neglect of costliest gems
Of body and soul and brain,
We madly follow the faithless Queen
Who leads us forth to be slain!
Till with garments fitted, Round and full and
And souls that are cramped and bare,
And faces scamed and ruffled and tucked
With Sisyphus-like despair,
We fall on the steps that can never be climbed Murdered with—"What to wear?"

Safety From Lightning.
It is never too soon, says a writer to go into the house when a storm is rising. When the clouds are fully charged with electricity they are most dangerous, and this fluid oozes out of the air, which acts at a great distance and in all directions. A woman told me of a bolt which came down her mother's chimney when the sun was shining overhead. N. P. Willis writes of a young girl killed while passing under a telegraph wire on the brow of a hill while she was hurrying home before a storm. People should not be foot-hurrying about sitting on the porch and by open windows whether the storm is hard or not. Mild showers often carry single charges which fall with deadly effect. It may or it may not be fatal to stay out; it is safe to be in the house with the windows and doors shut. The dry air in the house is a reader conductor of lightning than the damp air outside, and a draught of air invites it. A hot fire in a chimney attracts it, so to speak. People are very ignorant and reckless about lightning. I have seen a girl of eighteen crying with fear of lightning, and run every other minute to the window to see if the storm was not abating, unconscious that she was putting herself in danger. If every one would hurry to shelter as soon as a storm cloud is half way the sky, when certain that it is coming nearer, and would shut the doors and windows, and keep away from them afterward, and from bell-wires, stove pipes, chimneys, chimneys, heaters and mirrors, and their silver backs which carry electricity, and keep away from lightning rods and out of their vicinity, and from metal water spouts, they might dismiss the fear of lightning from their minds, so far as it is a thing of reason and not of impression.

Warm Weather.
The woman, who is her own servant, this warm weather, has a pretty hard time of it, and finds it nearly impossible to keep cool; but if she manages well her miseries can be lessened. Common sense, practical housekeepers are all agreed upon one plan of arrangement for the heated term. It is somewhat as follows, varying according to circumstances: The family will rise early and partake of breakfast while the doors and windows shall be wide open as breezy as possible. Meanwhile, the bedclothes can be placed in the sun to air. Thus, the beds could be made by eight o'clock, the rooms made tidy, the wash-pitchers filled, the windows and blinds closed, the parlors dusted and made dark, and the outside air shut out. As quickly as possible the dining-room should be dusted and closed up. The work should now be concentrated in the kitchen and cellar, while by carefully closing the intervening doors, the rooms may always be kept as delightful, where the weary and overheated man or child, may pass a few restful and cooling moments, while the dinner is being placed upon the table. After the sun has gone down, the house may be opened, and the cool evening air allowed to enter. Lamps should not be lighted unless the doorways and window openings are supplied with musquito nettings, as gnats and mosquitoes are troublesome inmates. The time is short between dusk and bed time, so that not much gain is made by sewing or reading by lamp light in the summer season. It is much better for the family to group together on the front stoop or in a cosy room, and enjoy together a merry chat.

Advice to Young Men.
Another thing, son, you want to remember that wearing twenty inches of coat propped out across sixteen inches of shoulder doesn't make a gymnast by any means, any more than a straight bat, a measured stop, and a burnish with a cord and a worn give a military record. There have been young men, aye, and old men too, before your time, who owed the tailor for their chest and shoulders, and owed for them a previous long time too. There have been young men who could waltz for an hour and sixty-eight minutes, without sitting down to rest, who couldn't saw enough wood to warm a flannel cake, if starvation stared them in the face and tried to drive them to do it. So don't worry about your shape, son. Men will admire your crooked legs if your trousers are paid for, and if your back is so lopsided that you have to keep your head hard-a-port all the time, to keep from walking around the block to starboard when you want to go straight ahead, you'll never think of it if you don't owe for the coat that lies in such ungainly honest wrinkles across it. The man who doesn't owe a dollar is a rich man, even if he hasn't a crust to eat in the house. And don't borrow. If you can't get along without having more than you have got, don't borrow—steal. You'll feel better about it, and as a general thing, you'll be more respected and less tormented.

The Champion Marksman.
[Camden, N. J., Democrat.]
They had been talking about the remarkable performances of Dr. Curver, the marksman who shoots with a rifle and breaks glass balls which are sent into the air as fast as a man can throw them. Presently Abner Byng, who was sitting by, said:
"That's nothing."
"What's nothing?"
"Why, that shooting. Did you ever know Tom Potter?"
"No."
"Well, Potter was the best hand with a rifle I ever saw; beat this man Curver all hollow. I'll tell you what I've seen this man Potter do. You know, maybe, along there in the cherry season, Mrs. Potter would want to preserve some cherries; so Tom would pick 'em for her, and how do you think he'd stone 'em?"
"I don't know. How?"
"Why, he'd fill his gun with bird shot and get a boy to drop a bushel of cherries at one time from the roof of the house. As they came down, he'd fire and take the stone clean out of every cherry in the lot. It's a positive fact. He might occasionally miss one, but not often. But he'd bigger shooting than that when he wanted to."
"What did he do?"
"Why, Jim Miller—did you know him? No? Well, Tom made a bet once with Jim that he could shoot the buttons off his own coat tail by aiming in the opposite direction, and Jim took him up.

"Did he do it?"
"Do! He fixed himself in position and aimed at a tree in front of him. The ball hit the tree, arched, hit the corner of a house, arched, struck a lamp-post, arched, and flew behind Tom and nipped the buttons off as slick as a whistle. You bet he did it."

"That was fine shooting."
"Yes, but I've seen Tom Potter beat it. I've seen him stand under a flock of wild pigeons—billions of them coming like the wind—and kill 'em as fast that the front of the flock never passed a given line, but turned over and fell down, so that it looked like a kind of brown and feathery Niagara. Tom did it by having twenty-three breech-loading rifles and a boy to load 'em. He always shot with that kind."

"You say you saw him do this sort of shooting?"
"Yes, sir; and better than that, too. Why, I tell you what I have seen Tom Potter do. I saw him once set up an India-rubber target at 300 feet and hit the bull's-eye twenty-seven times a minute with the same ball! He would hit the target, the ball would bounce back right into the rifle-barrel just as Tom had clapped in a fresh charge of powder, and so he kept her a-going backward and forward, until at last he happened to move the gun and the bullet missed the muzzle of the gun. It was the biggest thing I ever saw; the very biggest—except one."

"What was that?"
"Why, one day I was out with him when he was practicing and it came on to rain. Tom didn't want to get wet, and we had no umbrella; and what do you think he did?"
"What?"
"Now, what do you think that man did to keep dry?"
"I can't imagine."

"Well, sir, he got me to load his weapons for him, and I pledged my word, although it began to rain hard, he hit every drop that came down, so that the ground for about eight feet around us was as dry as punk. It was beautiful, sir, beautiful."

And then the company rose up slowly and passed out one by one, each man eyeing Abner and looking solemn as he went by; and when they had gone, Abner looked queerly for a moment, and said to me:
"Give me nothing I hate so much as a liar. Give me a man who is a friend of the solid truth and I'll tie to him."

Foolish.
To think the more a man eats the fatter and stronger he will become.
To believe the more hours that children study the faster they will learn.
To conclude that if exercise is good, the more violent it is, the more good is done.

To imagine that every hour taken from sleep is an hour gained.
To act on the presumption that the smallest room in the house is large enough to sleep in.

To argue that whatever remedy causes one to feel immediately better, is good for the system without regard to ulterior effects.

To eat without an appetite, or to continue to eat after it has been satisfied, merely to gratify the taste.

To eat a hearty supper for the pleasure experienced during the brief time it is passing down the throat, at the expense of the whole night of disturbed sleep, and a weary waking in the morning.

Do ladies use hair-powder when they blast their hair? and what kind of powder does a man use when he blasts his eyes?

ONE pailful of hot water will clear a corner of loafers quicker than four policemen, and the expense is nothing.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL,
Editor and Proprietor.

BURLINGTON, KY., AUGUST 14.

ABOUT 30,000 Democrats did not go to the polls and vote, Monday week.

THERE will be a good opening in Ohio again this fall for Covington detectives.

WITHIN the last nine months, Joe. Hermes, of Covington, has been defeated three times for public office.

ON the 8th inst., Jacob E. Harline was hung at San Antonio, Texas. He affirmed his innocence to the last.

THE steamer, Iron Valley, exploded her boilers on the upper Ohio, last Saturday. Three lives were lost, and several persons injured.

THE Louisville Board of Trade has designs on the cotton trade, and is calling attention to the natural facilities there for managing it.

ON the first Tuesday in next month Governor McCrory's term of office expires. It is said that he will resume the practice of law at once.

IN Indianapolis there are thirteen banks, and up to and including the 31st of July they had paid out to the farmers for grain $3,024,000.

THE Democratic majority in the next General Assembly of this State will be something over one hundred, enough for all practical purposes.

THE United States Assay Office, on the 8th inst., sent 334,000 ounces of silver from New York to New Orleans for coinage into standard silver dollars.

IN the Ohio Democracy could use the remainder of the Democratic majority that was not brought out in this State Monday week, Erving and Rice would be mighty safe.

IN Kenton a Democratic nomination is not equivalent to an election. The nominees are defeated in that county about as often as they are successful, and in the last election a little offener.

INDIANA is pulling up pretty well in her competitive examination with Kentucky. They manage to have at least one murder a day in the Hoosier State—Cincinnati Enquirer.

BOTH those States have long since been shut out by the Buckeye State.

TO encourage the planting of fruit and forest trees in Iowa, the law remits a percentage of taxes for five years on every acre of fruit, and ten years on every acre of forest trees planted.

THE leader of the expedition to explore the head of Lake Nyassa, in Africa, died on the 28th of June. The expedition under the leadership of Thomson, Johnson's scientific assistant, will be completed.

CAN Green's defeat for Representative in Kenton be construed as a rebuke to T. Jeff Phelps & Co. for the part they took in the primary election when Green defeated Uncle Milt? Some say it is.

SOME of the Canada banks got slightly shaky financially, last week, which created quite an excitement. Some of the institutions put up their shutters, but they claim that they will be able to meet all demands.

THE late rains extended over nearly the entire area of the State, and have greatly benefited the corn crop which was greatly in need of the rain, and which being delayed a few days would have produced all most a total failure in that particular cereal.

THE news from poor plague-stricken Memphis is of the gloomiest character. The fever has been declared an epidemic, and all the absentees advised to stay away from the city. The medical and charitable authorities are becoming alarmed at the situation.

ON the next pay day, the United States Treasurer will try the experiment of paying ten per cent. of the salaries to all the employees of the Government in the District in standard silver dollars. The monthly pay-roll in the District is about $1,000,000.

THE defeat of ex-Speaker Turner for Representative in Madison County, reduces the race for the Speakership of the next House of Representatives to Bush, of Lexington, McElroy, of Bowling Green, and Biggar, of Paducah. These are the strongest men.

THERE has been an unusual number of severe storms in this country this season, and an immense amount of property has been destroyed thereby. The lightning has also been uncommonly fatal, and many persons and considerable stock have been killed by it.

COL. E. POLK JOHNSON of the Louisville Post and News, has announced himself a candidate for the position of Assistant Clerk of the next House of Representatives. Mr. Johnson has acted in that capacity, and was an efficient officer. No doubt he will have an easy race.

BENNETT, the Deputy Marshal who shot and killed Press Webster in Williamson, Monday week, was acquitted by the examining court. Webster had few friends, and was feared by more than one of the Grant County people. Bennett, it is said, was, at one time, a resident of this place.

Most people will be glad to hear that Sitting Bull intends to remain on Canadian soil, and that, therefore, there is little danger of serious trouble with the Indians anywhere this season. This is the news telegraphed to the War Department by General Miles, who is in command of the troops that are watching this band of warriors.

WE often notice in our exchanges items credited to the Burlington Recorder. We have never been able to ascertain by whom the Record is published nor how long it has been afloat on the sea of journalism. We should like to be neighborly and exchange with the Record which our X's have discovered.

THE Atlanta Constitutionalist says Congressman Blackburn believes that the Democrats will carry Ohio. This is also our belief; but at the same time it is well to remember that Ohio is in full and undisputed possession of an axis of her own. We have had our confidence grossly abused by Ohio upon several occasions.

THE voting in Boone, as shown by the tabulated statement in another column, was very scattering, there being more or less scratching of the ticket in every district. At the Ballitsville voting place not a Republican vote was cast, while at other places the number ranged very low. In Florence the Greenback State ticket received sixteen votes, being the only place where the ticket was recognized.

IN the midst of the Republican boasting, and there is always boasting when Blaine has anything to do with a campaign, comes the admission of Congressman Fisher, acting Chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee, that Maine will probably not be carried by the Republicans. He says Sherman's speeches had a bad effect, and that the Democrats and the Greenbackers are making an effective campaign. This statement is corroborated by other advices from that State.

THE Evening Post has a private letter from a gentleman in Eastern Germany, who says there has been no summer, but rain nearly every day, the thermometer ranging from 69 to 75 degrees. It gives a deplorable account of crops. The writer says, considering the immense amount of grain and other food crops destroyed by inundations, last month, it looks as if America will be called upon to feed Germany as well England and France, next winter.

THE Auditor has issued a circular in which he gives notice that the State funds are exhausted, and that all claims against the State will be returned to the claimants unpaid. The depleted condition of the State Treasury is the result of the reduction, made in the taxes by the last Legislature. This reduction was not offset by a corresponding reduction in official salaries, which would have materially assisted in keeping the Treasury in funds. It is said that Auditor Smith strenuously opposed the reduction of taxes when the bill was before the Legislature, but all to no effect.

THE apathy so prevalent in the Democratic ranks in this State, is plainly manifested in the greatly reduced majority given the State ticket. The result of the election in this State, notwithstanding the minority party knew there was no possibility of electing its ticket, was eagerly watched by them, hoping the majority might be reduced. This they see done, not because the State is not so largely Democratic as it was four years since, but because of the confidence the party has in itself. The falling off in the majority of the State ticket is hailed with joy among the Republicans of Ohio, and will be paraded before the public on every occasion as an argument that Kentucky is falling from grace as a Democratic State.

THE reports received by the Department of Agriculture from the grain growing States of the West and Northwest represent the crop of cereals as being one of the largest and heaviest ever known, and particularly in Minnesota and Dakota, which are two of the best wheat producing sections in the country. In '88 the people of Minnesota were importing from the States below, breadstuffs for their consumption. Now, it is estimated upon reliable data, that the wheat crop of the present year will amount to forty million bushels. Oats, corn, clover and barley are also unprecedentedly large ones, that of the former averaging sixty bushels to the acre, and the latter thirty-five bushels.

IN a few days the 22d annual Fair of the North Kentucky Agricultural Society will commence and continue five days. Besides the usual list of premiums to be awarded during the exhibition, the directory has arranged for several liberal special premiums to be given. Among the awards of the first day is a special premium of $10 on butter; a special premium of $5 on flowers; a special premium of $5 on fruit cake, and a special premium of a barrel of flour on best loaf of wheat bread. These premiums are worth competing for, and, no doubt, will increase both the attendance and the display on Tuesday.

A handsome saddle and bridle are to be given as a premium for the fastest walking horse, the ring to be shown the second day. Walking is a gait greatly neglected in the training of young horses, as a general thing, and this is a good step in the direction of encouraging the owners of horses to give it more attention.

THE third day we have a premium of $10 for the slowest mule. This will be rather a novel show, but, no doubt, will be enjoyed by the spectators, and will vary the general run of the exhibition.

THE fourth day a $20-suit of clothes is to be given the shabbiest man. This ring will probably be well filled with competitors, and be the most laughable feature of the week's exhibition. Bodman's Arabian premium, $25, is also to be awarded on Friday.

ON the fifth and last day the grand amateur walking match, premium $25, closes the list of special awards. This is also a new feature, and likely to be indulged in purely for the novelty of the thing.

A special premium of a barrel of flour, on the best peak of Irish potatoes is advertised, and as potato culture is attracting considerable attention in this county at the present time, a fine and very large display is expected.

THE reader can see, by these special and extraordinary attractions, that the Directory has been industriously engaged in preparing and arranging the programme so as to give to each day a special attraction, as well as making it profitable for the exhibitor. The purpose of the Fair we deem a laudable one, and it appears to us it should receive the encouragement of the people of this part of the State, both by their presence and the exhibition of the fruits of their labor.

STATE NEWS.

—Cloud burst over Lexington, the other day, flooding the streets and doing considerable damage.

—Turner, one of the editors of the Richmond Herald, was defeated for the Legislature by a Republican.

—Major Stanton is writing a history of the life of Judge Elliott, including his murder and the Buford trial.

—An infant child of James Moor, of Carlisle, died last week. It was one month old and weighed a fraction over one pound.

—The pastures were so burnt up in Jessamine before the rains, that some of the farmers were cutting bushes for their cattle.

—Eda Mays was murdered in Elliott County by a notorious outlaw, William Roe, who is now a fugitive from justice.

—Times: Scott was one of the three counties that made a correct report, arranged in proper form, to the State Board of Health.

—Kentucky furnished 79,000 soldiers to the Union army during the late unpleasantness. Only ten States exceed this number.

—A. Wolfe purchased in Pulaski, of Andy Jasper, a couple of fat cattle that weighed 3,825 pounds, the best ever produced in the county.

—Austin Cornelius, of Logan County, had a rick of wheat set on fire by lightning and consumed. Two sheep were killed by the same flash.

—Several ladies in the different parts of the State have signified their intentions of running for State Librarian before the next Legislature.

—A Mrs. Franks was killed by lightning in Grant County, last week. She was out riding when struck. Her horse was killed and the saddle burnt to a crisp.

—Hopkinsville was the scene, the other night, of a bloody tragedy. The shooting occurred about eleven o'clock at night, and one man was killed and the other wounded.

—Fifteen feet below the ground a three-foot-thick wall has been discovered in Grant County, last week. It is a masonry wall, and is supposed to be the remains of a prehistoric city.

—Alexandria, for the first time in a long while, is to the front with a sensation. One of her good citizens of the male persuasion has left for unknown parts, taking with him a young lady of good reputation and family.

—Trindle News: Trindle has better morals, better bred, more pretty girls, and is more solidly Democratic than any other county in the State.

At the last election she cast 1,357 Democratic, 78 Republican, and 39 Greenback votes.

—Mayfield Monitor: One man in Crittenden County claims to have corn thirty-five feet high; another, pumpkin vines forty feet long, and still another, corn with six matured years to the stalk. For tall lying, the farmers of Crittenden County are entitled to stand in the front rank.

—Bowling Green Pantagraph: In Todd County the race for the Legislature is very close between a Democrat and a colored Republican. One report says the colored man is elected by eleven votes, and another report says the Democratic nominee carried the county by some thirty odd.

—Shelly Sentinel: A great many farmers in this county are raising flax seed, and those who have tried it for a few years, seem to think that it pays about as well, if not better, than wheat or corn crop. The seed always sells readily at a fair price, and producers ain't bothered much about running about and hunting buyers. The crop this year has been very good.

—Frankfort Yeoman: The farmers are agitated over the decline in wheat. The truth is the crop is so much larger than was anticipated, most of the markets are overstocked. The railroads have been forced to advance rates, on account of the demand for transportation. They have had no little difficulty in furnishing cars to haul out the heavy accumulation of wheat at all the depots.

—Lebanon Standard, 6th: A private dispatch received here last night contained the painful intelligence that the wife of James M. Ballard, Sheriff of this county, was dreadfully burned yesterday afternoon. Mr. Ballard's house, near Loretto, took fire, but the fire was extinguished. While Mrs. Ballard was engaged removing some articles from a press, a powder-horn exploded and set fire to her clothing.

—Somerset Reporter: Fourteen years ago, a negro boy was murdered at Hustonville for killing a dog that belonged to a man named W. H. Bell. Nothing was done about it till Friday, when a warrant of arrest was served on Bell, and he will be tried for the alleged crime next week. Bell denies the charge. The body of the boy has never been found. The case creates great surprise, as Bell is well connected and regarded as a peaceful man.

—Near Jacksonville, in Bourbon County, Jacob Sidenier fired five shots at some men in his father's corn-field, without effect, as he thought at the time. A few days afterwards, a negro was brought to Ruckerville, a negro suburb, badly wounded by a pistol ball, for which he refused to account. He was known to be in the vicinity of Jacksonville on Sunday, and it is the supposition that one of Sidenier's bullets found a lodging place in his hide.

THE INSTITUTE.

The Boone County Teachers' Institute convened in Morgan Academy Tuesday at 10:30 a. m. The meeting was called to order by the Commissioner, L. C. Yager, who made a short speech in which he explained to the teachers the cause of their money not being forthcoming.

The enrollment of teachers was next in order, and showed that the following teachers were in attendance: Will Conner, Mrs. Emma Conner, J. M. Stowell, R. M. Howard, Wood Sullivan, A. A. Maxwell, T. Z. Roberts, R. W. Kirby, Wm. Seligson, L. C. Yager, Jr., J. Q. Blanton, Miss Mildred Perkins, Miss Katie Davis, Miss M. A. Thompson, Miss Annie Poulk, Miss E. Jeffries, Miss Ella Soderberg, Miss Kate Craig, Miss M. A. Rouse and Miss Kate Tupperman.

J. M. Stowell delivered the opening address, which was quite lengthy.

The roll called was more interesting than that of the morning, and the attendance much larger. The most interesting feature of the day's proceedings was a spirited discussion between Mr. W. Conner and J. M. Stowell, and which was brought out by the query, "Has the State any right to take property for school purposes?" Stowell affirmed and Conner denied.

The roll showed the names of the following teachers who had arrived since the morning enrollment: W. E. Clutterbuck, D. E. Platt, J. C. Sobers, W. T. Stott, C. T. Platt and Miss Lottie Burnett.

PERSONAL MENTION.

MISS JULIA STEPHENSON, of Canton, Kentucky, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Tansy, of this place.

LAST week, Joseph Johnson, of Holden, Johnson County, Mo., was visiting his grandmother, Mrs. John P. Scott, of this place.

MR. OWEN PERKINS, of Rabbit Hash, and his sister, Miss Miller, of Rising Sun, Ind., were visiting friends in Burlington, Sunday. Miss Miller remained to attend the Institute this week.

JOHN KISER, a native of Boone but now a resident in Indiana, was in town Monday. He had found out he could no longer live happily without having the Recorder as a weekly visitor.

MR. CHAS. SCHRAMM, one of Petersburg's happy hunters, called to see us the other day. He had just been installed by Mr. J. H. Dilla as Deputy County Clerk, and will officiate in the Petersburg county.

"Time proves all things." A pretty good witness, that Mr. Time.

WE had almost been persuaded to take our stove down, but the mercury took a tumble and we concluded to let it be.

THE tramp who occupies the lower berth in a fence corner, such nights as we had the latter part of last week, could realize the truthfulness of the saying, there's no place like home.

A dispute, which has been in progress for a time to which the mind of man is not wonted to the contrary, is going on with the same vim, one disputant asserting that "Katy didn't" and the other equally as positive that "Katy didn't." Now Katy knows whether or not she did, and if she did she should come forward and acknowledge the same, and if she didn't let her say so, that the future generations may have a rest.

KENTUCKY DEAD BROKE.

STATE OF KENTUCKY.
OFFICE OF AUDITOR OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.
F. A. BROWN, Aug. 8, 1879.

DEAR SIR: In consequence of the depletion of the treasury, occasioned by a reduction of 25 per cent. of the taxes imposed on the taxable property of the State, the shrinkage in the revenue, the reduction of tax on railroads, the failure of sheriffs and other collecting officers to pay the public dues into the Treasury, and the continued increase of the expenses of the State, I am compelled to issue auditing claims for the present by J. H. Dilla as Deputy County Clerk, and will officiate in the Petersburg county.

A growing home in that of Mr. Bon Stander, tobaccoist. He now gives employment to five hands, who are constantly at work in the manufacture of cigars, which he sold almost entirely to the trade here in Franklin. By working good stock, employing good workmen and by persistent advertising, Mr. S. has built a trade here that now begins to promise him a remunerative return. Such industry and energy as he has exhibited will, rightly directed, bring its reward. He has tried his cigars, and can recommend them to the public as an excellent article.—Franklin (Ind.) Democrat.

We, as Mr. Stander's hosts of friends in this county, are glad to learn he is meeting with success in his business, and hope his shadow may never grow less.

SUFFER no longer, but avail yourself of the services of Dr. J. H. Buckeye, of Elm Ointment, an effective cure for piles or hemorrhoids. Price 50 cents a bottle. For sale by A. W. Smith, Burlington. Wholesale by J. S. Birdan, Cincinnati.

"DOUGLAS" condition does not improve, if there is any change in it, it is for the worse, and just before closing our columns, we learn that Dr. Smith has decided to perform a surgical operation on him by introducing an aspirator into the diseased lung for the purpose of removing the fluid which has accumulated there. If this fails to accomplish the purpose, it is proposed to take out a portion of the rib in order to remove the unnatural accumulation about the diseased organ.

THIS picnic at Woodside Park, last Saturday afternoon and evening, was a success in every particular, and reflected great credit upon those who had the management of the affair. The attendance was large, and composed of many of the fair daughters and gallant sons of both Boone and Kenton counties. Required bedding is entitled to especial mention for the manner in which they received the picnic.

SOME who are well versed in potato culture say the dry weather material has injured the crop, which will fall considerably short of what was anticipated earlier in the season. There is one consolation, however; the short or the crop the larger the price.

AUCTION EXTRAORDINARY.

I dreamed a dream in the midst of my slumbers,
And as fast as I dreamed it, it came into my thoughts ran along in such beautiful metre,
You saw I never saw a pretty sweeter;
It seemed that a slave had been recently made,
That a tax on old bachelors' heads should be laid;
And in order to make them all willing to marry,
The tax was as large as a man could well bear;
The bachelors grumbled and said it was no use;
'Twas horrid injustice and horrid abuse,
And declared that to save their own hearts'
blood from spilling,
Of such a vile tax they would not pay a shilling,
But the rulers determined them still to pursue,
So they set all the old bachelors up at vendue;
A cry went forth through the town and to free,
To rattle his bell and his trumpet to blow,
And to call out to all that he might meet in the way,
"Ho! forty old bachelors sold here to-day,"
And presently all the old units in the town,
Each in her very best bonnet and gown,
From thirty to sixty, fair-planned and pale,
Of every description, all decked to the male,
The auctioneer then in his labors began,
And called out aloud, as he held up a man,
"How much for a bachelor? who wants to buy?"
In a twinkling every maiden responded "I do,"
In short, at a highly extravagant price,
The bachelors were all sold at a price;
And forty old maidens, some younger and some older,
Each hugged an old bachelor home on her shoulder.

Lightning Calculators.

There recently died in England, at the age of seventy-two, a man of prodigious arithmetical powers, whose mental faculties afforded material for profound research of psychologists.
His name was George Bidder, and various are the anecdotes of his wonderful powers of calculation and memory.
A person could read to Bidder two series of fifteen figures each, and without seeing or writing down, a single figure he would multiply one by the other without an error. Once before a Parliamentary Committee, an opposing counsel said: "You may as well profess to tell us how many gallons of water flow from Westminster bridge every hour." "I can tell you that, too," was the reply, and he gave the number instantly. The whole family possessed the same or similar powers. The eldest son could also multiply fifteen figures by fifteen figures without seeing them with a process of his own. Hutcheson, Barnum's lightning calculator, bore no comparison to Bidder. His greatest feat of calculating was multiplying five figures by five figures in one line, using a slate or a blackboard, and, of course, seeing the figures.

To the Girls.

Never marry a man who has only his love for you to recommend him. If he is not otherwise what he should be, you will never be happy. The most perfect man who did not love you should never be your husband. But, though marriage without love is terrible, love alone will not do. If the man is dishonorable to other men, or mean, or given to any vice; the time will come when you will loath him or sink to his level. It is hard to remember, amid kisses and praises, that there is anything else in the world to be done or thought of but love-making; but the days of love are many, and the husband must be a guide to be trusted—a companion, a friend, as well as a lover. Many a girl has married a man whom she knew to be anything but good "because he loved her so." And the flame has died out on the heart-stone of home before long; and besides, she has been sitting with one that she could never hope would lead her heavenward—or who, if he followed him as a wife should, would guide her steps from heaven to perdition.
Marriage is a solemn thing—a choice of life; be careful in the choosing.

Ye men, when you see anything you want, look for it like a man. If you want to borrow five dollars of a man or if you only want to marry his daughter, don't slide up to him and hang on to your hat and talk politics and religion and weather, and tell him old style jokes whereof you can't remember the point, until you worry the old man in to a nervous irritation. Go at him with a full head of steam on, and your bow parts open, like an iron-clad pulling for a shore battery. Soon and paw and shake your head if you feel like it, no matter if it does make him look astonished. Better astonish him than bore him. Go into his heart or his pocket book, or both, it amounts to the same thing, like a brindle bull with a curl in his forehead charging a red negro dress, eyes on fire, tail up and the dust a flying. Then you'll fetch him.
Or possibly he may fetch you. But never mind: you will accomplish something and show that you ain't afraid to speak what is on your mind. And that's a great deal more than you'd accomplish by the other method. You needn't be cheeky, but you ought to be straightforward.—Hawkeye.

Nothing surprises a young man
more, says the New Orleans Picayune, than the shape of his head as he sees it for the first time after his hair has been cropped close. His ears appear to be out of place, and there is a general connecting-link look about him that he did not expect.

Small Favors.

One has only to die to be praised.
Handsome apples are sometimes sour.
It is easier to blame than to do better.

It is not enough to arm; you must hit.
Better go supperless to bed than run
in debt.
There is no good in preaching to the hungry.
Would you be strong, then conquer yourself.

To charge and to do better are two different things.
Better free in a foreign country than a slave at home.
Charity gives itself rich, but covetousness hoards itself poor.

Everybody knows good counsel except him that has need of it.

Money can make a man notorious,
but can not make him respectable; but one-half the people do not know the difference.

The devil ought to have his due. He is a good paymaster. He never forgets a debt, and never pays in money which is at a discount.

There are people with whom penitence stands for repentance—people with whom weeping mourning dispenses with feeling sorrow.

Truth is a naked and open daylight, that doth not show the masks and mummeries of the world half so stately and daintily as candle-light.

"A man," said the fathers, "should day is, he should always be prepared."

He who wants but little has always enough.

Keep your mouth shut and your eyes open.

If a dunce is short of some faults, he only does not acquire them.

Surely half the world must be blind;
they can see nothing unless it glitters.

Virtue pardons the wicked, as the sandal tree perfumes the ax that strikes
it.

Heavy's gates are wide enough to admit every sinner in the universe who is penitent.

One life; a little gleam of time between two eternities; no second chance for us forevermore.

The passion of acquiring riches in order to support a vain expense corrupts the purest souls.

Calumny and detraction are but sparks which, if you do not blow them, will go out of themselves.

The wealthy miser lives a poor man here, but he must get account as a rich man on the day of judgment.

Never tell a man that he is a fool; in the first place he will not believe you;
and in the second place you may make him your enemy.

To think kindly of each other is good; to speak kindly of each other is better; but to act kindly one toward another is best of all.

Maxims.

Attend carefully to the details of your business.

Be courteous to all.

Consider well, and then always decide positively.

Dare to do right. Fear to do wrong.
Endure trials patiently.

Fight life's battle bravely, manfully.
Hold not in vicious society.

Hold integrity sacred.

Injure not another's reputation or business.

Join hands only with the virtuous.
Keep your mind from evil thoughts.
Lie not for any consideration.
Make few acquaintances.

Never try to appear what you are not.

Let Girls be Girls.

One of the crying evils of the times is the tendency and disposition of girls to get through girlhood hurriedly and get into womanhood, or rather into young ladyhood, without waiting to enjoy the beautiful season of girlhood.
Speaking on this point, Bishop Morris, says: "Wait patiently, my dear children, through the whole period of your girlhood. Go not after womanhood; let it come to you. Keep out of public view. Cultivate retirement and modesty. The cares and responsibilities of life will come soon enough.
When they come you will meet them,
I trust, as women should. But on! be not so unwise as to throw away your girlhood. But not to yourselves of this beautiful season, which wisely spent will brighten all your future life."

THE EDITOR.

The editor who will to please,
Must humbly get upon his knees
And kiss the hand that smites him;
Or, if he dares attempt to walk,
Must to the mark that others chalk,
And cringe to all that meet him.

Says one, your subjects are too grave—
Too much morality you have—
Too much about religion;
Give me some witch and wizard tales,
Of slipshod ghosts with fins and scales,
Or feathers like a pigeon.

I love to read, another cries,
Those monstrous fashionable lies—
In other words, those novels.
Composed of klang and queens and lords,
Of border wars, and Gothic hordes
That used to live in hovels.

No, not cries one, we've had enough
Of such confounded love-sick stuff
To create the fair creation;
Give us some recent foreign news,
Of Russians, Turks, Greeks and Jews,
Or any other nation.

The man of dull, scholastic lore
Would like to see a little more
In scraps of Greek or Latin;
The merchants rather have the price
Of Southern indigo and rice,
Or India silks and satin.

Another cries, I want more fun,
A witty anecdote or pun,
A rebuff or a riddle.
Some long for missionary news;
And those of worldly, carnal views
Would rather hear a fiddle.

The critic, too, of classic skill,
Must dip in gall his glib quill
In scraps of Greek or Latin;
Of all the literary fools
Bred in our colleges and schools,
He cuts the silliest caper.

Another cries, I want to see
A jumbled up and sundry dish
Of politics to suit them;
But here we rest at perfect ease,
For should they swear the moon was cheese
We never should dispute them.

Some signify a secret wish
For now and then a literary dish
Of politics to suit them;
But here we rest at perfect ease,
For should they swear the moon was cheese
We never should dispute them.

Or grave or hum'rous, wild or tame,
Lofly or low, 'tis all the same,
Too haughty or too humble;
And every editorial right,
Has naught to do but what is right,
And let the grumblers grumble.

A Reminiscence of the War.
It is well known that some Judges in Missouri were very reluctant to enforce the law against ministers of the Gospel for exercising their profession without having taken the test oath, and availed themselves of every pretense to discharge those who were accused. We tell the following tale, says an exchange, as it was told to us, vouching for nothing:

Four ministers, charged with the crime of preaching "the glorious Gospel of the Son of God" were arraigned before a Judge. They were regularly indicted, and it was understood that the proof against them was very clear.

"Are you a preacher?" said the Judge to one of them.
"Yes, sir," replied the culprit.
"To what denomination do you belong, sir?"

"I am a Christian, sir." (With dignity.)
"A Christian! What do you mean by that? Are not all preachers Christians?"

"I belong to a sect commonly called, but wrongly called, Campbellites." (With much dignity.)

"Ah! Then you are in favor of baptizing people that they may be born again, are you?"

"I am, sir."
"Mr. Sheriff, discharge that man!
He is an innocent man. He is indicted for preaching the Gospel, and there is no Gospel in the stuff he preaches!
It's all some of Alexander Campbell's nonsense. Discharge that man."

Exit Campbellite, greatly rejoicing.
"Are you a preacher?" said his Honor, addressing the next criminal.

"I am, sir," said the miscreant.
"Of what denomination are you?"
"I am a Methodist, sir." (His looks showed.)

"Do you believe in falling from grace?"

"I do, sir." (Without hesitation.)
"Do you believe in sprinkling people, instead of baptizing them?"

"I believe that you can be baptized by sprinkling." (Offended.)
"Do you believe in baptizing babes?"

"It is my opinion, sir, that infants ought to be baptized." (Much offended.)

"Not a word of Scripture for anything of the kind!" shouted the Judge.
"Mr. Sheriff, turn that man loose. He is no preacher of the Gospel! The Gospel is the truth, and there is not a word of truth in what the man teaches.
Turn him loose! It is ridiculous to indict men on such frivolous pretenses.
Turn him loose!"

Methodist disappears, not at all hurt in his feelings by the judicial abuse he had received.

"What is your faith?" demanded his Honor of the next man.

"I am a Calvinist preacher," he responded.

"You are a blue-stocking Presbyterian, then," said his honor.
"Yes, sir," replied the accused.
(Solemnly.)

"You believe that God foreordained the salvation of some and the damna-tion of others, then, do you?"
"Yes, sir." (Plaintively.)

"You believe infants are in hell, do you?"
"Yes, sir." (With tears in his eyes.)

"Send that man out of here, Mr.
Sheriff," said the Judge. "He is too stupid for prosecution. That doctrine is a relic of heathenism. There is neither truth nor sense in it."

Exit Presbyterian, somewhat surprised.
"What are you, sir?" demanded the Judge of the fourth felon.

"Some people call me a preacher, sir." (Meekly.)
"What is your denomination?"

"I am a Baptist, sir." (Head up.) His Honor's countenance fell, and he looked sober and sad. After a pause he said, "Do you believe in salvation by grace, sir?"

"Yes, sir." (Firmly.)
"Do you teach that immersion only is baptism?"

"That is my doctrine." (Earnestly.)
"And you baptize none but those who believe in Jesus Christ?"

"That is my faith and practice." (With emphasis.)
"My friend, I fear it will go hard with you. I see you are indicted for preaching the Gospel, and it appears to me by your confession you're guilty." (Baptist looked pretty blue.)

"May it please your Honor," said the Baptist's counsel, springing to his feet, "that man has never preached the Gospel. I have heard him say a hundred times that he only tried. I have heard him try myself!"

"Mr. Sheriff, discharge that man.
He's not indicted for trying. There's nothing said about the mere effort.
Let him go, sir! Turn him loose!
Send him about his business. I am astonished that the State's Attorney should annoy the Court with frivolous indictments."

Exit Baptist, determined to "try again." Court adjourned.

"God save the state of this honorable court!" exclaimed the Sheriff.
"Amen!" said the four preachers.

And, after all, say we, as ridiculous
as the story may seem, it has a moral.
If the State has a right to prohibit the preaching of the Gospel, it has a right to decide what the Gospel is; and when that is done we have a national church, and the adulterous connection between church and State becomes complete.

[Lamar, Iowa, Sentinel.]

While the admirable idiocy that prevailed in Congress during the reconstruction days was at its height the nigger was enfranchised.

He was invested with the ballot on the petty theory that he was a man and a brother, with an infusion of sand in his make-up.

It was given him on the school-gir-lism notion that an affection for the party that gave him his freedom would make him its perpetual instrument.

But the nigger is less servicable to the Republican party as a voter than he was as a slave.

He needs too much coddling—too much protection.

He can only vote the Republican ticket when surrounded by a cordon of Republican bayonets.

There is no grit in him.
There is more voting energy and party strength in a dozen raw Irishmen than in a thousand well-fed niggers.

There is not an ounce of stalwartism in a ton of nigger.

The more nigger the less strength.
As a slave, the picturesque misery of the nigger was an unfeeling armory of party weapons; as a freeman there is no romance in him—cowardice is not romantic.

He is too cowardly to vote his convictions, or too stupid to have convictions, or too stupid to have convictions, or too stupid to have convictions.

When the stalwarts get into power in 1880 he must be disfranchised, or compelled to vote right.

The free nigger is a fraud.

Snug was really charming, and seemed to enjoy very much the toast until her peevish streak struck a couple of shots; then her countenance changed, her expression became wrathful, and she said, "It is too mean to leave those nasty shots in the birds." "Why," remarked he, "they are good for the digestion." "Yes," said she, "that may be; but I don't want to die just in that way."

The annual report from the Bureau of Statistics, just issued, shows that the exportation of breadstuffs, for the first time in the history of the country, exceeded that of cotton and tobacco. So King Cotton is dethroned, and King
Corn must hereafter be supreme ruler.

"Selling the Bride."

[Detroit Free Press.]

There was a marriage at the upper end of the Detroit, Lansing and Northern road the other day. A great big chap, almost able to throw a car-load of lumber off the track, fell in love with a widow who was cooking for the hands in the saw-mill, and after a week's acquaintance they were married. The boys around the mill lent William three calico shirts, a dress-coat and a pair of white pants, and chipped in a purse of about $20, and the couple started for Detroit on a bridal tour within an hour after being married.

"This ere lady," explained William as the conductor came along for tickets, "saw my bride. Just spiced fifty-six minits ago. Cost $2, but durn the cost! She's a lily of the valley, Mary is, and I'm the right-bower in a new pack of keards. Conductor, salute the bride!"

The conductor hesitated. The widow had freckles and a turn-up nose, and kissing the bride was no gratification.

"Conductor, salute the bride or look out for tornados!" continued William as he rose up and shed his coat.

The conductor saluted. It was the best thing he could do just then. "I never did try to put on style before," muttered William, "but I'm bound to see this thing through if I have to fight all Michigan. These ere passengers has got to come up to the chalk, they has."

The car was full. William walked down the aisle, waved his hand to command attention, and said:

"I've just been married, over thar" sots the bride. "Anybody who wants to salute the bride kin now do so.
Anybody who don't want to, will have cause to believe that a tree fell on him!"

One by one the men walked up and kissed the widow, until one was left.
He was asleep. William reached over and lifted him into a sitting position at one movement and commanded:

"Ar' ye goin' to dust over thar an'
kiss the bride?"

"Blas' your bride, and you, too!"
growled the passenger.

William drew him over the back of the seat, laid him down in the aisle, tied his legs in a knot and was making a bundle of him just of a size to go through the window, when the man caved and went over and as-luted.

"Now, then," said William, as he put on his coat, "this bride tower will be resumed as usual, and if Mary and me squeeze hands or get to laying heads on each other's shoulders I shall demand to know who laffed about it, and I'll make him e-magine that I'm a hull-boom full of the biggest kind of sawlogs, an' more comin' down on the rise. Now, Mary, hitch along an' let me git my arm around ye!"

It is claimed that Robert Bonner's famous horse, Edwin Forrest, trotted a mile, on the 9th inst., in 2:11. This is the fastest time ever made, but as it was in private it will not go on record.

THE Democratic majority in this State at the last election is larger than it was when either Leslie or McCrary was elected. The Democratic party was not as fearfully "off" as at first anticipated.

THE yellow fever continues to claim its victims in Memphis. The disease is as stubborn as was that of last fall. The resident physicians have not deserted the city, and are rendering all the assistance in their power.

At Delphos, Ohio, the other day, a maid of eighteen summers severely cowed an impertinent hotel runner. The performance took place at the depot, and was witnessed by an immense crowd that enjoyed the scene.

It takes a man well posted in arithmetic to estimate the number of applicants for the position made vacant by the death of Judge Bland Ballard. President Hayes will be completely submerged with petitions soliciting the appointment.

The biennial message of the Yeoman has been proclaimed. It is in substance that the next General Assembly will probably be composed of the best talent that the Commonwealth affords, or, in other words, the best Legislature Kentucky ever had.

The Crittenden Press thinks the defeat of the Greenback candidate for State Senator in that district was so overwhelming that that party will never again venture to nominate a candidate in Crittenden County. It says a defeat by 1,200 majority sends consternation to their hearts.

THE records, or at least a portion of the records, of the Rowan County Court have been stolen, and, strange to say, it is that portion which contained orders that are of much importance in the Green-Hargis suit; but fortunately the record had been photographed before it was purloined.

The late Congressional Investigation Committee in Cincinnati is said to have been the most economical investigation that has left Washington for a number of years. The total expenses will hardly reach $3,000. It will be remembered that Hon. John G. Carlisle is Chairman of that Committee.

At Independence, last week, the Circuit Court decided that no action can be maintained on the supersedeas bonds in the bounty fund case taken thither, and accordingly dismissed the petition. The plaintiffs prayed an appeal which was granted, and it is supposed that the case will go to the Court of Appeals.

THE Cynthia News says the proposition to encourage our Legislature to call a Constitutional Convention non est volens is revolutionary, and should not be countenanced under any circumstances. Let us stand by the organic law of the State. The Judiciary has already set it aside to such an extent that the people are more or less demoralized.

THE Trimble News says the people of that county will regret to hear that O. P. Hogan was defeated in Grant County for Representative. Are not the News and the people of its county conscious of the fact that Mr. Hogan was opposing the Democratic nominee in Grant County? If we remember correctly, it has been but a few days since the News was boasting of Trimble's Democratic solidity.

EACH Legislative District in the State is entitled, by law, to send three students to the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Lexington, free of charge. The County Judge has received a circular from that institution, requesting him to give the matter attention and have this county represented as two or three young men in Boone, who would like to take advantage of this opportunity to attend a good school free, and if such there are they should put themselves in communication with the County Judge at once, and learn all the particulars relating to said school.

ON the 15th, Quebec witnessed one of those bloody riots, which, of late years has been so common in that city. About a week previous to the date of the trouble, the French section of the Quebec Ship Laborers Benevolent Society dissented from the body, and adopted a new tariff of wages, etc. This resulted in a feud between the French section, which numbers near 3,000, and the Irish, who are about two-thirds as strong. On the day of the riot, about 1,800 of the French were on parade, when the Irish arrayed themselves in hostile opposition, which resulted in a collision which was not suppressed before several lives were lost.

A LONDON dispatch to the Cincinnati Enquirer, dated the 15th, says: "The death of Mrs. Sartoris, nee Nellie Grant, which occurred to-day, is deeply deplored on all sides. In her quiet life and devotion to her new home she had made many very warm friends, and she was especially admired for the absence of all attempts to take any advantage in society of her birth as the daughter of a great American General, twice President of the United States. Her husband was much liked among the county gentlemen of his neighborhood, and his relationship to the Kemble family still connected him indirectly with the world of art. The sympathy felt for his loss is therefore universal, arising as it does from so many different causes. The telegraph has been set in motion to communicate with General Grant, and the final place of interment will not be decided till his wishes are known."

MR. CONKLING, New York's windy United States Senator, has got himself into a scandal that is creating considerable material for gossip. The parties to the scandal are the aforesaid Conkling, ex-Senator Sprague and his wife, of Rhode Island, a German music teacher and a double-barreled shotgun. Sprague thinks Conkling has been too intimate with his wife, and when he returned home one day last week and found him at his house, he became almost frantic with rage, and gave Lord Roscoe but five minutes in which to leave the premises. Conkling left without any persuasion. Mr. Sprague never entertained any great affection for the German music teacher whom his wife had employed to instruct their children and he also gave him a blowing up the same day. Of course the statements of all parties—except the shotgun—have been made public, and as is always the case, each makes out a clear case of not guilty of the charges preferred.

THE result of the vote on the proposition to call a convention to amend the Constitution of this State, demonstrates the impossibility of ever revising the Constitution. As that instrument now stands, the hands of those who desire to have the fundamental law of the State in keeping with the age in which we live, are effectually tied. The plan of counting every vote in the State not recorded in favor of the proposition as against it is grossly wrong. Why should a man who does not take enough interest in a measure to go to the polls and vote thereon be counted as against the measure? Is not the affirmative as much entitled to his vote as the negative? No man's vote should be counted in determining any proposition unless it is recorded either for or against it. This great wrong is sanctioned by the constitution, and it now appears that it will continue for an indefinite period. If the Constitution is ever revised, it should be done by a strict adherence to the provisions of the present constitution, and the lesson will be one by which the people will profit.

FROM the Daily Commonwealth we take the following interesting figures in regard to the Greenback vote in this State at the late election: "The returns in the recent election in Kentucky afford food for reflection, so to speak, and especially in connection with the Greenback vote. The largest Greenback vote in any one county is in Jefferson—1,156; Democratic loss, (compared with the vote for Governor in 1875), 2,966; Republican loss, 3,281. Hardin County, Greenback vote, 638; Democratic loss, 396; Republican loss, 530. Carter County, Greenback vote, 878—nearly equal to the Democratic and Republican vote combined; Democratic loss, 370; Republican loss, 450. Graves County, Greenback vote, 490; Democratic loss, 326; Republican gain, 57. These figures would indicate that the Greenback vote was taken about equally from the two old parties. The largest Republican gain in any county as yet reported is in Pendleton—435. The largest Democratic gain is in Grant—879. The heaviest loss for both Democrats and Republicans is in Jefferson, as noted above. The Greenback vote in the State will foot up not far from 20,000."

STATE NEWS.

—Every house in Olivet, says the Tribune, is occupied and renting at one-third of its real value every year.

—Shelby Sentinel: The hard rain Tuesday afternoon revived everything wonderfully, and proved the salvation of the corn crop.

—Crittenden Press: The delinquent tax lists for '78, '74, '75 and '76 were sold Monday. About $3,500 brought something over $300.

—Henry Local: There is a little negro girl, named Winnie, in the Frankfort precinct that weighs 520 pounds; her husband weighs about 115 pounds.

—Falmouth Independent: During the storm last week lightning struck Renner's threshing, while threshing, melting some of the castings. No one hurt, though several were badly scared.

—Breckinridge News: The best reports we can get from all parts of the county point to about one-third of a tobacco crop. The intolerable heat and drought have literally cooked and starved it to death.

—Greene Independent: Friend Hibbard Wilson reports the wedding of Martin Smith to Mary Ann May all the way from Pike, each of them aged 80 years. This is a fine invigorating record even for the Big Sandy.

—The Norton Iron Works, in Boyd County, is now running full time in all its departments. The furnace is making about fifty tons of good iron every day. The nail factory is turning out from 800 to 850 kegs of nails per day, about 5,000 per week.

—The Greene Independent says that on election day in one of the upper counties, a hardy Granger, after having voted his ticket straight, when asked if he would also vote for the Constitutional Convention, wanted first to know whether that fellow was a Democrat or not.

—An Elliott County correspondent to Greene Independent says: "Surely wholesale lying hanging is needed in our county to purify it from the murderers who are apparently unmolested by those in whose hands has been given the execution of our laws. A vigilance committee is needed here badly."

A CARD.

To the Editor of the Recorder: At the close of the case of the Commonwealth vs. Erasmus Rice, on a charge of battery, I allowed R. C. Green a fee of $80 for his services in the case, to be taxed as costs and paid by the defendant Rice. Some of my friends are of the opinion that this fee allowed the County Attorney is too much for the services rendered, and that the county will have it to pay. In the first place, I wish to say that on the arrest of Rice he was brought before me and gave bond for his appearance, etc., in the sum of $1,250. The County Attorney took charge of the case and prosecuted it diligently to a successful termination against a defendant who experienced several attorneys present, and among them the opinion of Maj. Jeff, who

I supposed was defendant's leading counsel, and he put the fee at $100; and that appeared to be about the opinion generally of the lawyers present, but I chose to reduce the amount to $80, nor do I think that too much. The Legislature has fixed Commonwealth and County Attorney fees on forfeited bonds generally at 50 per cent. of the bond. In this case a forfeiture would have entitled the County Attorney to 15 per cent. of the bond ($1,250), just $187.50, and then he would have had far less to do than he actually did in the case. The allowance is not too much, when tested by the standard fixed by the Legislature or by the judgment of persons experienced in such cases; in fact, it is far below the usual rates charged. As to the county's paying the fee, the county has nothing to do with it; it is to be paid by the defendant Rice or his surety. I trust that this explanation will satisfy those who have complained of my action in the premises because of their want of information on the subject. CYRUS RIDDELL, J. B. C. C.

Dedicated to the Third Terphenoreen Party

Long be remembered the fairy sight,
That welcomed the balmy August night,
When the moon and stars shone so bright
To music's rhythmic measure;

In the bright light's flurly glare,
Fanned by the palpitating air,
And the velvet soft and the white,
And happy youth's sweet pleasure.

Down the hall in perfect time
Glided the dancers with grace divine;
Oh, music's witchery! 'tis thine
To make the heart "sweet" and the "blue" hour!

Upon each flushed and happy face,
In every curve of manly grace,
In every motion is the glow
Of thy sovereign power.

In years to come, each heart that beat
In time to gaily flying feet
Will turn with gladsome smile to greet
The bright light of that fairer night

When youth and pleasure danced away
"Dull care" until the breaking day,
So happy, merry, blithe and gay,
And life seemed with whole joys bright.

"Squire Early created a slight sensation among his neighbors by riding out one Monday morning. Being such a steady sailing mariner, this was an unlooked-for thing for the Squire to do. Just as he ascended the hill leading to the prodigal cam, driving a very warm-looking and tired horse down the road that leads to the beach, he was surrounded by a host of breathless inquiries of anxious friends, failed to elicit any explanation of the mysterious disappearance of the "Squire."

The next day, Major Holabird chartered the Waco and invited his friends to come and take a ride. They went. There were about twenty of them; Judge Shepherd, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Smith, and young Ben was the turning point of the excursion, and it is seriously doubted if the citizens of this quiet village have yet recovered from the shock of seeing the Squire. When it turned to come back. The Judge yielded only one tune for the last four hours of the trip, and said, "We won't go home until tomorrow." The Judge's watch at the clocks were all striking 3 a. m. when the steamer touched the wharf here on her richly laden with good things in art, fashion, and literature. The steel plate is an original design by Darley, suggestive of the full-page illustrations of the Illustrated London News. The salmon-colored pattern is given over to showing the latest caprices of Dame Fashion, drawn from life and illustrating the first of autumn's innovations. There is a large diagram pattern (alone worth the price of the book) and a large variety of useful illustrations, including a large diagram of the dress which will gladden the hearts of the ladies. "A Gentle Breeze" is approaching the climax, and the "Rosebud Garden of Girls" is increasing in interest as the story develops. The usual departments are replete with entertainment and instruction, and, as a whole, the number number is a model of completeness.

A couple of naps, one of ebony persuasion, amused themselves a short time, Saturday afternoon in pugilistic sport. The "nig" had a knife in his hand with which he cut a considerable rent in his antagonist's coat and after peace had been made, a negro man was arraigned, charged with giving the negro boy the knife to use in the fight. The trial was had before the Police Judge, who fined the negro man $10, but afterward gave the defendant a new trial, upon which new evidence was introduced and the accused acquitted.

BURLINGTON, KY., AUGUST 21.

THE FIRST.

They met. Deep in the daisy depths
Of August's sunny sky,
Fair Luna trod her silver path
In matchless majesty.
The cricket chirped, the firefly Pursued the faithful dance.
'Twas in the slumberous balmy night
That these two met by chance.

They met. She was a tender thing
With lustrous, shining eye,
And down the garden path she moved,
Warbling sweet melody.
He paused to listen. (On she sped
With footfalls soft and light,
They met upon the tennis lawn,
That peaceful summer night.

With throbbing pulse and beating heart,
He spoke in accents low,
Into her glancing eyes there came
A stronger, deeper glow.
Then up the apple tree she swarmed,
And there vindictive spat—
For those were my bill and pup and My next door neighbor's cat.

Farming That Don't Pay.

Whether there are many kinds of farming that pay may be an open question, but that there are very many farm practices that don't pay is beyond any doubt; it don't pay to be caught at this time of the year without a woodpile large enough to last twelve months; or to open your gates and let your stock into the fields as soon as a few bare spots appear; or to keep it on short rations, so when it does go to grass it will take half the summer to get strong and thrifty.

It does not pay to leave the work of mending your tools and selecting your seed until the day you want to use it, thereby causing costly delay.

It don't pay to sow or plant poor seed because you happen to have it on hand.

It don't pay to plant more ground than you can manure and take care of.

It don't pay to leave weak places in the fence in the hope that the cattle will not find them; and if you keep sheep, it does not pay to let them run at large in the spring until they become tramps and can not be kept home by any ordinary fence.

It don't pay to neglect cows, ewes or sows when they are dropping their young.

It don't pay to let the spring rains wash the value out of the manure that accumulates in the barn yard during the winter.

It don't pay to let the hens lay under the barn, steal their nests and be eaten up by the skunks.

It don't pay to work with poor tools of any kind.

It don't pay to put off any kind of spring work until the last moment, nor does it pay to work land when it is too wet.

It don't pay to leave cabbage, turnips, beets, or even apples in the cellar to rot and breed disease; for if you have more than you can eat or sell, the stock will be profited by them.

It don't pay to summer a poor cow simply because one comes to buy her.

It don't pay to sell a heifer calf from your best cow to the butcher, simply because it will cost more to raise it than you can buy a scrub for next fall.

It don't pay to leave the banking around the house until it rots the sills.

It don't pay to be stingy in sowing grass seed, or to try to live without a garden.

Finally, it don't pay to anger the women by leaving them to cut the stove-wood or to carry it from the door-yard, or to remind you every morning in haying or hoeing that you must saw enough here you go to work to last through the day.

Mad Itch in Cattle.

The mad itch, as it is termed by breeders and farmers, is caused by cattle following hogs that are fed upon green corn and stalks cut up and thrown to them when the corn ears are in the roasting state. This is not an unusual way of feeding in the Western States. The hogs will chew the stalks as well as the corn ears, and extract all the juice or sap from them, and then drop the stalks out of their mouths. These stalks, being thus discarded or thrown out by the swine, with all the sap extracted, cattle will eat voraciously.

Such refuse contains no nutriment whatever. It is totally indigestible; in consequence of which the animal is unable to ruminate, and in this condition the refuse mass finds its way into the manacles and there lies dormant and inactive in the manifold portion of the stomach, causing irritation and acute inflammation in the part, and no medicinal agents will serve even to lay it, leaving eradication out of the question. This condition is the death of the animal in great agony.

The first symptoms developed in cattle that are destroyed by eating the woody fibers and sapless corn stalks, are a wild state of the eyes; the animal is very irritable and cross, and will attack everything in the shape of a person or animal that chances to come in its way. The afflicted animal, in a very short time subsequent to the attack, will begin to rub its nose and head against a fence, tree or post, or will skin or flesh a horse or a cow, or will contend the rubbing until death ends its suffering. The efficacious treatment is to prevent your animal from eating this or other indigestible food.—Toronto Globe.

The most treacherous memory in the world belongs to a young man with a new watch.

Keep on the Farm.

In these dull times, when scores of young men are out of employment, and others are crowding in from other places, seeking for so-called "genteel" situations, it is well to give wide publicity to such facts as are set forth in the following extract from the New York Journal of Commerce:

One of the great problems of our day, too little discussed by those who have the care of the public through the press or at the forum, is to furnish the young men of this generation with remunerative employment. The professions are all overcrowded. The shopkeepers are by far too numerous. Agencies of all classes are so multiplied that the occupants tread on each other's toes, and are a bore and a nuisance to the general public. Clerks out of employment and willing to serve for a pittance are to be reckoned by their tens of thousands. Bookkeepers with hungry eyes are reading the advertising lists in the vain hope of an opening for their application. Collectors, messengers, doorkeepers, watchmen, conductors, and the great variety of others, already expert, seeking employment in kindred callings, are waiting anxiously for some one to engage them. Every possible form of service that can be reckoned in the list of genteel occupations is anxiously sought after by multitudes who have no other provision for their daily needs. The men who have to go to work at the bench or in the field of these so-called "genteel" occupations are the most accessible and at the first the most remunerative employments. The mass of the unemployed must seek sustenance from the bosom of mother earth. Land is cheap, and there is a wide area that awaits the tiller. The back may ache and the skin blister in the sun, but the bread can be made without fear of failure, if the laborer will be faithful to his calling. It needs less wisdom and forethought than patient industry, and the man with a common mind may eat his harvest in peace.

About Women.

A wife only fourteen years old is suing for a divorce in a Jersey court.

Mrs. Potts, in Canada, has invented a cold-handled smoothing iron, which is much praised.

Mrs. Sears sued the Texas Central Railroad for $2,500 damages for killing her son, and the jury awarded her $3,500.

A San Francisco woman has invented a baby carriage, and sold the patent for $14,000. Another woman invented the paper rail now so universally used by grocers.

Mrs. Grayson, of Brooklyn, scalped her son-in-law by using a cutting knife. He will be careful hereafter how he gives her a piece of his mind, seeing how near she came to helping herself.

In Podona, Russia, a servant girl lately brought suit against her mistress for defamation. The presiding judge was the latter's husband, and he condemned his wife to pay 50 silver rubles.

Low shoes are pretty for house and evening wear, or even for street wear, in the suburbs. The past two seasons they were worn a great deal in our city streets, too, but then the dresses were long, and the feet not so much exposed as the present style of short walking suits leave them. Shoes, and not ties, are decidedly the nicest with the short dress.

Dr. Anita Tyng is the name of a woman physician in Providence, Rhode Island. She graduated in Philadelphia, and in the last few years has been elected successively a member of the Providence Medical Association, of the Rhode Island Medical Society, and delegate to the American Medical Association. The regular physicians consult with her. She has been tried by her work, and found to possess sense, knowledge and skill, therefore she has been fully accepted.

Young Old Women.

One of the most unpleasant reminders to a woman that youth is stealing away is to be considered passé. She shrinks from the inevitable consciousness of outwardly growing old while her heart still keeps young, and the keen sting of time is being thrust aside to make way for the young regime.

For they come so soon; the school-girl of to-day is a woman to-morrow, and a competitor for that homage and admiration which a woman is so reluctant to relinquish to another. But the sting is far deeper when it tells a woman she is passé and must retire from the field in which she has been queen, while her heart is still full of cravings for its pleasures. Madame DeStael says it is difficult to grow old gracefully, and such an accomplishment all women should study. Time bitterly avenges itself on those who cling tenaciously to departing youth and attempt to evade the touches of swiftly passing years, for youth slips from the grasp and leaves behind the bitter ashes of disappointment; while for those who bow to the inevitable approach of time, a brightening tint is left to conceal the footprints made. What is a more melancholy sight than the makron woman attempts to disguise the delivery of aged age beneath the gayest garments of youth, competing with the youth of her matronly daughter? And it is those who vainly tempt time to challenge comparison with youth who ever feel the sting of being called passé. "One should regard gray hairs like the light of a soft moon, silvering over the evening of life."

Unshod Horses.

Some time since the London Christian Union called attention to the fact that an experienced farrier of England reported that horses did better without than with shoes. A writer in the Times has been trying the experiment, and thus reports: When my pony's shoes were worn out, I had them removed, and gave him a month's rest at grass, with an occasional drive of a mile or two on the high road, while his hoofs were hardening. The result at first seemed doubtful. The hoof was a thin shell, and kept chipping away until it had worked down beyond the holet in the nail by which the shoes had been fastened. After this the hoof grew thick and hard, quite unlike what it had been before. I now put the pony to full work, and he stands it well. He is more sure-footed; his tread is almost noiseless; his hoofs are in no danger from the rough hands of the farrier; and the change has altogether been a clear gain, without anything to set against it. My pony, I may add, was between four and five years old—rising four, I fancy, is the correct phrase. He had been regularly shod up to the present year.

"HERE we have the great Egyptian wonder, captured in the wilds of South Africa, with a loss of five thousand men and an expenditure of forty millions of treasure!" exclaimed the showman, shaking his whip in a threatening manner at a stuffed hide in a glass cage. "Don't go too close; it might seize you," said a mother to her little son. "Have no fears, madam, for the safety of your offspring," observed the showman, eloquently, "for does not the Good Book tell us that wonders will never seize? Pass rapidly on to the next cage and view the living skeleton, or the man who married his mother-in-law."—Enquirer.

The outlook this year for American hop growers is cheerful. The English crop is a partial failure, and it is estimated that that country will want from 50,000 to 75,000 bales American hops.

The number of immigrants landed at New York in July was 12,710, against 6,889 same month last year. The number for the year ended July 31 was 103,245, against 74,139 the previous year.

Mattoon, Ill., is to have a coal mine. A party of capitalists have leased 400 acres—one-half of which lies within the city limits—for a term of twenty years, and will at once proceed to sink a shaft.

The manufacture of tiles is no longer monopolized by our cousins over the sea. American tiles are now produced which are not only superior to those of foreign manufacture, but are much less costly.

On August 1, the lumber dealers of Chicago had on hand 337,328,206 feet of lumber and timber, 166,326,765 pieces of shingles, 30,968,765 pieces of lath, 997,213 feet of pickets, and 332,456 pieces of cedar posts.

The official statement of the earnings and expenditures of the Sing Sing prison for the month of July shows the aggregate earnings to have been $18,173.93, and the expenditures $14,603.57, a net profit for the month of $3,570.36.

The quantity of wheat exported from the United States has increased from 12,646,941 bushels in 1866-67 to 93,189,269 bushels in 1877-78. The exports for the current year, it is expected, will reach 100,000,000 bushels.

According to the Leadville Chronicle, the total yield of the carbonate mine to date has been $9,401,283. In addition to the product of the smelters, there has been shipped from Leadville over $5,250,000 worth of high grade ore.

Secretary Evarts, by direction of the President, has sent letters to our ministers at Great Britain, Germany, and several lesser powers, protesting against their allowing subjects who are Mormons to leave for the United States.

The United States now has 81,841 miles of railway, while all of Europe has only 94,000 miles. Thus, while the population of Europe is nearly eight times as great as ours, the excess of railroad mileage is not much over 10 per cent.

Although the great crops of the Middle and Western States are scarcely harvested, the demand for cars on the leading roads is already so great that there is difficulty in promptly meeting it. Another freight car famine is feared.

A Michigan man has lately built cars for a prairie road with an arrangement for disconnecting the gearing and running by wind when it is favorable. In an ordinary almost everyday breeze they can run fifteen miles an hour under sail.

According to present appearances, this year's crop of wheat in Europe will show a deficiency of about 225,000,000 bushels. The United States, Russia, Roumania, Canada, Australia and India will have a sufficient surplus to make good the deficit.

Peoria's new corn-sugar factory is to be an immense affair, the dimensions of the building being 104 by 293 feet, and seven stories high. It will require 370,000 bricks in building, and is expected to consume 6,000 bushels of corn daily, employing 250 men.

Reports received at Washington from the United States consul at Manchester, are to the effect that the estimates of the European journals of the crop deficiency have fallen short of the facts. In England the demand for meat and grain will be enormous.

The exports from Great Britain to Canada during the period beginning April 1 and ending July 31, have diminished one-third in comparison with the same period last year. This decrease is attributed to the effects of the new tariff established by the Canadian Government.

The staves which are so largely exported from Boston to the Mediterranean and to England are white oak. Sugar barrels are also made from elm, and in New York are being made of a single piece, cut out for the purpose. The oak staves come from the West, largely from Michigan.

According to the New York Public clearings in the leading cities of the country for the week ending August 10th were more than 40 per cent. greater than for the corresponding period last year, and indicate a larger business doing than at any previous period in the history of the country.

The Arctic Ice Company, of Boston, is now turning out between ten and twelve thousand pounds of ice per day, which they are under contract to deliver at half a cent per pound. The process employed by the company is said to be the cheapest known to science at the present day. The cost of manufacturing is only 85c. per ton, or about 44c. per 100 pounds.

How to Keep Cool.
Sit on a cake of ice and try to counterfeited the expression of an Esquimaux dog in a similar position.

Leave off your vest and scarlet suspenders, and encase yourself in the breezy solitudes of a commodious duster.

Go out in the woods with a pretty girl, and allow her to fan the mosquitoes off your noble brow.

Sleep on the roof of a piazza, and gaze upon the trembling stars while the south wind wafts to your intoxicated soul the amorous trillings of the tom-cat.

A RURAL editor speaking of a quill-driving contemporary, says: "His intellect is so dense that it would take the auger of common sense longer to penetrate it than to bore through Mont Blanc with a boiled carrot."

A Physiological Phenomenon.
"Do you want an item?" said a mild mannered man, coming into the office this morning, and pulling out a handkerchief with a picture of the death of Annas and Sapphira painted on it in bold relief. He mopped himself up once or twice, and, speaking seemingly to himself, said, "Truth crushed to earth will rise again," and then sat down.

"You say you want an item?" It was intimated that an item would be a good thing to have.

"Will any kind of a one that is startling, and at the same time true and fit for publication, be acceptable?"

An affirmative intimation followed again.

"Well, sir, I will tell you of a physiological phenomenon which has but just occurred in one of the negro tenements in the happy hunting grounds of Bucktown. A full-blooded negro of that locality, having a husband of the same strain, gave birth to an infant—which by the way is doing well—this morning at 4 o'clock."

"Well, there's not much of an item there."

"But I say there is, for when the child was taken into the light, one-half of it, from a line drawn vertically down through the center of the face and body, was coal black; the hair on the head, of which there was more than an ordinary quantity, had the unmistakable negro kink, or that side. The nose, also, and lips on the same side showed the African, and the arm and leg were black."

"Now the thing becomes interesting. How do you account for it?"

"Well, it is due to natural causes, I think."

"Ah? How do you mean?"

"Well, there are numerous instances exactly similar to this arising from legitimate causes, and why they have not been noticed in medical journals is a mystery to me."

"There is something strange in that. But to come back to the first cause: The question was not at first asked, but was the other half of the body full white?"

"What did I understand you to say?" and the pious party moved uneasily and looked toward the door.

The question was repeated.

"Well, no; the other half was neither white nor yellow, but just as black as the first half, and you couldn't tell 'em apart with a microscope of five hundred diameters. In other words, one-half being black and the other half being exactly similar, the infant was a full-blooded pickaninny."

And now the Annas and Sapphira handkerchief is waiting for an owner, who went out suddenly and left it behind him.

A Plan That Misricarried.
[Detroit Free Press.]

Yesterday afternoon a red-faced young man, belonging to an excursion party, called into a drug store and softly asked the soda-fountain boy if he was out of any particular kind of syrup. The boy made an investigation and replied:

"We are out of sarsaparilla, but—"

"That's all right—all right—you wait a minute," interrupted the young man, and away he went.

The boy took the empty reservoir from the fountain and replaced it, and in about two minutes the young man returned, in company with his girl and four other people, evidently all friends.

Walking up to the fountain, he said: "I'm going to take sarsaparilla in mine, for the doctors all recommend it, and if he hasn't any sarsaparilla, I won't take nothing. What do you all say?"

"Oh, we'll take the same," they replied.

The young man began to smile, and his left eye began to draw down; but when he saw his horror to see the boy draw six glasses in succession and push them to the front, where they were eagerly drained of their contents. He tried to give the boy a look of mingled hate and murderous intent, but the lad was too busy to see it. He felt in his pockets, brought up watch-keys, pennies and peanuts, and finally laid down twenty-seven cents and whispered to the boy:

"That takes my pile, and if ever I catch you outside of town I'll lick you to death!"

Three reason poultry killed at home, though young, is not as tender as that bought at the market is, the former is generally not killed until wanted, and when eaten, is still rigid in death, while that bought at the poulterers has been killed at least hours, more often days before being eaten, dressed at once, and with a few bits of charcoal in it, hung in a cool place. If poultry are kept from food and drink at least 12 hours before killing, the craw and intestines will be emptied, and any superfluity of secretions exhausted. The flesh will be juicy and the fat firm. If left three days without food or drink, the flesh will be dry and tasteless and the fat soft. Never buy an undrawn fowl. The gas from the craw and intestines will taint the flesh, even though retained but a short time.

WORK TOGETHER.

If all men had the self-same mind,
And sought the same position,
The world would be, as you'll agree,
Chaotic in condition.
Thus some must sow, and some must reap;
And some must plow the mighty deep;
And some must wake while others sleep—
Each has his given mission.
And though they seek quite different paths,
In bright or cloudy weather;
And seen to stray, each his own way,
They really work together.
The one who weaves, the one who knits,
The one who cuts and the one who binds,
Bound by a silken tether.
And thus the great world thrives and grows,
As each man helps his brother;
The great and small, the short and tall,
They all help one another.
For some must print, and some must fold,
And some must carve, and some must mold,
And some count silver, script and gold;
Each, one pursuit or other.
Then banish envy from your hearts,
And keep your souls well lighted;
The world should be, as you'll agree,
At peace and all united.
The world course will turn the wheel—
The mill will grind the corn to meal—
And God will reign through woe and wail,
And every wrong is righted.

The Home of a True Farmer.

An industrious, intelligent, true farmer finds it a source of unceasing pleasure to improve his stock, his dwelling, his garden, orchard, all within the limits of his estate. The little improvements added daily to his property in ten or fifteen years may work it up to a little paradise. He plants yearly a few beautiful trees or vines, and keeps the old ones trimmed and trained to suit his taste.

The walks in the front yard, and the back yard also, are always in a good state of repair. Wet weather or dry weather, the out-buildings can be visited with the greatest convenience. There are plenty of large gates and small gates on the place, and no broken hinges or worthless catches to any of them. The shade trees are beautiful, the arbors are enchanting, the little flower garden in its season a source of exquisite pleasure.

The rose bushes and flower-bearing shrubbery never suffer for want of the pruning knife and appropriate and seasonable fertilizers. No starved branches, moss-covered limbs, or bodies loaded with fungus growth, or scale insects disfigure the shrubbery. No weeds rise up to rob his trees and vines of their proper food, and mar the beauty of the premises. His doors and blinds have no broken hinges, nor marks of decay or neglect. No broken pieces of glass or crippled chairs or furniture—his whole establishment is in first-class running order.

The chickens and fowls, and all of his domestic animals, are comfortable the year round. Their necessities and wants are all provided for by the frugal, benevolent and intelligent master. In their season, he has the most beautiful and delicious strawberries, and grapes, and apples, and pears, and peaches and plums, and other fruits adapted to his soil and climate in great abundance.

He makes his own wine and cider, vinegar and preserves; puts up canned and dried fruit for his own use, some for market when it pays. He has fine vegetables, and milk and butter, mutton and pork, and all of the best quality; and his winter and spring stores are all saved and protected from decay, mild, insects, worms, rats, mice, etc., as every true farmer knows how to do these things.

Such a farmer loves his home. He never leaves it without feeling attractions that incline him to return as early as possible. He is justly proud of his home. It is to him Eden in its glory. It is his miniature empire, where he is monarch of all he surveys. The coffee house and club room have no attraction for him. His chief happiness is in making home more attractive and more comfortable from year to year, and in rendering his family and everything around him more and more comfortable and happy.

Raising Potatoes.

I would like to tell how I raise potatoes. Though it is rather late for this season, maybe some one may want to try it next. Plow the ground in the fall or early in the spring. Just before planting time barrow it over four or five times so as to make it mellow. Then make the rows four feet apart. Use small potatoes, or large ones cut up, dropping them from eight to ten inches apart, and cover them about two inches deep. Just as soon as they are up so that the rows can be seen, run through with a cultivator and cover them up about two inches. This destroys all weeds, etc., that have started up, and I believe it does the potatoes good to cover them. Hill up the potatoes with a plow just before they blossom—and soon after a good rain if possible. They will need but little work with the hoe if care is taken with the plow. The potatoes are now in condition to dig with a potato digger, plow, or with the hoe, as circumstances permit.

An Irish laborer was lying in the ditch, very much the worse for liquor. He was encountered by the priest of his parish. Very much shocked, his reverence turned the drunkard over, who muttered, "Where am I?" "On the road to hell!" replied the priest sternly. "Thank God, then," replied the laborer, "it's comforting to know that Father Murtough is with me!"

Labor at Home and Abroad.

The reports of American Consuls in Europe, with respect to trade in their several districts, have in many instances been laid before the readers of this paper. It will be no news to them, accordingly, to be told that the average condition of industrial communities abroad is far below that which has been obtained here, even in the worst of times. The effect of these reports is naturally intensified when they are massed together, with the evidence on which they are based, as they have been in a volume just issued by the Department of State. Covering, as they do, all phases of the labor question in Europe, these reports furnish a telling picture of the condition of the working people of Europe—their continual struggle with adverse circumstances—as compared with the condition of the working people of the United States, and show, as perhaps no single volume has ever done before, the difference between labor disfranchised, degraded, and hopeless; and labor free, honorable, thriving, and an equal sharer in political power.

The following deductions are said by the department to be clearly proved by the reports:

1. That wages in the United States are double those of Belgium, Denmark, France and England, and three times those of Germany, Italy and Spain, and four times those of the Netherlands.
2. That the price of the necessities of life are lower in the United States than in Europe, and that the laborer in the United States, were he satisfied with the scanty and miserable fare upon which the European laborer must live, can purchase his food for less money than it can be purchased for in Europe.
3. That the French working people, with far less wages, are happier than the working people of Great Britain, who receive the highest wages in Europe, on account of the steadiness and economical habits of the former, and the strikes, drinking habits, and the consequent recklessness of the latter.
4. That more misery results from strikes, drinking, socialism and communism in England and Germany than from all other causes combined, hard times included.

How to Choose a Doctor.

The Detroit Lancet gives the following rules for choosing a doctor. They are worth pondering by every doctor and patient:

Avoid a mean man, for you may be certain he will be a mean doctor, just as certain as he would make a mean husband.

Avoid a dishonest man; he will not be honest with you as your physician.

Avoid the untidy, coarse, blundering fellow, for the man who is clumsy in hitching his horse you may be sure is not handy at surgery.

Avoid the doctor who flatters you and humors your appetite.

Avoid the empty blow-horn, who boasts of his numerous cases, and tells you of seeing forty or fifty cases a day, while he spends two hours to convince you of the fact. Put him down as a fool.

To be a good doctor one must first be a man in the true sense of the word. He should be a moral man, honest in his dealings.

He must have good sense, or he can not be a good doctor.

He should be strictly temperate. No one should trust his life in the hands of an intemperate doctor.

It is a good sign if he tells you how to keep well.

It is a good sign if the members of his family respect him.

It is a good sign if the children like him.

It is a good sign if he is neat and handy in making pills and folding powders.

It is a good sign if he is still a student, and keeps posted in all the latest improvements known to the profession for alleviating human suffering.

Wheat Straw for Cattle.

A Tennessee farmer writes the Rural Sun that he has found that straw is as well liked by cattle and sheep as the best hay. Here is the way he puts it up:

To those who wish to try it, and I assure any farmer, whether his hay crop be great or small, it will pay him to make the trial. I will give him a number of proceeding: My straw I ricked up loosely as it came from the thrasher, only being careful in topping it off so it would shed the rain; in this condition I allowed it to stand till I cut my second crop of clover. I was as careful of saving this fresh and sweet as I was my first crop, upon the principle of "that which is worth doing is worth doing well." I should have stated that I had selected the most perfect places in my field to place the thrasher and stack the straw. To this place I hauled my clover so soon as it was in condition to take up, and here I built my rick. I began by taking off all the top of my straw rick as far down as the rain and sun had injured it, and spreading it over the ground first; upon this I sprinkled a pretty good coat of salt and then a thin layer of clover, then a coat of salt, then a thin layer of straw, then salt, then another layer of hay, so I continued till I had the rick as large as I desired. In this way I made two large ricks of good hay, where I could only have had one, had I used clover alone.

At Terre Haute, Ind., about 100 coopers are on a strike for an advance in rates per barrel of 13c. The present rate is 11c.

To Keep Hams in Summer.
There are a number of modes given to keep hams through the warm season free from the attacks of insects. Some bag them and whitewash the bags which is troublesome and somewhat expensive; some cover them with dry wood shavings and pack them in barrels, and cover thoroughly with pine shavings; but we think the best plan of all those who have smoke-houses—and every farmer should have a good one—is to keep the hams hung up in the smoke house, which should be kept perfectly dark at all times. We have eaten hams so kept two years, and they were among the very best we ever tasted. Uniform darkness is a complete protection against the attacks of insects. So sayeth the editor of the Germantown Telegraph.

BURLINGTON, KY., SEPTEMBER 4.

It will be but a short time till the Buford case will come before the Court of Appeals.

The front end of fall is rather juicy. Can this be the equinoctial storms on hand a few days before time?

We are in receipt of the Congressional Directory, First Edition, for which Hon. John G. Carlisle has our thanks.

It is estimated that England, France and Germany will send one hundred million dollars to this country this season for grain.

A NUMBER of papers throughout the State are demanding a reduction in the salaries of State officials. Let the Legislature take heed.

BUSINESS men all over the country say that they are having an increased trade which they expect to maintain throughout the fall and winter seasons.

THE yellow fever patients in Memphis are as numerous as they have been at any time the past four or five weeks. The scourge shows no inclination to abate.

THE retiring Governor was almost overrun with petitions asking Executive clemency, but his deliberations thereon did not result in a large number of pardons.

THE California papers say that more Chinamen are coming over now than ever before. Every vessel comes loaded with them. The citizens do not give them an enthusiastic reception.

THE whole number of legal voters in Kentucky is 351,238. The total vote at the late State election is 205,988. This shows that 145,250 voters failed to exercise their right of suffrage.

At Montague, Texas, they had a hanging the other day, and it was witnessed by 5,000, a large portion of whom joined in singing "Sweet Bye and Bye" just before the drop was let fall.

THE Aurora Independent does not think the teachers in Indiana are paid in proportion to the labor they have to perform, but it says their money is on hand as soon as the services are rendered.

A GRAND time was had at the inauguration of Governor Blackburn, Tuesday. Crowds of people flocked into Frankfort from all parts of the State to witness the ceremonies and to give ear to the inaugural address.

THE managers of the barbecue for the benefit of the Hebrew Sunday-school believe in giving home talent a chance. This is truly commendable. Home talent and home enterprises should always be given the preference.

MONDAY week Criminal Court begins. The only case of any magnitude, and one of which everybody in the county is tired, is the Terrell case. It has dragged along so slowly that nobody expects ever to see it finally disposed of.

THE Yeoman says it is authorized to state that Mrs. Judge John M. Elliott has never contemplated being a candidate for Librarian or for any other office, and that she will not be. The announcement was made without her authority.

LAST Friday, Secretary Sherman aired himself in Kentucky. He took in the Lexington Fair, Friday afternoon. We hope that Kentucky atmosphere will have a beneficial effect on the Secretary's physical and political condition.

THE Lexington Transcript holds that the people of Kentucky are in favor of a new constitution, but how it got its information it does not state. We have nothing by which to judge, except the recent vote taken thereon, which does not support the Transcript's conclusion.

THE publication of the Williams-town Courier is to commence this week, C. C. Cram to be editor and proprietor. The publishing business at that point has been badly conducted in the past, and it will take "a long pull and a strong pull" to make a paper a success in Grant County.

THE President has not yet filled the vacancy in this district occasioned by the death of Judge Bland Ballard. It is said that the contest has been reduced to the two Louisville applicants, and the chances are in favor of the one that has the best record as regards party fidelity.

It is the general impression that there is no money in the State Treasury, but, on the contrary, there is over five hundred thousand dollars. This money can not be used for the discharge of any of the State's obligations under the existing laws; that is where the trouble comes in.

THE business men of Midway, becoming tired of submitting to the extortions of the Short Line Railroad, held an indignation meeting the other day, and entered their protest. This is not the first instance of the railroads in this State being notified of the dissatisfaction that their high tariffs are producing.

THE Frankfort Yeoman learns from the records in the Insurance Bureau, that the following Insurance Companies of foreign countries have no authority to transact insurance business in this State: North German, Transatlantic, Hamburg-Magdeburg, London & Lancashire, Norwich, La Caisse Generale, La Confiance.

THE Greenup Independent learns from the Bulletin that the Rowan County record photographs taken at the instance of Green and Wadsworth in the Green-Harris suit, will be sent to New York, where they will be enlarged by so powerful a camera that every line and even the very fiber of the paper will be clearly brought out.

GEN. J. B. HOOD died of yellow fever in New Orleans on the 80th ult. He was born in Bath County, this State, and was about fifty five years of age. He was one of the bravest Generals on the Confederate side in the rebellion, and received several wounds during the war. Hood was a good citizen, and his death is lamented, especially in the South.

THERE is no probability of a famine in this section this year. Notwithstanding the prolonged drought this summer, the farmers have well filled granaries, they have disposed of an uncommonly large amount of livestock at good prices, their growing crops look well. Upon the whole, the farmers are as prosperous now as they have been at any time for years.

THE Fair this year surpassed the most sanguine expectations of those who have attended regularly for many years. Persons who attended the Lexington Fair, and saw the exhibition of horses Thursday, say the exhibition of horses at Florence on Friday and Saturday was its equal in every respect. The fine show throughout last week, will materially increase the popularity of the Fair, and with an increased activity on the part of the Board a rousing Fair may be looked for in 1880.

THE Trimble News says: "The Boone County Recorder in commenting on our regrets in regard to the defeat of Hon. O. P. Hogan, has this to say: 'Are not the News and the people of Trimble conscious of the fact that Mr. Hogan was opposing the regular nominee, &c.' We acknowledge the rebuke, but plead ignorance as our excuse. Having known Mr. Hogan for a number of years, we thought he was too good a Democrat to run as an Independent." Had the editor of the News watched our columns closer, he would have been the wiser, but an honest confession is good for the soul.

WE do not want to be understood as advocating the taking of another vote on the proposition to amend the constitution, for such is not the case, as we believe that a vote ordered by the next Legislature would result precisely as the last. But, in the event another vote is ordered, the portions proposed to be amended should be pointed out that the voters may know upon what they are voting. Not knowing what amendments were to be made was one cause of the overwhelming defeat at the last election. Many refused to vote because no one was able to say positively what changes would be made were the proposition to call a convention to carry. Every person who had given the subject any attention whatever, could suggest certain changes which to them seem very necessary, but they had no assurance that these alterations would have been made. The General Assembly can surely remedy this, and until the people are informed there is no hope of the proposition to amend the constitution ever carrying. People will not go into such arrangements perfectly blind.

Ben Deering, of Lexington, is fully equal to that of the good Deacon Smith, of Cincinnati, for already the people of Scott, Fayette and Jessamine counties are seriously thinking of making an effort to stop the running of Sunday excursion trains on the Cincinnati Southern Railroad.

--Somerset Reporter: It appears very plain to us on a careful perusal of the Auditor's last report, that the last Legislature was not inclined to economize, and were rather extravagant or careless about the appropriations they made. When they reduced the taxation they should have cut down the expenses in some way; and the scaling of salaries would have been just as proper as any other economy. The salaries must come down.

--Owensboro Examiner: The report reaches us of the most remarkable rain fall that ever occurred in Daviess County. Though the shower fell some time since, it was of such a wonderful nature as to bear chronicling at this late date. It occurred on the farm of Mr. Burr Crutcher, near this city, and was noticed especially from the peculiar manner in which it affected a large vine which grew by one of the porches of the residence. The rain caused the vine to shrivel and die--every rain-drop making a black spot wherever it fell, like frost. The leaves dropped off the vine as if they had been scalded. And all this happened within the space of ten minutes.

We are glad to hear that Mr. M. S. Rice is improving and that he will soon be able to be out again.

The scenes enacted at the Fair are still being talked over. There's a lot of fun in 'em for the boys even at this distant day.

Mr. BACHELOR's horse, the stealing of which we mentioned last week, was taken on Thursday night, instead of Wednesday night.

Last Monday Joe. Wagoner, of Florence, came over and hauled out of milk. That old milk is brim full of the milk of human kindness.

The money which Currier's band was to have received for its services at the Fair, last week, was attached in the hands of the Directors, so says report.

The Aurora Fair is in full blast now, and with good weather a splendid week's entertainment is expected. Friday and Saturday will see large crowds there from Kentucky.

The public schools are being put in running order this week. Many juveniles were at a loss to know what kind of a looking object would greet them at the school-house last Monday morning.

The recent rains were the salvation of the fall pastures. The pastures now look as verdant as they did in the month of May. This will be a great saving of food, and many persons who expected to commence feeding stock early in the fall are greatly relieved.

The tranquility of Hickertown was somewhat disturbed, Monday evening, by a pugilistic matinee, in which George C. Voshell and David Roberts were the stars. Tuesday, Equine Hensley's stable had registered opposite their names the charge of breach of the peace.

Price 25c a bottle. For sale by A. W. Smith, Burlington.

One of the most promising young horses in the past of the State is "Crisis," a Denz, owned by W. A. Crigger, who resides near Hebron. This horse made its appearance in the ring several times at the Fair, last week, and won the admiration of all who saw him. As to form and style he is a model, and is a fine stepper either under the saddle or in harness.

Circuit Court convened Monday at 1 p. m., Judge Drane on the bench. Business is being dispatched with the usual alacrity, and the probability is court will not continue longer than that week. The legal profession is well represented, and, from the number of legal lights present from Covington, it appears that the Covington bar has emptied itself into Burlington this week.

FLORENCE FAIR.

The Fair is again a thing of the past, and is to be remembered as a success in every particular. The attendance during the week was much larger than that of any previous Fair, and on Friday, when the largest number of any one day was present, it looked as though everybody and all their brothers and sisters and their families were on the ground. That day the crowd was estimated at from six to eight thousand. The entire seating capacity of the spacious amphitheater was not sufficient to accommodate the multitude, and many there were who did not obtain seats the entire day. The crowd was too large to afford comfort to any except the members of the Board, who were periodically elated with the liberal patronage. Saturday the attendance was not as large as that on the day previous, but it numbered among the thousands.

The exhibition of cattle, Thursday, was not as good as it has been on other occasions, but this was due to the fact that on Friday and Saturday, by the fair, which was pronounced the largest, and composed of the finest animals ever exhibited at the Florence Fair. NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.
Bellevue.

The teachers of this vicinity are justly indignant at the manner in which their money earned last winter, for services rendered in teaching the common schools, is withheld from them. And right here, Mr. Editor, stands like for some change of our present school system? To answer a question for the benefit of more than one: What in the dickens has happened to the money that has been collected and paid into the treasury the year rent year? It's understood the law is right, the money collected for school purposes is to be disbursed solely for payment of teachers. Out of one hundred and seventeen dollars, less than a dozen failed to make their payments; and doesn't it look reasonable that the ought to be some money in the treasury? Where is it, if it ain't there?

Plattsburg.
Miss Mary Sebree, of Cincinnati, Ohio, is visiting relatives in this neighborhood.

At the house of the late J. H. Hoggan, in the Band this season is small, the yield will no doubt, be good.

The question as to whether J. C. Sebree will sell the Hebron and its country, is undecided. He has been engaged in the carpenter business for the past few days.

Quite a number of hogs have died with cholera in the past few weeks, and in good condition, being full grown and in good condition, which is considerable loss. Some of the farmers have scarcely enough left for their own consumption.

Notwithstanding the dull times, considerable improvement is going on. G. O. Vohell is erecting a large tobacco and stock barn, which is being skillfully arranged for either purpose. Preston Miller and Dave Roberts are doing the carpenter work.

The meeting held on Ashby Fork, last Saturday and Sunday, was largely attended, especially on Sunday. Rev. Mr. Wright of Augusta, Ky., was present and assisted Rev. Mr. Shaw in the meeting. It was held in a beautiful flat at the foot of a small hill, not far from the house of H. B. Criger, known as the home-yard, it having derived its name from the remains of a number of quadrupeds being deposited there at the time the episcopal proved to exist in this country several years ago. Very few of these bones are now visible, but on Sunday afternoon, it being basket meeting, there were numerous bones visible—principally of chickens.

Petersburg.
Owing to the reduction of the money for paying teachers of the common schools in Kentucky, the school at this place is reported in the market again for lower bidders. Mr. Stett and his family are willing to take the school at the low rate. There are about 200 pupils and only about two hundred and fifty dollars to pay for teaching them five months.

One case of yellow fever has been reported in town, but not by the Board of Health. The patient managed to elude the strict quarantine regulations and get into town by throwing himself onto the generosity of Captain Hopkins, of the Aurora ferry. The Captain reported it genuine case with black vomit and all the general marked symptoms. It was "sample" now it was "sample" attack of spirits frumenti, contracted in a third-class saloon in Aurora.

The pilgrims to the Florence Fair, last week, was an interesting sight to see. Major Holobird took the lead with a pair of white Mustang ponies, a basket phatton and two dashing wiggins. Bishop Schramm was close after him with a fast trotter. One slight accident only occurred in which a buggy was upset, but very little damage resulted to either its occupants or the vehicle.

The Aurora Fair comes to the front this week with the formidable array of sensations advertised for each day. If these are not postponed from day to day in the usual style, this Fair will give the best entertainment it has ever given.

The matrimonial fever made its appearance here last week. Mr. J. W. (alias and better known as Butterick) Schroe and a daughter of Mr. Dennis McClellan were married by an Aurora Catholic Priest, Mr. Sebree having a day or two previously espoused the faith, and been ceremoniously admitted a member of the Catholic Church, as preparatory to taking the usual marriage vows before a dignitary of that church.

RECIPE TO MAKE A KISS.

From rosebuds yet unborn, whose vernal morn
Perfumes the pale, unconscious of a thorn,
The purest purple take, and steal from May
The pearls that gleam the lawn when spring
the day,
Crop the young violet from her scented bed,
And spoil the primrose of its velvet head,
With love's own odors charged, and steep'd in joy.

The honeyed labor of the hive employ,
Lest danger in the sweet temptation lurk
And mar the luscious toil—for shouldst thou leave
One sting behind, 'twould all thy hopes deceive.

Into the fragrant grass let Zephyr fling
The newest, earliest history of the Spring;
The chirp of beauty's darling bird prepare,
And mix the murmurs of the turts there,
Her smiles and graces Venus must infuse,
And thence enchain the whole with Paphian wings.

If the best mixture daintily you'd sip,
'Tis found perfected on thy sweetest's lip.

Farm Notes.

A breeder of poultry says: "Every spring I procure a quantity of cedar boughs and scatter them plentifully around the hen house. This is all that is necessary, as the odor of cedar keeps away the lice."

For windfalls use a padded bandage, with astrigent lotions; applied two hours a day at first, adding two hours every day until it is kept on continually, is the usual remedy. Rest from work is helpful to a cure.

Land which, without the application of manure, will give a yield of fifteen bushels of wheat per acre, will, by the addition of eighty pounds of nitrogen in a favorable season, give from thirty-five to forty bushels of wheat, with a proportional increase of straw.

The National Live Stock Journal says: "A slon of corn and peas, ground in about equal parts, with a little oil meal added, makes the best food for the sow while suckling to increase the flow of milk; and this, with clover pasture and plenty of soaked corn during the summer, will promote a rapid and healthy growth of pigs."

To make a good harness polish, take of mutton suet 2 ounces; beeswax, 6 ounces; powdered sugar, 6 ounces; lampblack, 1 ounce; green or yellow soap, 2 ounces; and water, one-half pint. Dissolve the soap in the water, add the other solid ingredients, mix well and add turpentine. Lay on with a sponge and polish off with a brush.

Potatoes suffer more from weeds than any other crop. One weed will take up and evaporate a good deal of moisture from the soil, and rob the crop of what it greatly needs. The loss of moisture is not often thought of in considering the effect of weeds, but it is very important. When too late to be killed by cultivation, the weeds should be hand-pulled.

Diluted carbolic acid is found to be a complete exterminator of the potato beetle and other insects infesting crops, and it should be used in preference to Paris green. But it is destructive to plant life unless it is sufficiently diluted with water—one pint of carbolic acid to one hundred parts of water. This important fact should be borne in mind, and, doing so, there is perhaps no better insect destroyer known.

An unfeeling correspondent recommends the cruel method of splitting the tongue of a cow that sucks herself. Rather than adopt the barbarous treatment, we should dry the cow and fatten and sell her for beef. We have published better remedies than this, and here with give another: Make a bridle with a medium-sized wire for a bit, and fasten it upon the head of your self-sucking cow, and she will quit the habit.

The following, furnished to an agricultural paper by an old farmer, is particularly seasonable just at this time: "In time of droughts, keep the soil in the finest possible state. When the entire surface is an impalpable powder and stirred frequently, no crop will be destroyed by any drought that can be experienced on the Atlantic slope. For dust is a great absorbent of moisture and of the fertilizing gases that pervade the atmosphere."

Professor Farrington, in a summary of the experiments begun in 1870 by the Maine Agricultural College to ascertain which has the greatest value as a food for swine, cooked or uncooked meal, says: "We have, by an experiment which has been continued three to four months each of the nine years since its beginning, obtained evidence that all the time and money and labor expended in cooking meal for swine is more than thrown away."

The Agriculturalist says: "When hogs are put up to fatten and fed on dry corn, it is the practice to give them but little water; but they require some. It would not be possible for a hog to live for weeks' without water or other drink when feeding on dry corn, although when fed on new 'soft' corn, a very small quantity of water will be sufficient, and, possibly, if the corn is very soft and unripe, water might not be indispensable."

A correspondent, speaking of crops, says that farmers should have a diversity of crops, so that if there is a failure in one there may be a bit in another. The intelligent farmer lays his plans as much as the leader of military. He looks ahead to see what will make him money, and he don't put all his eggs under one hen, for she might leave the nest and all would be added. Farmers should plan wisely, and carry out the plans to the best of their ability.

A writer in the Ohio Farmer says: "It is the belief of observing ones that the seeds of spores of mildew exist during the winter and spring on the bark and buds of vines, ready to vegetate anew when suitable weather occurs in summer. As a possible check to this, I am about to wash most of my vines, before the buds open, with carbolic soap. I think this will also tend to lessen the mischievous work of the stool beetle on the buds."

Carrots seem to have some peculiar effect on the health of horses, rendering the skin especially glossy and healthy looking. For milked cows, carrots are valuable for the golden tinge and richness which they impart to the butter. They are also more nourishing for cows than turnips are. In feeding carrots, care must be taken that the pieces are not cut in such a shape as to choke the animal. Cut large carrots lengthwise, not across.

Heavy Bank Robbery.

COLUMBUS, O., August 26.—Fifteen minutes to 2 o'clock this afternoon, a respectable looking man walked into the Capital City Bank, called President Rickley's attention and entered into conversation about the purchase of some bonds. A few moments later another man came in and also engaged Mr. Rickley's attention about some business, when the first man slipped away, walked over to the water cooler, and Mr. Rickley thought he was only taking a drink. Rickley's attention being drawn toward the last man, he lost sight of the man at the cooler. Presently he saw him leave the bank. Going into the vault, Mr. Rickley then discovered that $5,000 in currency and $15,000 in bonds were stolen. He was wild with excitement, and returned from the vault just in time to see the confederate leave. The counter of the bank room is protected by wire screens. The vault opens behind the counter, and can only be reached from behind. Great excitement prevailed for some time. The following is a description of the loss: Currency, $4,880; $100 in Columbus City Hall bonds, and $11,000 in four per cent. bonds. The bank only loses the currency. The bonds were private deposits. The bank offers $2,000 for the arrears and conviction of the thieves. The bank is fully able to pay.

The country people work themselves into the belief that the city folks are the happiest people on the globe, while the city folks would rejoice to be as free as the country yeomanry. The one thinks the other supremely happy. Now the fact is, no one can be happy unless he is free. Freedom is essential to true happiness. It denies crime for employment, and crime employs the time in efforts to escape the punishment due to crime. If each man and woman would labor enough to provide for his or her necessities, society would rise from its present corruptions. Idle men call for idle women, and thus crime sets in. The birds and animals labor and are happy; men and women look for comfort in idleness and drag out miserable lives. It is honorable to work; it is dishonorable to idle. The multiplied wants of man make multiplied fields for labor. There are millions of rich acres of untouched land and millions of unemployed workmen. How shall the two come together is a serious question now before the world for answer.—Exchange.

He Backslid.

Nearly everybody in Michigan knows Burr, who used to start a newspaper about once a month the year round, generally bringing them out in Grand Rapids, but sometimes making a flying trip to other points. Burr could not stand to be told that he lied about his circulation, was on the fence as a politician, and that he didn't know anything about publishing a paper; and when men threatened to sue of trash him, he only smiled a sad smile and wished that mankind wouldn't get excited. During a religious revival at Grand Rapids, Burr was converted, and it frequently happened that religious people called at his office to talk with him. One day a minister came in, and, after talking a while, proposed prayer. He was in the act of kneeling, when his foot struck one of the outside forms, which was leaning against the leg of the stone ready to be lifted up, and over it went, making a bushel of pi. Burr looked at the ruin wrought, thought of the two weeks of overwork, and commenced taking off his coat, saying: "I'm trying to be a Christian and set a good example, but rat my buttons if I can't lick you in two minutes. The clergyman backed down stairs in time, dodging the lybrush on the way, and Burr backslid at once and sent down for a pint of stimulants.

WHILE the postal route agent on the Boston and Providence Railroad was asserting the mail, the other day, he was horror-struck at the following address on a postal card: "Mr. James Burns, alias John M. Flinn, in care of Mike Duffy or his sister, Lizzie Duffy, her cousin Moll McCarthy, corner of Gross street and Jerry Bagan's Bill, North Main street, Taunton, Mass., wholesale fish peddler and tin horn artist. If not there, elsewhere."

Corn is said to be sweeter if boiled with the inner husk on. Strip the husk back, pick off the silk, then put the husk back again over the ear of corn and boil.

Who are Blessed.

Blessed is the man who minds his own business.

Blessed are the single people that are content to remain so.

Blessed is the old bachelor who don't hate cats and pincushions.

Blessed are the married people that don't wish they were single.

Blessed is the old maid who don't hate old people and children.

Blessed is the woman who never says to her husband "I told you so."

Blessed is the friend who never requests the loan of your umbrella.

Blessed is the poor relation who never looks up to you for money.

Blessed is the man who can sew on his own buttons when the baby is crying.

Blessed is the woman who won't marry a widower—providing he's your father.

Blessed is the husband who never says his mother's pies were better than his wife's are.

Blessed is the rich relation who never looks down upon you—when you are in the gutter.

Blessed is the mother-in-law who never reminds you that you married above your station.

Blessed is the man who gives his wife ten cents without asking what she is going to do with it.

Blessed is the neighbor who is so busy about his own affairs that he has no time to try to injure yours.

Blessed is the wife (formerly a widow) who never calls up the virtues of the "dear departed" for No. 2 to emulate.

Blessed is the woman that don't scold when the stovepipe falls down on the dinner table, and—blessed is the man who can fix it up again without swearing.

How to Fail in Business.

[Detroit Free Press.]
Out on Michigan avenue a man near 70 years of age started a small confectionery store some months since, and the other day sent word to his three creditors up town that he had failed and desired to compromise. His wife went down to the store, which they found in full blast, and she told him to go home. "You see, shentlemen, I do no peesiness, and my family eat up all der brofitts," explained the tradesman, by way of excuse. "You owe me $12," replied one of the creditors, "and each of these others $15 apiece; that makes $42." "Shust forty-two," sighed the old man. "Now, then, how much money have you on hand?" "Shust sixty tollars and no more." "Very well, as you have had bad luck, we will settle with you for one hundred and twenty cents on the dollar, and you can go on as before."

"Yaw, I will do dot, shentlemen, and I am much obliged for such kind treatment." He got out his money, the twenty per centum was added to the claims and paid, and before the creditors retired, he insisted on treating them to ice cream. They had been gone less than an hour when the old policeman rushed out and halted a policeman and said: "If I fails in peesiness and says 120 cents on the dollar, vat does it mean?" "It means you don't know how to fail," was the reply. "Ish dot possible?" whispered the old man. "I should say so." "Vell, I goes back to der shoe peesiness again. Ven I fails in that peesiness I makes everything. Ven I fails in this peesiness, I pays more as I owes."

"The Woods is Full of 'Em."

[Indianapolis News.]
This expression is in frequent use in this State, both in conversation and composition, and yet its origin is probably known only to one in a thousand of those who use it. A gentleman who claims to know the origin of the phrase for the news the following as the manner in which it was first used: In the neighborhood of Washington, Wayne County, lived a well-known character named Bill Dean. He was what is generally termed a "smart Aleck," always endeavoring to perpetrate a joke at somebody's expense. One day, while riding to Richmond, every foot of which he knew, he espied an old gentleman named Chessum, so-called for a hunt, earnestly looking up a tree. Approaching him, Dean asked: "Can you tell me the way to Richmond?" "There was two of 'em run up this tree," was the response of the old gentleman, who was somewhat deaf. "I didn't ask you anything about squirrels. How far is it to Richmond?" "One of 'em just went in that hole; didn't you see him?" said the old man earnestly. Out of patience, Dean yelled out: "You must be a d-d old fool!" "Yes," Chessum responded, still gazing upward, "the woods is full of 'em."

The Science of Health says, if farmers would avoid suddenly cooling the body after great exertion, if they would be careful not to go with wet clothing and wet feet; and if they would not over-eat when in that exhausted condition, and bathe daily, using much friction, they would have little or no rheumatism.

If the person who sent us the following conundrum will send us his address, he will hear of something to his advantage: What is the difference between a slice of ham and a newly-married woman running off with another fellow? Ans.—One is being fried and the other's a fleeing bride.—Norristown Herald.

Their County Paper.

It has been the endeavor of the RECORDER, during the past four years of its publication, to present to the reader all the local news of the day in a condensed form, avoiding all that is purient and unfit for publication in

A FIRST-CLASS FAMILY NEWSPAPER.

And pruning each item of all unnecessary verbiage, thus not only increasing its scope of its usefulness, but actually giving more news than papers one-half larger. Increasing experience has also enabled the Editor to more successfully meet the wants of the people, and the paper for the ensuing year will be better than ever before. Try it.

Is this thing to be allowed? Are we to sit calmly by and see a man and his brother subjected to such treatment and make no protest?

To know that a man has been married is to know that he has suffered. But to know that he has been the unfortunate possessor of three very lively wives at one time, is to know that his life has been sufficiently embittered.

Without thrusting him behind the bars of a prison.

That he was indiscreet, we admit; but that should not be looked upon as a crime.

When we think of the agony he must have suffered, trying to furnish a house to suit three different women: when

The Newspaper Law.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to continue their subscription.
2. If subscribers under the discontinuance of their periodicals, the publisher may continue to send them until all arrearages are paid.
3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their periodicals from the office to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have notified the publisher and ordered them discontinued.
4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the papers are sent to the former address, they are held responsible.
5. Any person who receives a newspaper and makes use of it, whether he has ordered it or not, is held in law to be a subscriber.
6. If subscribers pay in advance, they are bound to give notice to the publisher, at the end of their time, if they do not wish to continue taking it; otherwise the publisher is authorized to send it on, and the subscribers will be responsible until express notice, with payment of all arrears, is sent to the publisher.

A TEXAS editor was recently indicted for publishing his paper on the Sabbath.

GENERAL GRANT is expected to arrive in San Francisco about the 23rd of this month.

The Louisville Commercial says it would not be surprised if Dr. Blackburn makes a very useful Governor.

The Ohio State canvass has commenced in earnest, and the political fun will continue to increase till the election.

The late Treasurer of the Home Missionary Society, Charles Demond, has been arrested for embezzlement. The amount embezzled is near sixty thousand dollars.

It is said that the negroes in quite a number of parishes in Louisiana are making arrangements for a general leave taking for Kansas, as soon as their crops are gathered.

The Owen News of last week announces J. J. Orr, of Owen, as a candidate for Circuit Judge in this, the Eleventh Judicial District. The election takes place next August.

Those who figure on Presidential possibilities are now speculating as to what will be the result in the event the election of the next President is thrown into the House of Representatives.

CALIFORNIA gave the Republican State ticket a majority. Hayes' veto of the Chinese bill did not hurt the Republicans as seriously as the numerous new parties slaughtered the Democrats.

BLUE JEANS WILLIAMS, of Indiana, attended the Governor-making at Frankfort on the 2d inst. It was with him as it is with all other strangers who come to Kentucky, he admired the Kentucky women.

In New Hampshire there is considerable opposition to the law which imposes a tax on all church property worth over one thousand dollars. The law has been denounced from the pulpit on several occasions.

The Exposition opened in Cincinnati on Wednesday. An immense procession headed by President Hayes and Secretary Sherman was the principal feature the first day. The city is now clad in its holiday attire.

The Newport Local says that the negro lynched near Union, last Friday night, went to hell. The Local direct communication with that place which enables it to speak so positively of the arrivals there? The Local is a reliable paper.

The full term of Circuit Court adjourned Monday evening. Very few cases were tried by the juries, which were retained but a day or so before being finally dismissed. It was a very quiet time of court, but considerable business was disposed of.

In Caldwell County there has been a disturbance ever since the election, and one night last week, the house of one of the parties that has been engaged in the trouble, was entered by some of his opponents, who beat him and his wife most severely.

BEN DEERING has withdrawn from his position as editor of the Lexington Transcript. He could not agree with the owners of the paper in regard to the charges made against Governor Blackburn by the Cincinnati Gazette. The Transcript has lost its most forcible writer.

The Republicans have walked off with the elections in both California and Maine. In the latter State they claim the victory over the Greenbacks by 20,000 and over the Democrats by 40,000. In California the Democrats secured no officers of any importance.

ONE day last week, a man named Lyons shot and killed a man and his horse in Switzerland County, Indiana. The men had been enemies for several years, and the same man had been shot by Lyons' father for the same slanderous conversation indulged in many years ago.

The President appointed W. H. Hayes, of Springfield, to fill the vacancy occasioned in the United States Judgeship by the death of Judge Bland Ballard. Mr. Hayes was a Lieutenant Colonel in the Federal Army, and under General Harlan, whose influence probably had its effect in his behalf.

DURING the past year Judge Drane has held ten weeks of special courts for the disposition of important cases which could not be disposed of at the regular terms for the want of time. For this extra work he gets no pay. How many other Judges in the State would thus extensively accommodate litigants?

It is a lack of confidence in the law being enforced that causes the quiet, peaceable citizens to resort to the means that punished the negro with death at Union, last Thursday night. Speedy trials and sure punishment of offenders are the only things necessary to bring about a change in this lynch business now so prevalent in this State.

The Louisville Tobacco News says, the crop prospect has improved during the past month under the influence of good rains, and it is now the general opinion that the tobacco crop in the west will fall much short of that of last year—which is proving to be about 60 per cent. of an average. A little fall is desired, as a portion of the crop was planted quite late.

The New York World, says the Hartford Times, that the remains of the late Alexander T. Stewart were recovered last November, and that the sum of $50,000 was paid for them. The fact that such a sum was paid to the ghouls is more appalling than was the announcement of the robbery of the body. It is an awful premium for them to repeat the crime.

The report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for the month of August says: "Reviewing the results of the year, with an extra wheat crop harvested, and in a large degree sold, the crop good, the prospect of an extra crop of fall grass, a large crop of hogs for the packing season, and ample corn with which to fatten them, and it seems to us Kentucky farmers have little to complain of, and much to be thankful for."

The approach of cold weather is causing the Memphis refugees to think about an early return to the grief-stricken city, although the fever is as bad there now as it has been any time this fall, from twenty-five to thirty deaths and from forty to forty-five new cases being reported daily. After the fever has disappeared it will take many months for the city to regain its business, which has suffered so severely.

ONE day last week, G. W. Anderson, Jr., of Carrollton, shot and killed one Charles Turner. Turner had been at work for Anderson, who has the contract for building a turnpike from Carrollton to Worthville, and had been discharged some days before the killing, on which day he went to where Anderson was at work, when the quarrel which resulted in the killing was had. Anderson gave himself up to the authorities and was acquitted on the examining trial.

The charges made against the present Governor of this State are of too serious a character to be treated with contempt any longer. If Governor Blackburn is innocent and wrongfully accused, why does he not attempt to satisfy his constituents of the fact? If, on the other hand, he is guilty, he should not hesitate to resign his office. His conduct in relation to the Gazette's charges is producing very unfavorable comments on the part of many of the Democrats in this section.

We have before us the charter of the North Bend Baptist Female Institute, to be located in Boone County. The charter was granted in 1854; the books for subscriptions were to be placed in the hands of Gabriel J. Gaines, Ben. M. Allen, Owen Kirtley, Leonard Stephens, John V. Scott, Daniel Platt, Wm. Huch, John D. McGill, George F. Northeast and Cary T. Allen. To what extent this enterprise was prosecuted, we are unable to say, and are sorry it was not a success.

STATE NEWS.

The Hard Scabble plum trees are white with blossoms.

The Breckinridge News calls Hardin County the Breathitt of the Salt River country.

A monument to the memory of the late Judge Elliott is now spoken of by some of the State papers.

Warren County hogs are selling from 13 to 2 cents gross. Very few will be fed for market.

Joseph Craig, of Bourbon County, is said to be seven feet four inches in height, and weighs 400 pounds.

Glasgow Times: Fishing has knocked under to the more fascinating employment of pawpaw hunting.

Week before last, Senator John S. Williams sold 49 hogheads of tobacco of his own raising, in Cincinnati.

The Greenwald murder trial is under way at Owensville, and promises to be a long and troublesome affair.

The Bowling Green Democrat says dry murrain has killed a number of horses and cows on farms in Warren.

A Glasgow lady has twins so much alike that she is obliged to tie a string around the arm of one to tell them apart.

A three-year-old son of Joseph Bennett, of Henderson, choked to death while trying to swallow a grain of coffee.

Rowan County has recently sent two convicts to the Penitentiary, the first convictions since the organization of the county.

Three prisoners escaped from the Cynthiana jail, Monday morning, by sawing a large rock out near one of the windows.

Governor Blackburn's first official act was the remission of a balance of $2,000, due the State from Mrs. Haggan, bondsman of Charles Brent.

At the present time Barren's poor-houses contains twenty-five inmates. They are of all colors and sizes, and very nearly of all shapes.

The Eminence Constitutionalist says that Col. Tom Marcus, ex-Register of the Land Office, will begin the publication of a Democratic paper in his county.

William Hundley, a young man and inmate of the Lexington Asylum, suicided, one day last week, by hanging himself to the transom of his room with a handkerchief.

Ferrel, the convict who recently escaped from the Penitentiary, hasn't been recaptured. It is also said that he is an escaped convict from the Tennessee Penitentiary.

The Court-house Committee at Bardonia is going to reduce the expense by renting the Court-house for dramatic entertainments in competition to the public halls.

J. W. Bowman, late regent of Kentucky University, but deposed by the Curator, has brought suit against the University for $23,000 and upwards, all of which will amount to the sum of $30,000.

Judge Noah A. Smith, one of the pioneers of the State, died, last week, at Glasgow. He was born in Virginia in 1809, and came to Kentucky when a young man, growing up with the State, and making an enviable reputation.

A cow belonging to William Howard, near Cynthiana, dropped a calf that she had carried twelve months, which actually measured six feet and eight inches in length and four feet and two inches in height. It is quite a curiosity.

Samuel Fray, who lives about 4 miles from Maysville, found a very curious stone on his farm, one day last week. It was two feet in length, and one foot wide, about six inches thick, and had the date "1801" and the initials "D. B." engraved upon it.

Hart County has organized a society for the apprehension and punishment of horse thieves, with a President, Secretary and Board of Directors. A reward of $100 will be paid for the capture of any horse thief who steals a horse from any member of the society.

Greenup Independent: Our last reports coming in by word of mouth from Boone farmers, indicate that an interesting warfare was enlivening the red brush on Nigger Hill, near that place. Some parties were expected to be shuffled off, which would not be deplorable.

During the recent heavy rains in the vicinity of Bloomfield, near Bardonia Junction, the store house of Jno. Terrell was washed away and demolished, the iron safe, even, being washed into the creek, broken, and part of the contents destroyed. The total loss is about $7,000.

W. Johnston, brother-in-law of Judge Hargis, Circuit and County Clerk, who was placed on the witness stand as a witness by the plaintiff was kept for eight days. The attorneys were in and out, watching the case with great eagerness.

Danville Advocate: A 12-year-old boy named Kates, shot B. Cobb and Arthur Reynolds last Monday, at Mr. Riddle's, Jessamine County. Cobb and Reynolds had stolen a watermelon and were quietly eating, when Kates, who was watching the patch, slipped up within a few feet of them and poured both barrels of a heavy loaded gun into them. He then went to the house and asked Mr. Riddle to load his gun as he wanted to kill them. They are desperately wounded. Reynolds can hardly recover.

SHONINGER'S NEW IMPROVED ORCHESTRAL AND CYMBELLA ORGANS.

D. H. BALDWIN & CO.

I call the attention of every organ buyer to these instruments. They combine the most important changes in style and novelties in design of cases; also improvements for the protection of the instruments. Each organ contains clock works and a new device for closing the pedals and keeping out mice. The case is of black walnut; the keys of ivory and the sharp ebony; the wind chest and sounding or reed board are made by a peculiar process, so that they will not crack, shrink or swell. Having taken the management of their sale for the States of Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee and West Virginia, we offer these instruments at wholesale or retail at prices that will enable hundreds of families to buy a thoroughly made and reliable organ. Every Shoninger organ is fully warranted for five years, and is guaranteed to give satisfaction to the purchaser.

FOR THE WEAK

NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED.

Dr. Hasbrouck's

ELECTRIC BELTS.

The afflicted can now be restored to perfect health and bodily energy without the use of medicine of any kind, and without the slightest inconvenience to the patient's habits or daily occupation.

Reader, are you afflicted?

And you wish to regain your health, strength and energy of former years? Do any of the following symptoms meet your distressed condition? Do you feel nervous, debilitated, feeble, timid, and lack the power of will and action? Are your kidneys, stomach and bowels in a disordered condition? Do you suffer from rheumatism, neuralgia or aches and pains? Have you been indiscreet in early years and find yourself harassed with a multitude of gloomy symptoms? Are you subject to loss of memory, have spells of fainting, fullness of blood in the head, feel listless, morose, unfit for business or pleasure, and subject to fits of melancholy? Are you subject to any of the following symptoms: restless nights, nightmare, palpitation of the heart, headach, confusion of ideas, dizziness in the head, dimness of sight, &c.? Thousands of young men, the middle-aged, and even the old suffer from nervous debility. Thousands of females, too, are broken down in health and spirits from disorders peculiar to their sex, and who, from false modesty or neglect, prolong their sufferings. Why then further neglect a subject of such vital importance when the remedy can be so easily procured?

Dr. Hasbrouck's

ELECTRIC BELTS.

For self-application to any part of the body, meet every requirement. The most eminent physicians endorse them, and we offer the most convincing testimony direct from the afflicted themselves, who have been restored to Health, Strength and Energy after dragging in vain for years. Send at once for descriptive circular, which will be mailed free, containing information worth thousands of dollars to the afflicted of either sex. Call on or address (all communications confidential).

JUDGE LYNCH.

An Attempted Outrage and Its Swift Retribution.

Another attempt at a dastardly crime was made in the Union neighborhood last Wednesday night. The particulars which we have collected are as follows:

George B. Beller, aged about 16, and who for several years has lived at Mr. P. Dickey's, near Union, was aroused from his slumbers by some person laying his hand on his shoulder. He awoke and saw a man standing over him, and he saw a lighted match. He instantly sprang from his bed and started down stairs screaming, which brought Mr. Dickey to her, when she informed him someone was in her room. Mr. Dickey hastened to the room, but found no one; but, upon further search, found a hat and a pair of shoes which he recognized as the property of a colored man who had been at work for him about two months; and that he had made his exit through the window in an adjoining room, a portion of the window sash being moved.

The news of the attempted crime spread like wild-fire, and early next morning search was made for the offender. A search was made some time in the afternoon before he was captured in Kanton County by Fernando Carpenter, who took him to Union and put him in charge of the officers.

The trial was held before Judge P. M. Bannister, and being late in the evening, he was placed under guard in the town hall over night, when he was to be sent to Burlington jail.

About 10 o'clock, Marshal Riley noticed that there was an unusual number of men to be seen on the streets, and, fearing an attempt might be made to take the prisoner from him, concluded he would re-enforce his guards, and for that purpose went out in town, leaving the negro in charge of two men. He had been absent but a few minutes when a crowd numbering about 30 or 40 men entered the hall and took the prisoner from the guards, and started down the pike toward Florence. By this time the prisoner had started back to the hall, only to discover the crowd leaving town with the doomed negro, who was taken about a quarter of a mile from Union, and was taken to a house, where shots being sufficient to do the work, one taking effect in the right cheek and the other in the right side of the neck, severing the artery. Dr. Furnish, who arrived there followed the crowd, and found the negro lying in the road, the mob having dispersed as soon as it accomplished its work. The body was taken back to town, where an inquest was held next morning and the remains interred.

The negro confessed to the officers that he had entered the room of Miss Beller with criminal intent, but at the same time made statements which he no doubt thought would somewhat mitigate the offense, but they were so absurd that no person believed him. So quickly was the deed done that he had no time to make any confession, and he was charged of the prisoner apprehended no trouble till within a very few moments before he was taken to the jail for his victim. None of the parties to the killing were recognized by the guards.

War on Garrison.

THE quiet scene in the neighborhood of Garrison, now comes to the front with a shooting match in which two men serve as targets for the other. That locality is the last in which one would expect anything as startling as a shooting scene to occur. It has happened, and putting the fragments of the history of the affair together as they came to us, we get the following: For some time past there has been dispute between Henry Barlow and old man Barnett about the location of a line between their lands, and on last Monday, March McNeely, Barnett's son-in-law, was assisting the County Surveyor run the line in dispute, which is said to pass Barlow's house on Barnett's land, when Barlow concealed himself in the bushes, and when McNeely was near the line, he fired a shot from the bushes, giving him the contents of a double-barreled shot gun, but seriously wounding him. McNeely replied with his pistol but to no effect. At the last account, Barlow had not been apprehended.

Since the above was put in type we have heard a different account of the shooting, which we give for what it is worth. It is as follows: Barlow was in the field when he saw the surveying party approaching, and in which were McNeely and two of the Barnett boys, whom he ordered to keep off his land, and he said to the boys, "I will not come on the premises if you choose." McNeely then proposed to the boys that they go on in spite of Barlow's commands, and over the fence they went, when Barlow commenced firing on them with his double-barreled pistol and returning the fire. The combatants were about sixty yards apart when the shooting was done.

McFarland and Bowman, two parties charged with being concerned in the shooting, are under arrest awaiting the examining trial. A third account of the affair which we have heard is that the Barnett boys, with either of the foregoing, and it is impossible to get at the true inwardness of the affair until the facts are brought out in court.

While in Florence, Friday afternoon, we called at the home of John W. Crigger & Conner's store, and found them busily engaged packing and boxing their goods preparatory to shipping them to Mr. Sterling, where they were to be taken to the market.

Both the members of the firm are industrious business men, and no doubt they will do a thriving business in their new locality. Florence society will lose several good members by the departure of Mr. Crigger's family, and the best wishes of a host of friends go with them. Mr. W. Y. Crigger has for a long time been prominent in Florence, and his going to the new store has created the appointment of a new P. M. for the office at that place, and his mantle has fallen on P. A. Hampton, who now manipulates the office. When Mr. Crigger was made known his intention of leaving the town, there was quite an interesting and warm contest between three or four persons who wanted the office. The contest was long and ended in a draw, and now Mr. Hampton holds the key to the mail-cock.

Snyder & Swetnam have now command of the mail-cock, and they are organizing a tremendous boom for the fall trade. They know how to buy goods, they know how to sell them, and they know how to keep the people at the lowest possible figure.

Wagstaff & Cantler's carriage factory has been doing a good business this season, and has turned out a large number of new buggies. For a while they were compelled to run the shop night and day, and they were not able to keep up with their work. This is certainly encouraging to the boys, who are truly deservng of success.

The Aurora Fair, last week, was well patronized by the Cornercrackers, and especially in saying that the crop is of a very good quality. The late season materially assisted in maturing it, and, with favorable weather, at least an average crop, both in quantity and quality, will be put on the market this season from Boone.

The Moonlight at Woodside.

The picnic at Woodside Park, Friday night, was the last of a series of very pleasant moonlight picnics which have been given at that place this season, and under the efficient management of Shelby Kich, Will Allen, and Charles Kich, Cleveland, Will Tappan, Chas. Cleveland and others. With a single exception, each picnic was well attended, and the most delightful time imaginable was enjoyed by all, as we were assured on any occasion to meet the pleasure of any person. As the season passed, these picnics increased in popularity, each adding a number of new attendants, who were always pleased with their cordial reception and courteous entertainment. Mr. Bedinger, the owner of the park, and his estimable wife and accomplished daughter, were on hand at each picnic, contributing all in their power to the enjoyment of the visitors. The following is a list of the names, so far as we can call to mind, of the young ladies who graced Woodside Park with their presence and pleasant smiles Friday night: Miss Dell Scott, Miss Sue Rich, the Misses Bedinger, Miss Ida Moore, Miss Sadie Riggs, Miss Catherine Timmerlake, Miss Mary Light, Miss Kate Perry, Miss Lucy McLaughlin, Miss Fannie Higgins, Miss Mary Light, Miss Carrie Clark, Miss Eva Searls, Miss Alice Fox, Miss Kate Lewis, Miss Lisa Riggs, Miss Minnie Senior, Miss Kate Kreyfeth, Miss Nannie Winston, Miss Lou Corey, Miss Lillie Collins, Miss Mary Timmerlake, Miss Ollie Beck, Miss Kate Sanders, Miss Sarah Rich, Miss Annie McGlasson, Miss Carrie Pace, Miss Montague, Miss Jennie Armstrong, Miss Willa Dugger, Miss Anna Gray, Miss Bessie Allen, Miss Courtney Leathers, of New Orleans, and Miss Bright of Winchester, Ky. Among the married persons present were George M. Bedinger and wife, Timmerlake and wife, Ed Porter and wife, Mrs. T. L. Swetnam, Mrs. Light, Mrs. Maria McGregor, Mr. R. K. Dulaney, and Wood Cleveland and wife. Thus, it may be seen, the talented young editor of the Clark County Democrat, Secretary of the K. P. A., and his friend William Miller, of Winchester, Ky., were among the attendants, Friday, and were the guests of the late Timmerlake and wife. The Brother Stewart's first appearance in Northern Kentucky, and we are sorry his sojourn was so brief, he arriving Friday afternoon and returning Saturday morning; however, we have every reason to believe it was of the most pleasant, and that he learned that all the Kentucky beauties are not to be found within the limits of the Blue-grass region. Come down again, Brother Stewart.

Arrested and Released.

Last Thursday, Marion Douglas made affidavit before the County Clerk, that he had been one of the guards who had charge of him at Bellevue previous to his being shot, $50 to allow him to escape; that Kidwell took the money, and under the belief that he (Douglas) would be allowed to escape, he made an attempt, when he was shot by Ooms, one of the guards who was ignorant of the bargain made with Kidwell. Upon this affidavit a warrant was issued for the arrest of Douglas, and he was taken to the jail, where he was placed in the hands of Constable Ed Fowler, who arrested Kidwell and brought him before Judge Lynch. The case against Douglas, the accused, is dismissed on the grounds that he was not a legally appointed guard, having been appointed by the Constable, who has no authority to appoint guards to watch a prisoner, this authority being vested in the court.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

September 9th—Florence.

JOHN B. BOKER sold to Henry Boker sold to the Baptist Church to Henry Tanner for $500.

MR. PAT HAMPSON has been appointed Deputy Postmaster by W. Y. Crigger, and now has charge of the mails. Uncle Pat is selfish; he wants all the females too.

ED WAGBAG, who was appointed Monday morning, with Conner Yeager as principal. The amount allowed this district for the five months is $200, the principal to furnish an assistant. He could make more than that during the year.

Big preparations are being made for the Baptist Association, which meets with the church here Wednesday. It will be held in Carpenter's Grove, at the junction of the Union and Lexington pikes. In case of bad weather, it is but a stone's throw to the north, which is large and commodious.

THE Fair Board met last Saturday. Owing to the heavy rain, the board has been adjourned. The Fair, he was not able to present his final report for the year, but the members of the Board are satisfied that the surplus on hand after paying all expenses will pay off the greater part, if not all, the indebtedness that has been hanging over the Association for several years.

THERE was a large attendance at the auction sale of Crigger & Conner, Monday. There was nothing sold but some refuse goods, which went off at good prices. The dwelling and store were put up but not sold, only $1,800 being offered for them. I have been told that an Ohio man has offered more than that privately, and he will probably get it and open a dry goods and grocery house.

Petersburg.

As usual, the Aurora Fair was beset with heavy rains last week, plenty of mud and a small attendance being the result. Friday and Saturday were fine days, however, and the people turned out in liberal numbers to help the Board of Directors out. The usual crowd of country boys, cyclists and bicyclists were conspicuous by their absence from their monopolized corner until the last two days, when they did their best (or worst) to make up for lost time.

MR. GEORGE H. LLOYD, who has been long lingering between life and death, died at his home here August 26th, about 8 o'clock p. m. By his request, his remains were placed in a vault in Bellevue Church, from which they were removed and buried in the Petersburg cemetery, last Sunday evening, by the Odd-Fellows, of this city. ALOYE.

She stands beside the cottage door
To watch the day
Her raven hair is parted o'er
With tresses of silver gray;
And many a line of sadness sears
That tell yet lovely face.
To mark where slow and silent tears
Have left their lasting trace.
And still her whispered thoughts will tell
Of scenes that are no more,
And scan the once-loved forms that dwell
On men's way shadowy shore;
Again the little cot to deck,
That now so empty stands,
Again to feel around the neck
The touch of tiny hands.
How long the weary spirit cries,
Within this world of pain,
Ere "neath the never-fading skies
I meet them once again?"
And as she views the fair night,
Slow sweeping to the west,
A murmured prayer in faith tight
To Him who gives rest.

FIRTS.

The serious flirt among us is especially dangerous; and we question if the boldest American, or the most impassionate Italian, ever did more damage than the quiet, unobtrusive English flirt, who takes sentiment as his point of action and platonism as his point of d'apprit. Soft eyes that look dark and melancholy in the twilight; a sweet, sad voice that awakens responsive echoes in the imagination of the hearer; a languid, still and self-contained manner, giving the impression of a reserved fund of force, a talent, feeling, capacity for sorrow, of power of sympathy—these are the various items that make up the stock-in-trade of the sentimental flirt; and with these he or she dispenses sweet pain and pleasant anguish to all around. All that, who are weak enough to be deceived; and who take time and toil for shining silver and ruddy gold. How much mischief these sentimental flirts do in their day! They give you the impression that you and you only are the one sweet woman whose love is needed for their happiness. Your touch can heat them, your smile rejoice; your love render blessed. You give in to the fond illusion—one of the most seductive to a true woman—and find that what is taken in as an experimentalist takes a cut or a dog for vivisection; and that you are only one of the many who have been taken before you—illustrate that point of female credulity and womanly soft-heartedness which the flirt has set himself to learn by all the methods given to man. Or take the tragic flirt from the other side of the house, that beautiful little woman with big eyes, melancholy voice, who sings sad love songs as if she had felt them, and round whom melancholy clings as a graceful garment, how many men has not she captured and drowned in the unfathomable abyss of her vanity. She looks all sorrow, and her life has not a cloud; she seems all sentiment, and no other millstone is harder, more prosaic; she gives you the impression of one seeking consolation, and the merriest little prig who dances all night in pink and rosebuds is no more light of heart, more free from care, than a sham throughout, and she alights in the does not feel. But clever men believe in her, and good ones fall down and worship her, and she rides on the crest of the wave in the world's esteem; while her sister, who disdains falsehood and coquetry alike, gets only scant admiration, and her heart, which never deceived a human being, is disregarded as a common kind of thing, worth little love and less endeavor.

A Few Suggestions.

Never try to beat a cold into doing a thing, for if nervous he may turn out a vicious horse, and if stupid he may become stubborn. Remember that by patience and gentleness he can be got to do anything that will not hurt him.

When the horse shows signs of shying at an object, do not beat him, but lead him up to it, allowing him to stand and look as he comes closer, and after he examines it a few minutes, he will not fear anything of the kind again. In passing by ledges with a colt, throw in stones and stop him till he takes no notice of the noise.

Before putting on any article of harness, let him smell it, and then rub it against his head, neck and body.

Always start a horse with the voice, never with the cut of the whip. In starting, turn a little to one side, in stopping when going up hill do the same.

Wife Versus Lady.

It is certainly not in good taste for a gentleman to speak of his wife as his lady, or to register the names upon the book of a hotel as "John Smith and lady," or to ask a friend, "How is your lady?" This is all unbecomingly vulgar, and invariably betrays a lack of cultivation. The term of wife is far more beautiful and appropriate and refined, whatever may be said to the contrary. Suppose a lady were to say instead of "my husband," "my gentleman," or suppose we were to speak of "Mrs. Fitz Maurice and her gentleman." The thing would be positively ridiculous, and its obverse is none the less so if rightly considered. A man's wife is his wife, and not his lady. We marvel that this latter term is not utterly tabooed in such connection, at least by educated people. It ought to be left for the exclusive use of codfish aristocracy.

A Hint to Boys.

A philosopher has said that the true education for boys is to teach them what they ought to know when they become men. What is it they ought to know then?

1. To be true; to be genuine. No education will be worth anything that does not include this. A man had better never learn a letter in the alphabet, and be true and genuine in intention and action, rather than, being learned in all sciences and in all languages, to be at the same time false at heart and also counterfeit in life. Above all things teach the boy that truth is more than riches, more than culture, more than earthly power or position.

2. To be true in thought, language and life—pure in mind and in body. An impure man, young or old, poisoning the society where he moves with smutty stories and impure example, is a moral ulcer, a plague spot, a leper, who ought to be treated as were the lepers of old, who were banished from society and compelled to cry "Unclean" as a warning to save others from the pestilence.

3. To be unselfish. To care for the feelings and comfort of others. To be polite. To be just in all dealings with others. To be generous, noble and manly. This will include a genuine reverence for the aged and things sacred.

4. To be self-reliant and self-helpful even from early childhood. To be industrious always and self-supporting at the earliest proper age. Teach them that all honest work is honorable, and that an idle, useless life of dependence is a disgrace.

When a boy has learned these things: when he has made these ideas part of his being, however young he may be, however poor or however rich, he has learned some of the important things he ought to know when he becomes a man. With these four properly mastered, it will be easy to find the rest.

The Formation of Character.

There is a practical as well as a scientific basis for the position taken by the Rev. Phillips Brooks in a recent discourse, namely, that the law of evolution rules in the moral as well as in the physical world.

Nature does not create, but is always developing. In last summer's roots nature finds the germ for next summer's verdure.

If somebody should give me a diamond to carry to Europe, I can know exactly how much would be lost to the world if I were to drop it into the sea; but if a seed should be given me, I can only regard it with awe as containing concealed within it the food of untold generations.

That is the difference between looking at truth as a diamond or as a seed—as final or germinal.

In all training of character, continuity and economy must be supreme. The notion that character is spontaneous is held by most people in the earlier portion of their lives, and is wrong. When they discover this, nine-tenths change to the other extreme. This is wrong too.

Hosts of young men think that their character will form of itself, and that they will necessarily become better as they grow older. Hosts of old men believe that their character is fixed, and that it is impossible for them to become better.

Such beliefs are foolish. People are also wrong in thinking that they can put off their bad traits and put on good traits.

The old failures can not thus be transformed, but out of the old habits new can be formed. This is what many a poor creature needs to know. We must make what we are to be out of what we are already.

About Women.

At Bolton, England, an Episcopal Church has a woman for a church warden.

There was only a moderate demand for marriage licenses in Chicago, last week, the number issued being ninety-three.

An Association for the advancement of women has been organized in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. It gives a course of free lectures to women.

A New York lady has offered $500 reward for the return of a pet rat. She says she can not sleep till she gets another pet rat, and is hunting the city through for one.

At the marriage of Lord Durnham's second son, eight of the eleven bridesmaids were the bride's sisters. His father-in-law would doubtless be glad to give the rest of his daughters away.

A writer on archery says, a lady walking through the fields, or on unfrequented roads is well protected if she is an expert archer, for a good bow will put an arrow through the stoutest tramp.

A well-patronized and novel company has been organized in New York, and which furnishes, on application by ladies, temporary escorts to places of amusement, or wherever an escort is needed.

Since Miss Abbott helped the Smith Bennett case by her contributions, she has been besieged by letters begging for everything under the sun, from house rents to the baby-jumpers and sewing machines.

The Chicago Exchange for woman's work, receives seven kinds of cake from persons who send it to the rooms and take orders for delivering it twice a week. The prices range from forty to sixty cents per week.

Raising Pigs.

[National Live Stock Journal, Chicago.]
The most important thing for the swine breeder at this season of the year is to get the greatest possible growth from his spring pigs. There is no period in the life of the hog when so great a return for the food consumed is possible as during the first three months, and it is here that the advantages of skillful feeding are apparent. Unless great care be taken, the growth of the pig will be seriously checked when it is from three to five weeks old. The milk of the dam, which was ample to promote a rapid growth in the litter of pigs during the first two or three weeks, is not sufficient to answer the demands of the same litter as they grow older; hence the necessity that pigs should early be taught to look elsewhere for a part of their sustenance. This is an easy matter; a little milk or nutritious food of any kind in liquid form, placed conveniently where the pigs can have access to it at all times, but beyond the reach of the sow, will soon do the work; and it should be replenished frequently during the day. If this is attended to, there will be no stunting of the pigs at this critical period, and their growth will be uniform and rapid. A good clover pasture is a valuable adjunct, and helps wonderfully. The true secret of successful pork making is to push the pig from the date of birth until it is big enough for the market; and the earlier the age at which this point can be reached, the greater is the return for the food consumed.

How Business is Now Done.

The old methods of doing business are fast passing away, and whether the change is for the better or not, those who wish to achieve success must abandon the old and fall into the new. A revolution has been wrought in such matters, and the old methods are daily becoming obsolete. One hundred thousand commercial agents or drummers are now employed to travel the length and breadth of the country in the interest of their employers, and in this fast age no one, unless he holds a monopoly of some good thing, can afford to wait for customers, so great is the competition in every line or branch of business. The Boston Post says:

"The ways of traffic are not the old ways; wooden ships are going out of date, and sailing vessels are giving way to steam; currency is superseded by commercial credit; the cable and telegraph have brought markets closer together; railroads derive their freight profits from the perfection of their terminal facilities; men buy and sell by sample before products and manufactured articles are moved; prices and rates change oftener now in a day than they use to do in a week or a month; everything tends to economy of business friction, to bring things down to the final point by the shortest way, to the performance of the most work by the least machinery."

Salt for Poultry.

The question as to whether salt is injurious to poultry has often been mooted. To get at the true facts, I have been feeding salt to all my poultry, young and old alike, and closely watching the results. I have fed it in cold muck and hot; in bran and everything else, all the spring and summer so far, with the following result:

The poultry will eat all kinds of salted food in preference to unsalted; they are better in health; not a louse of any kind in young or old (the first year I have been fed so), and they are all beginning to molt, many of them laying as though they were not molting. Eggs are cheap now, and the hens will be ready for the fall laying when the weather is cold and eggs are scarce. This may, or may not, be the result of feeding salt largely to them, but I am compelled to believe this to be so, as are some other peculiarities.

I have noticed one feature, which may not be in favor of salt—the hens have seemed to be more persistently inclined to set, it being very difficult to break-off the inclination; they set much closer than usual. All seem voraciously fond of green food of any kind, and have eaten a large quantity of clover, grass, young corn and similar food.

My observation leads me to the conclusion that salt is a needed condiment for all our poultry, and in all points is beneficial to them. Pigeons are excessively fond of salt in any form, and by should not our poultry be also? Such being the true status, it behooves us to consider their needs, and attend to them.—Wm. Horn in Country Gentleman.

A Matter of Fact Astronomer.

Prof. Richard A. Porter, having learned that a Lecture Bureau had circulated a card naming him as a lecturer as now dead, has written a note to the Boston Advertiser, in which he says: "As to my being dead, I can not but think this is a mistake. The study of science suggests extreme caution about matters of fact. But, so far as my own observations extend, I find reason to believe that I am alive. My friends also seem to think me so. You must not think me dogmatic—failing stronger evidence than I yet possess to the contrary—I decline to accept, unhesitatingly, the theory that I am no longer living."

An Irish currier at Ballinacree being ordered to clear the court, did so by this announcement: "Now, then, all ye blackguards that isn't lawyers must leave the court."

THE MATERIAL SHINGLE.

When the angry passions gathering in my mother's face I see,
And she leads me in the bed-room—gently lays me on her knee, Then I know that I will catch it, and my dash in the fancy picture,
As I listen to the patter of the shingle on my breaches.

Every thistle of the shingle has an echo and a sting,
And a thousand burning fancies into active being spring,
And a thousand horns and horns'neath my coat-tail seem to swarm,
As I listen to the patter of the shingle—oh,
so warm.

In a splutter comes my mother—whom I supposed had gone—
To survey the situation and tell her to lay it on;

To see her bending o'er me as I listen to the strain,
Played for her and by the shingle in a wild and weird refrain.

In a sudden intermission, which appears my only chance,
I say: "Strike gently, mother, or you'll split
my Sunday pants."

She stops a moment, draws her breath, the shingle holds aloft,
And says: "I had not thought of that; my son, just take them off!"

Holy Moses and the angel cast thy pitying glances down;
And thou, talented doctor, put a good soft poultice on;

And may I with foils and dunes evertly-ing commingle
If I ever see another word when my mother wields the shingle.

Ell Perkins at Saratoga.

There are three kinds of guests in Saratoga: The jolly young lady who comes to be amused, the rich and ugly young lady who comes here to amuse and stun people, and the aristocratic, worldly lady who comes to maneuver for social status. The worldly who comes to improve her social status is the one who makes up all the social cliques. Her principal business is to sit up firm and find out the money and social status of everyone in the hotel, and then work for introductions to aristocratic parties. Then the clique business commences. About six selfish idiots are sufficient to make a successful clique. The clique once formed, the members sit around all day isolated in some sequestered locality, stare people with aristocratic looks, and scandalize everybody in the hotel.

I joined one of the aristocratic cliques the other day, just to see how it would seem. We sat by ourselves all day—our clique did. Several people whom we used to know quite well in New York came up to speak to us, but we cut them dead. They didn't have money enough to get into our set.
When a young man passed who had recently inherited a large fortune, we sent out one of our clique to bring him up for an introduction, and then we held on to him like grim death.
During the day our clique of six occupied twelve chairs on the balcony of the aristocratic States. We filled these chairs with India shawls, and inlaid fans, and pointed parasols. When any of the poor and vulgar people came near us, we all looked very haughty and talked loud enough to be heard all over the balcony about those dreadful common people in the hotel who were so vulgar as to enjoy themselves. But when nobody was looking we all yawned, fumbled French novels (which we could not read), and sneered with elevated noses. "We didn't come to Saratoga to enjoy ourselves," we said;
"we came here to be aristocratic."

I stood their aristocratic business just one day, and then I broke. I could not stand stupidity any longer, even if it were aristocratic. I sighed for a little intellectual fun, and when I saw a group of happy young ladies telling anecdotes, satirizing, humbugging and laughing in a natural way, I went straight away and joined them.

Just opposite us sat a party of young ladies who came here to amuse and stun people. The principal beau among them had just returned from abroad. He was very English. He could hardly speak our poor American language at all.

"Chawmin' ev'nin', Miss Astor," he said, or rather mumbled, imitating the Cockney dialect.

"Yes, awful charming. Dance tonight, Mr. Livingstone?"
"Aw, kneew, I k'n't dance. I think it's beastly to dance—perfectly atrocious—'s havable! But, isn't it beastly?"

"Oh, no, Mr. Livingstone, it's perfectly lovely. The weather is just too sweet for anything. Just the time for firing on the balconies. They say you are a great flirt, Mr. Livingstone—dreadful!"

"Aw, kneew, Miss Astor. I k'n't flirt. I think it's a hawid practice. I could not think of spooning with a young lady who wasn't 'eiresse—to a $80,000 revenue, yew kneew. Couldn't, no, no!"

"Of course not, Mr. Livingstone.
Why, pa's got four brown-stone fronts, and me four camels' hair shawls and diamonds on diamonds, and—"

"Aw, yew don't say so, Miss Astor.
Do take my arm and we'll have a little stroll all to ourselves, and—"

"And then they promenade out into a dark corner of the balcony.

GENERAL GRANT is expected to arrive in San Francisco this week.

Col. BOB INGERSOLL has been in Cincinnati with his new party.

JUDGE McMANAMA estimates the murders in this State at three a day.

The Boone County Insurance Company has been in existence over a year and has not had a loss to meet.

PRESIDENT HAYES and party escorted to High Bridge last week. They visited the Lexington races on their return.

Mrs. W. O. Pritch has, we learn, brought suit for $50,000 damages against Pete and Thomas Anderson, for killing her husband.

Clark County Democrat.

A valuable dead man is he.

Six tons of gold was landed in New York from an English steamer one day last week. This is enough to make several dollars of change.

The New York Democratic State convention left things in rather a bad condition for the party to carry the State. It split and nominated two candidates for Governor.

The Farmers' Home Journal says, Mr. F. Simms and his family at Pleasant Ridge, Jefferson County, were poisoned, a few Sundays since, by eating toadstools gathered for mushrooms. One child died.

WILL we have another Criminal Court? asks the Eminence Constitutionalist. This is a question which can not be answered with any degree of certainty just now, but so far as our information extends we are of the opinion that the court should be continued, our reasons for which we will give at another time.

Gov. BLACKBURN, it is said, has declared that he will not remit the imprisonment imposed for carrying pistols. That settles the question as to whether or not a person will go to jail when convicted of that offense. Heretofore the Governor has made it the practice to pardon the convicted party of that part of the penalty.

Gov. BLACKBURN intends to investigate the condition of the Penitentiary, and as he is such a humanitarian, the public may expect him to earnestly recommend some radical changes in the prison system. That the State prison is too small for the safe confinement of the large number of convicts now there, can not be denied, and something must be done.

On Wednesday of last week, John Shillito, the merchant prince of the West, died at his home in Mount Auburn, in the 71st year of his age. He commenced in Cincinnati a very poor boy, and by his industry and close attention to business worked himself to the position of the leading merchant west of New York. He had recently erected and stocked an immense store in Cincinnati, which is doing an enormous business.

It took Judge McManama about two hours to deliver his charge to the grand jury, Monday. In the course of his remarks he criticised the petit juries severely for the lenient manner in which they handle the offenders when they have the matter in their hands. The crime of perjury he gave considerable attention, as he did also selling or giving whisky to minors, or selling whisky to men when intoxicated. The charge was very comprehensive.

The immense procession in Cincinnati on Wednesday of last week, the occasion being the opening of the Seventh Industrial Exposition, was very fine, and represented nearly every class of business. The line of march was about four miles long, and the procession was closed in its entire length by a mass of human beings packed so closely that one could hardly tell whether he was himself or somebody else. President Hayes and General W. T. Sherman were in the procession and were greeted with tremendous cheers at some points along their route, while at other points they were suffered to pass in silence. The Exposition was formally opened at nine o'clock that evening, when President Hayes, Governor Bishop and others made brief and very appropriate speeches. This was the Exposition season fully inaugurated and it may now be said to be in full blast.

—George Buford, colored, living near May's Lick, on Saturday, was shot and wounded in four places by a band of twenty-five or thirty men, who broke down his door with an ax. He says that he does not know any cause for the deed. Four men charged with being present when the shooting was done have been arrested and are in jail in Mayville.

—Courier Journal: A crop of tobacco has just been sold in this market by a Hart County man which shows how much neglected wealth there is in Kentucky lands. The yield per acre was 1,833 pounds of tobacco, which sold for $275. The average price of Hart County land is probably about $25 per acre, so that one year's gross revenue was more than ten times the value of the land.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Big Boas.

Mrs. Nora Jackson (nee Miller) and Mr. Jean Hendricks, of Holden, Mo., arrived at the residence of the mother of the former last Tuesday. By the death of her husband Mrs. Jackson is left a widow, and she has returned here to reside with her aged mother. Mr. Hendricks is in for a protracted visit, the guest of Wood and Addie Miller.

I have heard with regret of the sad and untimely death of Mr. J. A. Conley, who with his family emigrated to Texas last spring. Mr. Conley was bitten by a tarantula, some time since, and, after lingering two weeks, death finally relieved him of his sufferings. His family will return to Kentucky.

The Springs have not been so well patronized the past season as usual. That these springs possess almost wonderful medicinal properties is undoubted. We can boast of one of the largest and most commodious hotels in the country. The Springs are easily accessible by either rail or water, and I can but believe that, by a judicious outlay of money and a much stronger belief in the potency of printers' ink, they would soon assume a prominence second to none.

Exp. G. W. Baker's court, commenced Tuesday last week. The docket was an unusually lengthy one, and consumed the greater part of two days.

Our gentlemen doctors, with elongated faces and a forced and feeble attempt at cheerfulness, tell us that the health of the neighborhood was never better. Were it not for the thousands of our good people to increase the population of our country before the next census is taken, the situation of the doctors would be sad indeed.

Petersburg.

Last week, some of our sensational retailers of gossip tried their hands on a little game of excitement by circulating a report that the stammering Gen. Pike was burned at the stake. The sensation was a very tame and short affair, however, because the Gen. Pike, being detained by fog, passed this point after daylight the very next morning in good order, just as these sensational gossips were snuffing their lips over the tale they had told, thinking they had a confirmation of its truth in the fact that the boat was behind time in its upward trip, and were rapidly adding horror after horror to the list of casualties.

The man who started the story in circulation is undoubtedly dead, as he can't be found up to this writing.

The Alloway mansion has its roof on and has donned its coat of weather-boarding. With no mishap to either, the cage will be ready fully as soon as its owner can capture the bird put in it.

Mrs. Marcus Jones and her little daughter, from Memphis, Tenn., are visiting relatives in Boone. Mrs. Jones is a sister of Mr. T. Porter, and everyone in the county (except Joe Wagstaff) knows Porter.

Mr. Elihu Alden, with his mother and family, has moved into the frame residence at Pleasant Ridge, formerly occupied by Capt. A. M. Hyatt; Miss Annie Davidson and her brothers, who have lived there so long, having removed to Cincinnati.

The uncertain old humbug, the Cincinnati Exposition, has opened its capacious maw once more, and is rapidly gobbling the quarters of the curiosity-gazers who daily congregate within its spacious halls to see the sights. Wednesday of last week was the grand opening day, and, having some important business with Hayes and several of his party, I happened in the city in time to see the procession.

It was the grandest mob that city ever saw. Every body went and took his friends or his dog. The procession was variously estimated to be from one hundred to twenty-five thousand people; and the fools who looked on at the show were set down at from forty thousand to a hundred thousand people. Of course, these estimates are not at all very accurate. Your representative planted his understanding on the most elevated curbstone he could find unprompted that he was large enough to take in the whole of it all in. There was a large police force on parade, an innumerable number of light infantry, a sprinkling of mounted dragoons, some light artillery (among the latter might be classed the firm of Riddell & Green, of the Recorder city, who "were there") and then in carriages heavy and suited to the purpose the big game. Hayes, Sherman (W. T.) and Sheridan (Phil), Mayor Jacob, the Chief of Police, the Court-house dignitaries, the street sweepers, E. H. Pendleton, the Board of Police Commissioners, the beer-house politicians, the Exposition Board of Directors, the gutter-snipes, the monkeys, the elephants, camels, dogs, cats and all the rest. After this came the mechanical, art, agricultural and scientific displays, all on wheels, all well advertised, and everything except the horses wearing a nine-by-fourteen cast-iron idiotic smile. Every body smiled, even to the representatives, who, in a sort of confusion or more, as the occasion or the exertion seemed to require. The President was glad to see me, of course, and asked me how I would like to get to the White House. He did, Sherman simply gazed abstractedly at me and said: "A-ha, fine child; boy or girl? Do you know my brother John?" Phil gave me a friendly nod and a shy wink, and asked me if I thought I could take after the famous armed man across Georgia if there was nothing more to prevent them than a few defenseless women and children? The catechism was embarrassing, so I turned my attention to Gov. Bishop, who had reined in his black charger close to my perch and was reaching out his right hand for a friendly shake. The procession moved on, and, you understand, unlike the king in the poem, smiled again.

Hebron.

Charlie Lodge has re-organized in Maj. Holabird's regiment.

Mr. Morgan Helm lost two children, last week, by scarlet fever.

Mr. Bidwell recently sold a two-year-old Hamiltonian filly for $200.

Mr. Wm. Ayler, of Sammie has been lying seriously ill with scarlet fever.

Joe Greer's son, Willie, seriously hurt by being thrown from a horse.

Dude Clore and Frank Crigler are attending college again at Springfield, Ohio.

Crit Gordon and Charlie Davis, of Hebron, have started to the State school at Lexington.

Mike Clore took two premiums on his black mare, one at Alexandria and one at Germantown, Ky.

Jack Crigler has severed his connection with the Hebron Cornet Band. It was a mutual understanding.

Mr. Clappert, of Cincinnati, has rented for one year, with the privilege of buying, the farm of J. W. Davis.

Cincinnati, is visiting the family of Willie Davis.

Our corn is so down and twisted that no corn land will be put to wheat this fall, as the corn cutting will be too late for wheat seeding.

Your Florence correspondent on last Sunday evening, visited our quiet little town and whined away an hour or two with his friends and associates.

On the 10th there were only three men and two boys left in Hebron, caused by the great parade in Cincinnati and the Baptist Association at Florence.

Miss Mollie Gaines, of Hebron, started, on Monday last, for a protracted visit to the Falls City. We know of one heart, at least, that will yearn for her return.

A small tract of land, containing 33 acres, near Hebron, was divided on the 10th among the Crigler heirs, ten in number, giving about three acres to each heir.

Among the many fascinating young ladies at the feast in the wilderness, we noticed Miss Myra McConnell, of East Bend, and Miss Kate Kreylich, of Beach Grove.

Since the aspirator is being used on criminals by the medical fraternity, it is thought that the criminal courts can be dispensed with—saving of both time and expense.

We are under obligations to Mr. Allie Corn and Col. Wm. Watts for transportation to and from the Association; also our friend who conveyed us to Greenwood on the 11th.

Clare & Crigler (Mike and Frank) brought seven premiums from the Alexandria Fair on their horse stock. John Clore took a first ribbon on his brown horse in the all-purpose ring.

If husbands would pay as much attention to their wives in a usual way as they did at the barbecue in order to get to the table themselves, people would not notice the sudden change of affections so quickly.

Ninety per cent. of the present crop of tomatoes are unfit for market except to the canners, owing to their being badly cracked. This neighborhood will deliver about 50,000 bushels, making about 600 bushels daily.

Since our old and much esteemed friend, Jack Stephens, has got to be President of the North Kentucky Agricultural Society, it takes two horses to haul him around. We suppose everybody will understand why it takes that extra horse, as it usually takes only one to haul a hog.

Some sneak-thief burglarized the residence of Gov. Hicks, in Hebron, and carried off two valuable quilts, which Mrs. Hicks prized very highly as keepsakes. Shouldn't wonder if some pawnbroker in Cincinnati could tell something about it.

That little crooked-legged nigger at Burlington ought to attend all nigger fandangies in the country, as he would be of great service to the community if he would continue to net in the manner he did at the Bucktown frolic on the night of the 13th.

Messrs. Bidwell & Crigler carried away the $20 premium at the Aurora Fair trot. Riddell & Norris are attending the Shelbyville and Indianapolis fairs in Indiana, and will probably go to Louisville with their stock, as they have been so successful elsewhere.

We noticed a chap at the barbecue going for a quiver of meat and two loaves of bread; he struck for the bushes, and that is the last we seen of him. The woods have been diligently searched, but no tidings as yet. It is generally supposed that he has gone into a sink-hole to winter.

The glass ball and pigeon shooting at Greenwood, on Thursday last, was well attended by the sporting bloods of the neighboring villages and towns. Your correspondent witnessed a couple of matches wherein all indulged in some very wild shooting except two or three, who are considered crack shots. We kept a record while there, but the want of space forbids publication.

The Barbecue.

The weather last Saturday was all that could be desired for out-door assemblages, and a multitude of persons took advantage of it and attended the Sunday-school barbecue in Craven's woods, near Florence X-Roads. It being advertised as an "old-fashioned barbecue," something entirely new was expected by many who had never attended the like. The cooking of the meat for the occasion was commenced on the grounds the night before, and large crowds visited the pits (or kitchen) during the forenoon, Saturday, to witness the process through which the sheep and the fat-tailed hogs were put preparatory for the table. When the Hebrew Sunday-school arrived, it formed a procession and marched around the cooking department for the edification of the young, as well as many of the older scholars. Having taken a view of this, the school wended its way to a commodious stand erected for the occasion, where all the scholars were furnished comfortable seats for the day. The time for commencing the exercises had now arrived, and they were introduced by an invocation by the school. This was followed by the singing of two songs, "Welcome to All" and "Open Wide the Gates." The next on the programme was the Lord's prayer, which was read in concert in the most perfect manner. The next pieces of music rendered were "The Water of Life" and "Murmur Not." Speech-making was now in order, and Mr. W. T. Tolin, being introduced, for about half an hour entertained the crowd with a very neat speech, at the conclusion of which the school rendered another song, when the meeting adjourned two hours for dinner. At this point of the proceedings, the systematic arrangement of the programme was made apparent by the manner in which the large crowd was admitted in instalments to the table, where each and every one could satisfy his or her appetite; for provisions were abundant, and a large quantity was left over. About 2:30 p. m. the exercises at the stand were resumed and interspersed with music throughout. The first speaker to address the crowd after dinner was Rev. J. S. Kirtley, who occupied the stand just half an hour in delivering a very interesting speech, which was listened to with marked attention by the large crowd. Mr. J. A. Davis and Rev. W. C. Barnett also made a few well-learned remarks, after which the meeting was dismissed, and the crowd, which was estimated at from 1,000 to 1,200 persons, quietly dispersed, having spent a very pleasant day, and withal a profitable and his Sunday-school beneath the shady bowers.

Backtown Badness.

One of those nocturnal rows which are so frequent in Bucktown enlivened that locality again last Saturday night about 8 o'clock. The fight was a rough one, the yelling of the frightened negro women and the volleys of profanity discharged by the belligerents made the night hideous in that section for about an hour. Unfortunately there were no tragic results, although Henry Bates, one of the parties and a would-be slayer, shot at and wounded Tom Marshall in the arm. Two shots were fired, and the wound, which was crowded with colored people. The disturbance was acquiring such proportions that some of the better-disposed negroes came up in town and called for help to suppress it. The fired shot, Constable Fowler, accompanied by some four or five men, repaired to the scene, quelled the mass and arrested Henry Bates and brought him before Judge Hawes, who sent him to jail to await his trial, which was set for Monday; but Sunday morning he was released on bail. Bates and Marshall had collided once before at the picnic Saturday, when Bates cut quite a gash in Marshall's side with a knife furnished him by Marshall to make him nearer his equal in the combat. At the trial, Monday morning, Bates was examined, and the charges will be investigated by the grand jury this week. This unseemly conduct on the part of our colored citizens is becoming very annoying to the white people, and it should be put up at once. They can be taught that they must be peaceable citizens, and the sooner they learn this the better it will be for them. Give them the full benefit of the law.

Religious Items.

The North Bend Association of Baptists meets next year with DeCoursey Creek Church, in Kenton County.

The Baptist Sunday-school Convention will be held at this place, commencing on the 15th of October and to continue three days.

Dr. HALL will occupy the pulpit in the Presbyterian Church at this place on the second Sunday in next month, services to commence at 10:30 a. m.

The Burlington Sunday-school was better attended last Sunday than it has been for some time. The taste of the goodies fed at the Hebrew Sunday-school barbecue, Saturday, still lingered with some of them.

Last Sunday, Rev. Mr. Buffington announced that he was going to be in town for the M. E. Church at this place any longer, for the reason that the Conference now in session may see proper to send him elsewhere. The church going citizens of the town with regret very much to have Mr. Buffington discontinue his ministerial labors here.

One of the worst disasters that it has become our task to chronicle occurred at Greenwood Lake, on the Southern Railroad and the Lexington pike, about a mile and one-half below Florence. The buildings at this place consisted of a depot building, a residence, a large barn, a small store in which Mr. W. L. Bedinger kept a country grocery and attended to the coal and lumber trade in which he was also engaged, a blacksmith shop and a wagon shop which were occupied by Sebastian Menzer, of Florence. These last three buildings stood in a group some distance from the others and immediately on the edge of the road. Saturday night, just before time for closing the store, Mr. Bedinger and a young man named Stephens engaged in a quarrel, in which they used a lighted coal-oil lamp that was on the counter. The oil ignited, and they, assisted by Charles Stephens the only person present with them, commenced firing the flames. The burning oil ran down under the counter onto and around a 50-pound keg of powder which was soon exploded by the intense heat, blowing the roof of the house and one side and end of the building out. The two Stephens were blown out of the room and across the road, while Bedinger was caught in the ruins of the building. In short time the assistance arrived, and it was with considerable difficulty that Bedinger was rescued, he being most dreadfully burnt about the face and one arm and other parts of the person. When taken from the wreck, young Bedinger was perfectly well, and at the last accounts there was much doubt about his recovery. The Stephens, however, sustained an injury, while the other was considerably but not dangerously burned. How any of the boys escaped with their lives is a mystery. The grocery and its contents, including the books belonging to the railroad, both the shops and all combustible material therein, were consumed by the fire. Mr. Bedinger had considerable paper money in his vest pocket which was found after it had been partially burned. There was no insurance on the property. The loss is estimated at $8,000.

The North Bend Association of Baptists held its seventy-seventh annual meeting with the church at Florence last Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Rev. J. A. Kirtley acting as Moderator and S. P. Brady, Clerk. The attendance of ministers from a distance was as large as it has been on other occasions, but the services were rendered not the less interesting on that account. Both the Baptist and the Christian churches were present for the meeting, and on Friday they were not large enough to accommodate the large crowd in attendance. A table was erected in the woods near the Christian church, upon which the provisions brought each day were placed and all invited to partake. The meeting throughout was a very interesting one in all its features.

The fall term of Criminal Court convened Monday about one o'clock, Judge McManis on the bench, and Commonwealth's Attorney Monfort in attendance. Nothing but organizing and instructing the grand jury was done the first day. The jury is composed of the following gentlemen:

Arthur Blythe, Michael Clope,
James Lampton, T. J. Sanders,
Edward Gaines, T. A. Johnson,
W. A. Tanner, Jonas Rouse,
Eliza Garrison, Henry Crisler, Milton Wilhoit, Ben Stephens,
Jno. Winston, Johnson V. Graves,
W. H. Roberts, Alonzo Gaines.
Alonzo Gaines was appointed Foreman. Fall proceedings will be given next week. The Terrell trial has been continued till Monday, and the Sheriff ordered to Owen County to summon 70 men from which to select a jury.

THE SPIRIT OF GREED.

BY MILO A. TOWNSEND.

If there be proof of endless hell
Potential more than all the rest,
It is this endless, boundless greed
That sways the money-mongers' breast.
And sends him mousing through the world,
And makes him spend his life and breath,
And talk and dream of naught but gold,
And for its sake risk hell and death.

The greed of gain hath filled the world
With wild and wanton wars and woe,
With sighs and tears, with griefs and graves,
That God alone or angels know.
What can be done to stay this greed?
It knows no bounds, no love, no law—
'T would stave the entire race of man
To glut its hateful juckal maw.

Even when a million it obtains,
It wants a hundred millions more;
And if perchance it gains its wish,
To stop the tyrant money-power,
And thus, because the few want all,
And ceaseless cry for more and more,
Earth's countless millions homeless roam,
And weep and mourn from shore to shore.

The greedy few who thus want all Entrench themselves behind the laws
They make to screen their damning deeds
And fortify their Shylock's cause.
Lo! Mammon greed still rules the earth,
It rules the church and sways the State;
And hence so little love there is,
And so much selfishness and hate.

In God's great name, can be caught by greed
To stay this tide of grinding greed?
To stop the tyrant money-power,
And help the toiling masses who need?
If ought there is to cure these wrongs,
Then may no other child be born
To run the chase of such a power,
To beg, to starve and die forlorn.

Points of a Good Horse.

"I can't explain what a real good horse is," said one of the best natured dealers in the New York market, to a writer in Scribner's Monthly. "They are as different as men. In buying a horse, you must first look to the head and eyes for signs of intelligence, temper, courage and honesty. Unless a horse has brains you can not teach him anything, any more than you can a half-witted child. See that tall bay there—a fine looking animal, fifteen hands high? You can't teach that horse anything. Why? Well, now, I will show you a difference in heads, but have a care of his heels. Look at the brute's head, that rounding nose, that tapering forehead, that broad, full place below the eyes. You can not trust him. Kick? Well, I guess so! Put him in a ten-acre lot, where he has got plenty of swing, and he'll kick the horn off the moon."

"That's an awful good mare," he added. "She is as true as the sun. You can see breadth and fullness between the ears and eyes. You hurt not hire the mare to eat man or hurt anybody. The eye should be full, and hazel is a good color. I like a small, thin ear, and want a horse to throw his ear well forward. Look out for the brute that wants to listen to all the conversation going on behind him. The horse that turns back his ears till they almost meet at the points, take my word for it, is sure to do something wrong. See that straight, elegant face? A horse with a dishing face is cowardly, and a squarely brute is usually vicious. Then I like a square muzzle, with large nostrils, let in plenty of air to the lungs. For the under side of the head, a good horse should be well cut under the jaw, with jawbones broad and wide apart under the throatle."

"So much for the head," he continued. "The next thing to consider is the build of the animal. Never buy a long legged, stilted horse. Let him have a short, straight back, and a straight rump, and you have got a gentle horse. The withers should be high, and the shoulders well set back and broad; but do not get them too deep in the chest. The fore-leg should be short. Give me a pretty straight hind-leg, the hock low down, short pastern joints, and a round, mulish foot. There are all kinds of horses, but the animal that has these points is almost sure to be slightly graceful, and good-natured, and servicable. As to color, taste differs. Bays, browns and chestnuts are the best. Roans are very fashionable at present. A great many gray mares are bought here for ship-wells in Mexico and Cuba. They do sun, for climate, under a tropical light-colored reason that you find able in summing the most serviceable hind you is with. That circus horse because horse. Many people call a uine piebald. It'll call him a gen-and may happen any time."

When to sell.
Every one who is engaged in any department of agriculture or manufacture is supposed to have some time to time, something to sell or to change. On the disposition of this surplus depends the supply of all articles that the person does not raise, embracing all implements and improvements of every kind that require an outlay. Hence, it is a matter of moment that the people of these things be made at the time the best price will be obtained. Is it possible to be certain of this time? In general, no. There are many articles that constitute exceptions. Those that can not be conveniently preserved must, of course, be thrown on the market at once. Others that are in demand at certain seasons only, will be governed by the season trade. But the most common and valuable products of human industry are always in market, and are subject to frequent fluctuations in price. Such are the leading products of the farm and most of the useful manufactures. As to these no fixed rule can be given, but the following suggestions will commend themselves to the prudent:

One should keep himself informed of the state of the market, especially in places accessible to him, and as far as practicable in places whose trade affects directly his local market. The best way to secure this is to take and read good papers, that give not only the tabular statements, but intelligent and impartial comments and counsels. When necessity compels one to sell, he can only submit, regardless of prices; but in all other cases, he ought to govern himself consistently by reasonable possibilities. Unless in the face of a comparative certainty that there will be no advance, economy plainly forbids the disposal of a commodity at a price that is no more than its cost to the producer. Business can not live on losses. A certain farmer who has all ways prospered, made it a rule to sell everything that he could spare as soon as it was in marketable condition. He never made much at one time, but he avoided all risks of rogues and fires, all injuries by vermin and weather, all the trouble and expense of protracted storage, all the reduction of shrinkage and accidental waste; and he was receiving money now and then, through the year.

Is it not safe advice to say that every one should be content to sell at a reasonable profit? To wait for very large prices is a dangerous policy, and, especially as to the necessities of life, very bad morals. What man must have, his fellow-man should be willing to furnish at rates that are not exorbitant or oppressive. Business should never violate the principles of magnanimity and true charity.

Our Birds.

It takes a good deal of agitation to make the farming community understand what some of their most important interests are. Timber planting, for instance, was tantamount to talk about for years before the thing was effected, and even now a majority of the farmers are only just beginning to realize its importance.

There is another subject of vast importance to the farmer on which little is ever said, namely—birds. Farmers are aware that they have to contend against insect enemies innumerable, but they can not realize how much the birds assist them in keeping such pests down, because they have never been without such aid. Some idea, however, of the number of insects destroyed by a single pair, may be formed by watching them while feeding their young.

Men think that the robins, for instance, spend too much time in their small fruit gardens, or among their cherries (and even here they do not confine their attention to the fruit), but they can well afford to spare from their abundance what few the birds take for the sake of their assistance in fighting insects.

Professor Cook says that, after numerous examinations of their stomachs, made with the greatest care, he is convinced that birds, not excepting even the robin and jay, are the farmers' friends. The blackbird, the much-abused crow, the woodpecker, and all our common songsters, are valuable aids in combating insects, and they also destroy great quantities of weed seed. Let any one watch a flock of birds gather about a weed patch late in the fall, and he will be convinced of this.

New Varieties of Wheat.

Why may not our agricultural societies take a hint from the course lately decided upon by the Royal Society of England. This society has offered two premiums, £25 and £10 each, for distinctly new varieties of wheat, which shall combine the largest yield of grain and straw per acre with approved form and size, smooth and thin skin, full of white kernel, and high specific gravity in the seed, and with bright, firm and stiff straw. One sack must be delivered to the society by each competitor, together with a sample bundle of straw, before the first of October next. A portion of each sample will be kept for comparison, and the remainder, divided into equal portions, will be cultivated next year in four localities, differing in climate and soil. The prizes will be awarded for the best varieties of the crop of 1880, thus cultivated under the auspices of the Society, if in the opinion of the judges they possess qualities which entitle them to distinction. The produce of the experimental crop of 1880 will be the property of the Society, and will be offered first to the competitors who submitted the seed. As our State Boards of Agriculture perhaps are not prepared to carry out the experimental part of the enterprise of this kind, they may very properly turn the cultivation over to the Agricultural Colleges. There is in this another argument in favor of an attempt to unite the scattered agricultural resources of the country for the accomplishment of the practical results as hinted at.

A country paper says that one minister in the locality recently said to another: "I came near selling my boots to-day." The other marvelled, and made the brief but sage remark, "Ah!" Then, seeing that further comment was expected, he asked: "How was that?" "Oh, I had them half-sold!" replied his friend.

A party of Frenchmen lately ascended Mount Ross, in the Alps, and came very near freezing to death.

FASHION NOTES.

Red stockings will be stylish. Dark red is a fashionable color. Striped hosiery is revived in a new form.

Roman colors are in demand in hosiery.

A new hat is called the "phonograph."

The engagement bracelets are the latest novelty.

White satin is to be revived for brides' wear in the fall.

The London skating-rinks are to be turned into lawn-tennis grounds.

Plush and velvet figures on silk surfaces bid fair to be very fashionable.

Belts are as popular as ever for morning, afternoon and evening toilets.

Corsage bouquets are removed to the shoulders, where they form epaulets.

All dresses are low in the neck, back and front, but high on the shoulders.

Bonnet ribbons come in all changeable effects in thick twills like silk serge.

Ottoman rep ribbons shot with two colors are among the novelties for trimming.

The coming season will witness painted silks and satins in many evening costumes.

It is the girl with pretty hands who is so modest as to have continually to hide her face behind them.

When plain white faille is used it requires a great deal of satin to give it the lustrous effect now so much in vogue.

For dress, bonnets are large shapes, with the wide brim curved in three places on the right side, and plain on the left.

The cashmere stuffs are as handsome as the silk risks and Persian goods used for upholstery. They come in the gayest colors.

The colors in the woolen dress goods are peculiarly rich, soft and velvety in effect. Dress fabrics are in dark shades of Bordeaux color.

ALINE, the fashionable dress-maker of Lisbon, is in Paris; but Aline does not make dresses there. She is visiting her kins-woman, Mme Grey.

For black costumes the fancy will be that suggested last season of having brocade velvet for the basque, and the plain silk of satin for the skirts.

Very long trains are worn for fall dresses, but there should be but little trimming on the train, however elaborate the rest of the robe may be.

There are fewer black bonnets than usual, yet they are shown in both large and small shapes. For early fall they are of black point d'esprit lace with jet crowns.

The handsome silk stockings have the front of the feet and ankles in snow and cream-whites, jet-black, Nile-green and pale rose-color, embroidered in small set figures of two colors.

New British Balbriggan stockings are in crosswise fancy stripes of two colors. Stockings embroidered or cloaked in sprigs of two colors are in favor for the moment, with ties and slippers.

The new French caprice for combining two materials in a suit is that of making the basque or jacket of the gay cashmere, and the skirt of plain somber goods, with merely some border of the cashmere.

ONE of the French women of fashion has revived the fancy for wearing large squares of net veils, but they are trimmed with lace instead of fringe, as formerly, and the corners are tied at the back instead of being pinned.

SOME of the handsomest silk stockings have the leg and the bottom of the foot in dark-Burgundy, Canaque, duck's breast, blue or bright red; with instep of white and black zebra stripes forming chevrons with the points downward.

ONE of the prettiest hats intended for early fall wear is a white straw Gainsboro, lined with red satin and trimmed with the same, and with red poppies. The bow on top and the strings are held by silver-buckles set with Rhine crystals.

SOME of the bonnets prepared for the autumn by the French milliners have the crown covered with the plumage of a bird, and the brim hidden by gathered veils or silk, and others have all the trimming on the brim, and the crown composed of silk or satin.

A LADY's parlor, devised for a pretty English brunette, has its walling with buttercup yellow, covered with clear-white muslin fluted from top to bottom. The chimney-piece is of black velvet, and the furniture of black velvet with yellow fringe and yellow buttons.

For a slender, tall woman, the prettiest kind of a costume has the skirt composed entirely of horizontal puffs, with one deep flounce at the bottom over which is worn a panier polonoise of different material. The waistcoat is formed of puffs to correspond with the skirt.

Taz-Grec fashion of wearing a bracelet on the upper part of the arm, bands on the head are in vogue. These bands are strikingly becoming to handsome heads and faces, which approach the classical outline. For evening wear strings of pearls or coins of veritable Grecian stamp fall over the fringe on the forehead.

ELBERT GAINES.
"One sufferer less with us, one angel more in heaven."

Into a home of love on earth
Our Father sent a child;
He brought rejoicings with his birth,
And friends and fortune smiled.

As years stole on, he grew in strength,
His mind was filled with mental lore;
Parents and teachers trained him well
To gather learning's richest store.

And he, so willing, freely drank
The waters of earth's purest spring—
That is not tainted with man's sin,
But he had more; yes, how much more!

This is but dream to mortal world
His faults repressed, his virtues grew Till he had strength that's not of earth.
So well fitted for this world

And so well started for another,
"Thou strange we never passed to think,
Will man or angel be his brother?"

He learned in health how to endure,
And how to master his own will;
And when the time of trial came,
He could suffer and be still.

How dark the trial that he bore,
No tongue of man could ever tell;
Strong men grew pale and women wept,
And yet he said, "I shall be well!"

Was he not right? May we not hope That where his soul has gone to dwell
The angels sing his songs of joy?
And there we meet him always well.

MARY A. THOMPSON.
ST. LOUIS LETTER.
A Dull Week.—The St. Louis Sanitarium—Evil Effects of Morphine, &c.

St. Louis, Mo., September 13, 1879.
To the Editor of the Recorder:

This evening closes a dull and lifeless week with business men generally, as the weather has been anything but favorable most of the time for outdoor pursuits. In short, we have had cold, October weather, mixed with rain, most of the week. Business men look dull, and the writer has a feeling over him akin or the next thing to stupidity. I did not write last week, and hardly know what to say this week that would interest you or your readers. I will start out, however, by remarking that last Sunday was rather a pleasant day, and, reading in the morning papers that there was to be a gospel temperance meeting at the

ST. LOUIS SANITARIUM.
An institution I never had visited, I concluded to go and see for myself what sort of a concern it is. And I did go, and I am truly glad that I did so. The building is situated on Cass avenue, between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets, and the building and grounds occupy more than an entire block fronting south, and fully two blocks running north. The house, grounds and everything pertaining thereto seem well arranged and complete in adaptation of the designs of the institution. The meeting was interesting, the singing being good and the speaking excellent, as several of the distinguished clergy of the city took part therein, and I would suppose the audience might reasonably be set down at 800 to 1,000 persons. But my object was to ascertain, if possible, the practical workings and the good results of the institution. Immediately after the speaking I sought an introduction to Dr. C. S. Widney, physician in charge, whom I found, in a very few moments' conversation, to be the right man in the right place. He took me into his magnificent building, showed me the different apartments, and I wish my time and your space would allow me to write up in detail this most interesting of all institutions for the redemption of man and woman from vicious habits; but as it is, your readers will have to content themselves with only a brief outline of causes, effects and treatment of

OPIMUM HABITS.
In this letter, and I may in a future letter speak of the causes, effects and wonderful cures of inebriety in this most humane and Christian institution. As I gather same from the lips of its Superintendent, who seems to be living alone for the sake of unfortunate humanity.

HOW THE HABIT BEGINS.
From his own lips I learn that all persons do not begin the use of opium in the same way. Many who were once in affluent circumstances, and then are suddenly reduced to a life of poverty and labor, resort to the use of morphine on account of its primary exhilarating influence. Under its mysterious charm, some are enabled for a time to forget their privations and live in dreamland, but awake to toil night and day, even though the riches are restored; for after a while every duty seems a task, and a feather becomes a mountain in weight. Ignorance of its use or evil effects often causes persons to fly to the bottle of morphine to allay the least pain or arrest the most trivial wakefulness, and thus become slaves—the very worst of slaves—to this drug. Dr. Widney stated, and said he would be sustained by a majority of physicians, that the opium habit is often formed, at times in no small degree, in infants not over six months old. With some mothers, every cry must be quieted with medicine. The family physician resorts to prescribe; the mother finds for some soothing syrup and is delighted to find that this simple remedy secures perfect rest, ignorant of the fact that her child is stupefied with opium. Continue this plan, and her child

BECOMES AN OPIMUM EATER.
Some students in our leading colleges begin the use of opium, vainly imagining that the brilliancy and power of DeQuincy, Coleridge, Poe and other distinguished writers was evoked by the wonderful exhilaration. No amount of opium or whisky can ever cause an idiot to write a book. The stimulants and narcotics are not the power or the genius, but only the white lashes applied to the thought and the imagination. The Doctor admitted that "The Raven" would, perhaps, never have been written by Poe but for the influence of stimulants; "but," said he, "Milton's paradise could never have conceived 'Paradise Lost' if it had been subjected to the distortions of opium or alcohol." He also admitted as a medicine, used by intelligent physicians, opium is one of the greatest blessings to mankind. Nothing in the materia medica is more useful in alleviating pain and lessening the ills of suffering humanity; yet few medicines on earth are so well calculated to lead to a life of pain, disease, degradation, slavery, insanity and miserable death. It will kill any pain, and yet the pains of an opium eater, when his daily allowance is removed, are beyond description. Men may not need it much at first, but if it is used continued long, it

CREATES ITS OWN DEMAND.
And there is no rest without it. (And right here, without the least desire to deviate from the main subject, the writer will risk his own reputation as a prophet that there are more ladies given to the use of morphine than men.) A reliable druggist told the writer, only a few days since, that he had six morphine customers within one block of the writer's residence, all ladies. "The doctor remarked," among the saddest effects of opium on its victim may be mentioned, first the weakening, and latterly the destruction of the will power, often depriving those, who were as firm as a rock of all self-control. Every promise is broken, every good resolution abandoned, and almost every obligation violated.

I have now said briefly spoken of some of the causes and effects of the use of this drug, and will now barely mention one or two cases out of the many entirely cured of the habit at the St. Louis Sanitarium; and I am indebted to Dr. Widney, who is not only a gentleman but a Christian, recognized as such by all who know him, for said information:

LOOSED FROM THE BONDS.
Mr. A., a merchant of this city, suffered from sciatica for many months, and no sleep or rest could be produced except by the use of opiates. And who is there, said the Doctor, familiar with the excruciating pain of this jumping toothache in the leg, will condemn the sufferer for submitting to the use of the only remedy that he could find to secure temporary ease? Yet this led to the use of twelve grains of morphine per day by the hypodermic syringe, or an equivalent of at least twenty-four grains by the mouth—a quantity per day sufficient to kill twelve men and no sleep or rest could be produced except by the use of opiates. When he entered the St. Louis Sanitarium, his body was marked with deep scars, seventy-odd ulcers having been produced by the use of the hypodermic syringe (a number of them running and quite painful when he first saw him), and almost every square inch of the skin on his arms, legs and abdomen bore marks of the punctures of the needle. Why did he not reduce it gradually, or in some other way abandon its use? He was asked. The Doctor replied promptly: If you struggle as earnestly to do your duty as did this victim to become free, you will be a model man. The merchant thus referred to suffered beyond description. But Dr. Widney says he was enabled to remove the twelve grains of morphine that he was taking hypodermically, and withdrew all other medicine in about two months. He remained a few months after this, however, to become accustomed to the new life. After this he has performed all the duties usually performed by such men, has gained twenty-seven pounds in flesh and enjoys perfect health. His treatment was attended with but few of the annoying symptoms that he had experienced in his former efforts to cure himself. The light degree of suffering may be estimated when the doctor states that the aforesaid merchant did not fail to have an appetite for his meals three times a day. During the whole of his treatment, and he did not fail to sleep at least three hours any one night. To be brief, the merchant states that he did not suffer as much during his treatment as he did when taking the full amount of opium.

My letter is getting long (wish I had a full page of your paper), and in this letter I will make this a typical case of those treated in

THIS WONDERFUL INSTITUTION.
Within the past twelve months; and, having surveyed its beautiful surroundings, I have been made all round the elegant mansion, with large, airy rooms, and having become acquainted with the scientific Christian gentleman in charge, I cheerfully recommend the

St. Louis Sanitarium to all the unfortunate victims of opium and strong drink. I must not leave this part of my subject, however, without remarking that I have it from the Doctor that he has never had a case of opium eating but what he has returned the lady or the gentleman home free from any desire for the use of the drug. And he states that he can effectually cure any case of the kind. And he states further that some of the cases treated were of more than twenty years' standing, and two of the cases treated had for months used as much as twenty grains per day.

Now, some of your readers may be curious to know why I have given up one whole letter to this one subject. It is simply on account of most people's ignorance concerning the evil effects and rapid growth of the habit, when once commenced. And before I close, I will state that the use of morphine is largely on the increase, and persons may be dying from the evil effects of same and but few of their most intimate friends be aware of the cause of their decline, as there are but few that do so but what are mums on the subject. While my pen glides along these lines, I have in my mind's eye a lady friend—mine—that uses the drug, and one of them, when she is herself, is one of the brightest women that ever walked a velvet carpet, while the other is no ordinary woman by any means; and I dare say each of these ladies spends more money for morphine than they do for bread and meat, for I have seen one of them swallow twenty-two grains as a dose—enough to kill twenty-five men at once not accustomed to the use of it.

Should any of the readers of the Recorder have the habit fastened upon them, let them seek the St. Louis Sanitarium, and my word for it, they will find relief. I would be more than pleased to say more on this subject, but my letter is getting long—too long—and I have not touched upon their treatment of inebriates, but say, in conclusion, that drunkenness becomes a disease, and the treatment of same is one of the main features of the institution of which I have been speaking. I may say something about this in another letter. Don A. Long.

A Comrade Relieved from Suspicion.
(Washington Post, August 4.)
The regular monthly meeting of the local association of survivors of Mexico took place Saturday night at Gen. Pike's office. The President being absent in Ohio, Dr. C. DeMontreuil presided, and Daniel Smith, Esq., officiated as Secretary. The business of the meeting, after the usual routine, was the consideration of the report of Gen. Albert Pike, chairman, M. D. Montis and Daniel Smith, who were appointed at the meeting of May last to inquire into the merits of certain paid pamphlets of survivors of Mexico.

The report was written by Gen. Pike, and covers twenty-four pages of manuscript. It will be printed by the Association for circulation among the members. The report says: "Your committee finds, by the cash book of the Secretary, that up to the 1st of August last, his disbursements amounted to $1,312 52, and he had disposed of 3,715 badges for $7,430. We all know that comrade Kenady has devoted his life and all his earnings for years to the one purpose of procuring an act pensioning the survivors of the Mexican war, by means of State, local and national associations, laboring together to the one end. He has received no salary or compensation for his services, and yet the National Association is his debtor in the amount of nearly $5,000. We all know that we owe him alone, to his untiring labor, his untiring energy, his indefatigable industry and his self-sacrificing devotion, the very existence of our organizations. Your committee believe that it is true to say that no other man than he in all the United States would have undertaken the same work in earnest, and no other man, having undertaken it, would have persevered in it against so many obstacles." They therefore recommend the adoption of the following resolution: "Resolved, That this Association has entire confidence in the loyalty to his comrades and the perfect integrity of comrade Alexander M. Kenady, and will maintain him as a true and honest gentleman against all who have endeavored, or who may endeavor, to impeach his honor." Signed by Gen. Albert Pike, chairman, M. D. Montis and Daniel Smith.

This is what Robert G. Ingersoll says of women: "I tell you that women are more prudent than men. I tell you, as a rule, women are more truthful than men—ten times as faithful as men. I never saw a man pursue his wife into the ditch and dust of degradation and take her in his arms. I never saw a man stand at the shore where she had been morally wrecked, write a letter to him, and have her come back to his arms, but I have seen women do it. I have seen women with her white arms lift man from the mire of degradation, and hold him to her bosom as though he were an angel."

Couldn't Stop Her.
The gates of the passenger depots, which shut out all people not having tickets for the trains, were yesterday closed against an elderly woman wearing spectacles and using an umbrella for a cane.

"Can't pass without a ticket," said the man at the gate as she came in. "I want to see if there is anybody on that train going to Port Huron," she answered.

"Can't pass without a ticket, madam."

"I've got a darter in Port Huron, I have."

"Can't help it, please. My orders are very strict."

"I tell you, I want to send word to darter!" she exclaimed, adjusting her spectacles for a better view of official. "Yes, but we can't help that you see. Please show your ticket."

"I want this railroad to understand that I've got a darter in Port Huron, and she's got a baby four weeks old, and I'm going to send her up word in spite of all the gates in this depot."

"Please show your ticket, madam."

"I'll tell you once more."

She gave the umbrella a whirl, and brought it down on his head with all the vim of an old-fashioned log-raising, and as he staggered aside she passed him and said:

"There's my ticket, sir, and I've more behind it. Mebbe one man and a gate can stop me from sending word to my darter to grease the baby's nose with nutton tallow if the weather changes cold, but I don't believe it!"

And she walked down the train, found someone going to Port Huron, and came back carelessly humming the melody of "The Three Blind Mice."

His Wish.
(New York Star.)
[New York Star.]
He stepped into a green-grocer's yesterday morning with a vacant, weary, careworn look on his face.

"What can I do for you?" inquired the proprietor, smiling.

"That's what I'm trying to remember," said the man, looking blank.

"Do you want some potatoes?"

"I never eat them. I can't remember what I came in for."

"Perhaps you want some coffee?"

"Ain't it funny I can't remember?" remarked the stranger, as he scratched his chin with the back of his hand and scanned everything behind the counter in a wild but ineffectual effort to brush up his memory.

"Do you want milk?"

"No, that ain't it."

"Is it macaroni, mustard, chowchow, soap or jelly?"

"None of them, sir."

"Possibly you want a small measure of beet?"

"Indeed I do not." Then his eyes sparkled, and he said:

"I have it now. I remember what I came in for; it all comes back to me like a dream of love."

"What do you want?"

"Well, now it's as plain as day. Wasn't it funny I didn't think of it before?"

"It was a little strange; but what will you have?"

"You won't get mad, will you?"

"No, sir."

"Well, then, I'll tell you. I just stepped in here to ask if you'll scratch my back a little for me; I have prickly heat."

He wasn't scratched, but had it not been for his activity he would have been kicked.

An exceedingly painful affair transpired in Brooklyn the other day. A young man and a young woman, whose hearts are bound to each other in the sweet tender ties of mutual affection, were out strolling one of the fine evenings of the week last week. Coming to a grassy bank from which the valley of the Still river could be seen, they sat down and gazed with rapture upon the scene. Then, like two doves, they fell to cooing softly unto each other, unmindful of the passing time, and ignorant of the fact that the bank upon which they rested was covered with the creeping mercury vine. Their hearts were full as they sat there. The next day it seemed as if their contents had gone to their heads. We love to look upon the faces of those dear to us. But they didn't. She didn't look at all, in fact, and what little view he gets of things generally, is through one eye. One of his ears lays across the other eye, and the other ear is on top of his head, where it stands up like a comb of a rooster. Yesterday morning the swelling in her head had gone down enough to show her hair pins, and thirty-five of them were taken out—Danbury News.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL,
Editor and Proprietor.

BURLINGTON, KY., SEPTEMBER 25.

The Ohio election is drawing nigh. The seventh of next month is the day.

The National View advises its brethren of the National party to make haste slowly.

It is said that there was a well-defined Grant boom in the Colorado Convention last Friday.

In Virginia, the other day, a negro murdered a white man, and the enraged citizens resolved themselves into a lynch court and hanged the negro.

Has it come to this in Kentucky that the larger the steal the smaller is the offense, if a man's social relations are supposed to be above an average?

The grain market has advanced several cents on the bushel in the last few days. This is the result of the failure of that crop in the foreign countries, and the demand from abroad will no doubt, sustain the advance.

The largest vote ever cast in Maine was at the last State election, and the Democratic and the Greenback vote combined exceded the Republican vote by over three hundred. In 1876 Maine gave Hayes over sixteen thousand majority.

The jury in the Terrell case is composed of Boone, Grant and Owen men. We will see how well the three counties can agree. Grant County has been heard from before on the matter that the three will now consider together.

Gen. W. T. Sherman says that Grant will not accept the nomination for President, unless he sees the Republican party divided on candidates and in danger of defeat, and that his acceptance will insure unity and success to the party.

The Lexington Transcript says, it is rumored that when the Legislature meets, Colonel Churchill, Secretary of State, will retire and give to General Harris, Assistant Secretary, the place and that Senator James Blackburn will succeed Mr. Harris.

The following despatch from Frankfort appeared in Sunday's Enquirer: Papers were laid before Governor Blackburn today (Saturday) asking for the pardon of W. G. Terrell, of Covington, indicted in the Boone County Court for the murder of Harry Myers.

The citizens in the neighborhood of Aylor's store are sadly in need of a Postoffice at that point. They are not near enough to any office to justify opposition, and the sooner they apply for, and have it established, the sooner they will have a neighborhood convenience in their midst.

The Saline, (Mo.) Democrat says: "In Boone County, Kentucky, they are not assured that a man is dead until they have put twenty bullet holes into his body and banded him to a tree." The Democrat is misinformed. The man was shot but alive, and was not hanged to a tree at all.

Two men were arrested in Leadville, Colorado, the other day, for robbing graves of metallic coffins. They would disinter the coffins and dump the bodies out in the graves, after which they would famigate the caskets and have them stored for sale. These Western people are enterprising in the extreme.

BLAINE's active canvass in Maine for the election of the Republican ticket at the recent State election, was not so much for the glory of his party as for the improvement of his chances for the Presidential nomination in 1880. The result of that election has greatly encouraged him, and he considers his boom row of some consequence.

The newspapers will ultimately destroy the jury system in this country under the practice of objecting to jurors because they have read newspapers accounts of the offenses they are summoned to try is abandoned. The people of this country are a reading people, and are, as a general thing, keeping informed in regard to the occurrences of the period.

THERE is a very animated political campaign in progress in Virginia, the State debt making the issue, the chief point being whether or not the Legislature shall be chosen favorable to opposition to the plan proposed for the settlement of the State debt. The Democrats are in favor of its full payment, while the Republicans are considerably opposed on the question.

Our Hebron correspondent gives an account of another application of the mad stone owned by Mr. Jacob Taylor who lives near that place. The stone adheres to the mind and a considerable number. There are many persons who attribute exceptions. Those by not be conveniently preserved, of course, be thrown on the market. Others that are in demand certain seasons only, will be sold by the season trade. Jacobson common and valuable for effect-mania industry are also has not of different politics. The publisher asked the reader to overlook the mixture of the contents of his last issue.

victs in the Penitentiary will be so reduced that there will be rooms "to let" in a short time instead of having them occupied by more persons than they were intended to accommodate.

SOME of our exchanges say that the action of Governor Blackburn in the Atwood case meets with very general approval; but the same would be said by some papers, let the Governor do what he may. The pardoning of Atwood makes no additional admirers of the Governor in this section. There are numbers of convicts in the Penitentiary who are more entitled to Executive clemency than a man who is guilty of burglary to the extent of $500,000, and whose social relations are as good as those of Atwood.

GEN. GRANT arrived in San Francisco last Saturday, and was given a grand reception, such as is seldom given a man in this or any other country. All parties participated in the greeting, and the stars and bars and the stars and stripes floated side by side in the procession. He has made his circuit of the globe, and been received with great demonstrations all along his route of travel, and created more emotion than any distinguished visitor that ever called on the nation through which he passed on his journey.

The North Carolina negroes have the exodus fever, and want to go West. They have not means sufficient to take them to Kansas, and a committee has waited on the National Board of Emigration, at Washington, and solicited aid on behalf of the emigration. The negroes complain that they can get no work in their native State. The negroes in some parts of the South are determined to emigrate, and nothing that can be said or done will change their minds. Some of the most ignorant think that when they arrive in Kansas all they have to do is to sit down, fold their arms and enjoy the luxuries with which nature will provide them in their new home.

--The little town of Alexandria looms to the front with a remarkable case of conscience stricken. Last Monday night the residence of Mrs. Thomas Parker, situated in the outskirts of Alexandria, was entered by burglars, and a bureau drawer containing $300 in Government bonds stolen. Thursday morning Mrs. Parker went to her front door and found a letter under it, and upon opening it, she was surprised beyond expression when she found it contained two of the missing bonds. The other has not yet been recovered. But the thief, it is thought, is well known.

"Dr. McGINNIS, a druggist of Burlington, has been fined $30 in the Criminal Court for selling intoxicating liquors."—Rising Sun Recorder.

This is all correct, except there is no such man in Burlington as Dr. McGinnis, and no man in Burlington was fined for selling intoxicating liquors.

Last Thursday, a little child of Leonard Seaman, who lives on Ephraim Ayler's farm, near Ayler's store, in a slop barrel and was drowned. The barrel was sunk in the ground, and was about half full of water, and the little boy, aged about 18 months, was at play in the yard, and when the covering and fell in. He was a corpse when found. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of the entire community.

Last Sunday, John Duncan, son of J. W. Duncan, of this place, was seriously injured by a horse falling with him on the road leading from the Petersburg place to the residence of James E. Boyd. The injuries received are principally on the head and face, and for several hours after the accident he was unconscious. Dr. J. O. Terrell had him taken to his house, where he is under treatment and is getting along very well.

FLOWERS OF MEMORY.

BY HORA READ GOODALE.

The drifted snow, in foldings deep,
Old winter snows shall bring;
Our dainty flowers shall go to sleep,
And will not wake till spring.
And blue sky he'll turn gray,
The blossoms make to fall;
Thou shalt see them then to fade away—
And we forget them all!
Nay! even though his touch shall bring
The frost and chill and snow,
In memory still the birds shall sing,
And still the flowers blow.
The purple pansies, one by one,
Shall lift their fragrant heads;
And, evelled by rain and kissed by sun,
Shall light the garden beds.
The summer sunlight still shall stream,
The roses deeper glow,
The wren warblers brightly beam,
And fainting breezes blow.
The tulips still shall plant their fires,
Though winter winds are high—
What loving heart of beauty tries In memory laid by—

What to do in Case of Fire.

First, do not be alarmed on account of smoke. Frequently there is a great deal of smoke before the fire has made much progress. Remember that one can pass through smoke and a minute before the head near the floor, or by crawling in a wet woolen cloth. On entering a room to fight fire single-handed, keep the door closed behind if possible. A pall of water and a tin dipper in the hands of a resolute person, can be made to work a miracle from the beginning. If the fire has progressed too far to admit of this course, and it is necessary to depend entirely on outside help, then see to it that every door and window is closed. By so doing where there is a fire engine in the neighborhood, it will be possible to confine the fire to one room. Every person who stops at a hotel should take special pains before retiring to note the location of the stairs, so that in the case of an alarm he can find the way out, even though the halls be full of smoke. Never leave a room when there is an alarm of fire without first securing a wet towel, or, if possible, a wet sponge, or a piece of woolen cloth through which to breathe. If escape by the stairs is cut off, seek an outside window and stay there till help comes.

Blushing and Turning Pale.

Blushing is occasioned by a dilatation of the small blood vessels, which form a fine network beneath the skin, and when they admit of an increased volume of red blood, cause the surface to appear suffused with color. Blanching is the opposite state, in which the vessels contract and squeeze out their blood, so that the skin is seen of its bloodless hue. The change effected in the size of the vessels is brought about by an instantaneous action of the nervous system. This is not induced by a thought, or, unconsciously, by the operation of impressions producing the phenomenon habitually.

Most persons who blush with self-consciousness blush with anger, and this artificial state of mock anger will soon blanch the face enough to prevent the blush. It only requires practice in the control of the emotions and the production of particular states at will—the sort of expertness acquired by actors and actresses—to secure control of these surface phenomena. Blushing and blanching are antagonistic states, and may be employed to counteract each other, control of the physical state of blood vessels being obtained through the emotions with which they are associated.

In our last we spoke of the trial of Ames Greenwade, which was then in progress at Owensville. The argument closed on Wednesday evening, and the case was given to the jury, who returned a verdict on Thursday, finding the defendant guilty of manslaughter and fixing his punishment at confinement in the Penitentiary for two years. As soon as the verdict was read, Greenwade arose to his feet, attempted to draw a pistol, and started for the door, but he was caught and disarmed, another pistol being found in his pocket. For a few minutes there was considerable excitement, but upon the pistol being taken from him, Greenwade was restored and the jailer took Greenwade to jail. He was taken to the Penitentiary on Saturday—Mt. Sterling Sentinel.

Truth, taken as a whole, is not agreeable. Every man, woman and child dislikes it. There are agreeable truths and disagreeable truths, and it is the province of discretion or sound judgment to make a selection from these, and not to employ them all indiscriminately. Speaking the truth is not always a virtue. Concealing it is very often judicious. It is only when duty calls upon you to reveal the truth that it is commendable. A truth-teller may be a truth-teller, but everyone dislikes the character of a person who goes from one house to another and intercommunicates all he sees or hears.

The Clerk of the Court of Appeals has received the papers in the case of Thomas Buford against the Commonwealth, asking a reversal of the decision of the Owen Criminal Court which convicted him.

When a man speaks the truth, you may count pretty surely that he possesses most other virtues.

The Atwood Case.

Robert Atwood, formerly of Louisville, who was pardoned out of the Penitentiary Thursday evening by Governor Blackburn, had served six years of a term of twenty, was so affected that he could scarcely walk to the carriage. The scene, which was somewhat dramatic, is thus described by a Frankfort correspondent to the Courier-Journal:

"At five minutes before eight a carriage drove into the prison yard, and Atwood was summoned. He had received warning that he would be released, and was appropriately dressed, and ready for the long-coveted enlargement, but when the moment arrived, and the reality of freedom was upon him, he was almost too weak to walk from the door of the hospital to the carriage. A half dozen friends were with him, and realizing the excitement of his condition assisted him to the vehicle. He trembled like an aspen and was much affected, but struggled to hide it. Two persons were in the carriage—a near relative and the other a near friend. As he stepped in there was a shaking of hands, not a word was spoke. The carriage door was closed, and as the clock struck 8 it rolled out of the gates."

A wood did not return to Louisville, but went beyond the borders of the State to seek a home. At the time of his crime, in 1872, he had been speculating in cotton outside of his regular line of business, then being the leading member of the firm of Atwood & Nichols, insurance agents, and also one of the firm of A. Scheffell & Co. pork packers. He became involved in the cotton speculation, and in trying to get out of the trouble in which he forged the names of the firm of which he was a member, and those of his father-in-law, Dr. Rogers, and his Uncle, Mr. Charles Thuston, were freely used to procure money. Finally, on his guilt being discovered, he endeavored to escape, but was detected at Seymour, Ind., on his way West, and brought back to Louisville, tried and sentenced to the Penitentiary for 20 years. He was of excellent family, and his fall was bitterly lamented by many. When Governors Leslie and McCray held their offices respectively, petitions after petition from Louisville and other portions of the State poured in, asking a pardon for Atwood, but each of those gentlemen, looking at the case with the bandaged eyes of justice could not see why a man who would forge names to an aggregate of nearly $500,000 should be pardoned, when others for trivial offenses were compelled to serve out their full terms; hence, acting in the part of "Stern Justice," neither could he induce to pardon him, but in the venerable personage who now has possession of the pardoning power, he finds a different person, one who forgets justice in woman-like kindness of heart; one who doubts thinks the more charitable deeds he can perform during the short remainder of his life, the better he will stand before the tribunal of the great God, and error of all in the next world.—Newport Local.

This London Truth does not appear to entertain the generous opinion of the Rev. DeWitt Palmage that is afforded him by various lords and ladies of England, who refer to him as the "distinguished American divine," the "transcendent orator," and otherwise ingenious coddles to our great sensational preacher whom the Truth considers anything but a "celebrated orator" and looks upon as being rather "a sort of Yankee chabaud, who has got a little into society." "The only merit of his style," says the Truth, "is a certain florid, daily-telegraphic sort of ornamentation which soon falls upon the ear as a stucco arabesque does upon the eye; his voice is coarse and unamused, his pronunciation disgraced by full-favored American twang. He drops the 'r' in words and goes in 'ing,' talks of when he was 'on the baddle held,'" remarks that to pious lords and ladies it will some day be said, "ye'er did it to me," and declares that he is his "larns." The majority of American divines who go to England are kindly received, and may be well for our other distinguished preacher known as "Adirondack," alias "Buckboard Murray," now traveling on the Pacific coast, to journey across the Atlantic to the land of our fathers, where his buckboard and mince-pie sermons will be kindly received and duly appreciated.—Cosmopolite.

Home Training.

How few of us understand or appreciate the necessity of training our children while yet their thoughts do not wander beyond the limits of their playgrounds! How many of us who are parents, in their young years, prove in their future. The use of a slate and pencil becomes a source of playful gratification, indeed, of improvement, in early childhood. To make a mark, to draw a line, is a feat of which they are proud. There is ever at the command of the mother a thousand different ways of creating an outburst of childish glee in the hearts of her children, provided she is intelligent enough to furnish it. Apart even from the manner in which their young ideas may be developed by a little care and concern, is it not a fact that a busy child is always a happy child, the natural condition of infancy being one of joyous activity?—Educational New-Gatherer.

Circumstances do not make a man half so often as a clean shirt.

FASHION NOTES.

The Lily-of-the-valley bonnet is very popular.

Satin and velvets will be much worn next season.

At Newport the hat is worn over the left eye.

Martha Washington lace collars are in style.

The old lace called point de Paris is again in use.

High-heeled shoes are worn with short dresses.

English hats are worn by young English girls.

Stuffed birds will ornament fall and winter bonnets.

Salmon color and amethyst is one of daring combinations recently used by Worth.

Beads and bugles are in favor still. On black costumes they are most showy and effective.

Scrambled are again fashionable for jewelry. Some jewelers use the Brazilian beetle instead.

Charming ornate ones are now made for the hair from 'gale shells, held in position by silver wire.

The Madras gingham toilets have parasols to match, and were the favorite costumes at the beaches.

The Japanese ornamented paper napkins are now much used for afternoon ties in fashionable circles.

In gloves of the new shapes the three-button glove will be as long as those of four buttons of the old pattern.

Pretty and easily made curtains for sitting-rooms are unleached muslin, with ribbons run into space, made by drawing threads.

Large jet or ebony crosses, suspended from the neck by a band of black velvet, are quite generally worn by the leaders of fashion.

Jet is much used on hats, costumes and mantles. All kinds of bead trimmings are worn, and the pretty chloride-line trimmings have been revived.

Waterproofs of white India rubber cloth are preferred by French women to black, shiny capes that may make a lady resemble a freeman so unpleasantly.

A pretty shade hat has the scoop brim covered with dotted muslin on the front, and trimming of two loops of muslin on the crown, divided by a cluster of convolvulus.

A recent development of Parisian fancy is shown in high strapped sandals of maroon colored and navy blue French Morocco. They are ungarnished with bows or buckles, buttoned on the side of the foot, and worn with plain silk stockings of a contrasting color.

A new method of attaching the umbrella to the belt is copied from the quiver of the toxophilite. A small sheath is attached by a chain to the belt, and through this the umbrella is passed, so that it assumes somewhat the position of a rapier as carried by a gentleman of the olden time.

Small bouquets interspersed among puffs are a favorite mode of ornamenting evening dresses where a thin material is employed, either in combination with a thick or another thin material. The puffs usually appear in perpendicular lines, and the bouquets are set at intervals of about six inches apart.

Very masculine-looking traveling costumes have appeared lately. They are made of ladies' cloth of leather mixtures and long tunics looped over the plain skirts. The jacket opens over a long waistcoat, and is fastened with a single button. A hat with high crown and a narrow brim is worn with this costume.

The common cotton handkerchiefs that were formerly only purchased by working men, are now quite fashionable for ladies in fancy purposes. They are cleverly cut and contrasted into aprons of various forms, lawn tennis hats, fichus for wearing over the shoulders, and into chair ties edged with coarse white lace for garden chairs.

Great change has come over the manner of style of wearing jewelry. The pink and white pearls forming a single button at the tip of the ear, which were effaced a couple of years since, gave the idea of wearing diamonds during the day, and diamond band ear-rings have been the fashion during the season that has just terminated.

In making up the handsome brocade materials so greatly worn even in the present season, the styles of the sixteenth century are most preferred. Plain bodices, with points of moderate length, "plain skirts, fastening down the front with buttons, close ruffs, and long sleeves over tight fitting under ones. Brocades cut into platings and flounces mean material spoiled.

Low square bodices of the sixteenth century, filled into the throat with muslin or plain supporting the close ruff, embroidered, are becoming more and more popular. Such square bodices mostly fasten at the back, and are pointed back and front but very slightly, the fullness of the skirts being in old times gathered to them pretty equally all round. Close fitting bodices with ruff and tight sleeves with puffs at elbow and shoulders are becoming to most figures; so also is the plain bodice with full blouse gathered at the waist; the sleeves with turnback cuffs, and nine or ten shakings at the top, or wrist, through which white is seen. Many fashionable dresses are made with the fan waist in favor many years ago.

VOLUME V.

TOPICS OF THE DAY.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR Tabor, of Denver, Colorado, has an income of $4,000 a week.

MAMMOTH CAVE is to be made light as day by being illuminated by electric light.

AMERICAN CLOTH is in demand in India, to the exclusion of the English article.

IN Macon, Ga., no child will be allowed at the public school unless its father has paid poll-tax.

THE more the cause of the Indian outbreak is inquired into, the blacker it looks for the white man, and the whiter for the red.

THE oldest man who attended the late meeting of the veterans in Indianapolis was W. P. Devitt, of St. Louis, who is 104 years old.

ALL the mills at Fall River are now running in part or in full, except the Borden City Mill. Many of the old hands, after a strike of three months, are at work again.

"PEACE reigns throughout the whole Republic of Mexico," says a dispatch. "There are no political disorders anywhere." The statement is a tribute to the genius of President Diaz as a ruler.

A CORRUPT and unscrupulous ring, with everything to gain and nothing to lose, can resort to methods and perpetrate acts which respectable citizens would sooner die than commit.

THERE are 284,000 assessed voters in Virginia, but of these 27,000 white and 45,000 colored persons are delinquents and cannot vote. Of the qualified voters 147,000 are whites and 65,000 colored.

OWING to the smallness of the gold dollar, the New York Herald says: "If the Treasury Department wishes to popularize the dollar of the fathers, let them coin the gold dollar freely; it is easier to lose than a good idea."

THE American demand for pig iron has thrown the English market into a state of unprecedented activity. Immense quantities of metal are being shipped from Middleborough direct to American ports.

THIS is an age of benevolence. An investigation has shown that the paupers in the Franklin County (Ohio) Poorhouse have been supplied with 8600 worth of whiskey and tobacco since January.

THE Detroit Free Press says that Rowell, the pedestrian, is said to be worth $58,000 in cash, while American newspapers are supposed to be rolling in luxury when they get a salary of $800 per year.

ALL kinds of crops flourished in the West this year, according to returns to the Department of Agriculture, except the potato crop. The partial failure of potatoes is due chiefly to resumption of the resumption of active work on the part of the potato bugs.

AMATEUR newspapers can not be admitted to the mails as second-class matter, because they are not issued from a known office of publication; are not published for the dissemination of news of a public character, and have no legitimate list of subscribers.

KING ALFONSO, of Spain, gets a dividend of $4,000,000 with his Austrian dower. This, it would seem, is not enough, and the Cortes has been summoned to meet on the 3d of November, when an appropriation may be expected from the representatives of a delighted and grateful people.

ONE of the thirty-five or forty persons injured by a washout on the Reading Railroad, brought a test suit, and was awarded $30,000 damages. The case is to be carried up, and if the lower court is sustained, the prospect is that the Pennsylvania and Reading road will have a very handsome bill to settle.

THE Farmer's Emigration Society is a reality in London. It sent a batch of eighty men, with their families, to Texas, the other day, and it is organizing a second and larger expedition. The first colony carried with it more than $150,000 in cash. This would not give far from $2,000 to each emigrant.

THE depth of the water in the gorge below Niagara Falls has just been measured for the first time, the witness of the stream having baffled all previous efforts. The average depth from not far below the falls to the swift drift, where the velocity of the water is too great to admit of measurement, is 163 feet.

FROM April until last week, 21,000 cabin passengers left this country for Europe. It is estimated that these people spend on an average $1,000 each in fact, taking into consideration the proverbial open-handedness of the Americans, this estimate is rather low. Thus it appears that this country has sent $21,000,000 in gold in the one item of European amusement this year.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

PAINTERS ARE doing considerable damage in the West. For some time troops are to be seen to Cuba the present month.

THE Georgia Legislature adjourned last Wednesday. The bill for the relief of the Tennessee, on a strike.

A HUNDRED thousand dollar fire has just occurred at Shelby, N. B. The fire destroyed the mill and the mill race.

THE remission of veterans at Vincennes, Indiana, a few days ago, was attended by 15,000 people.

A PAIR of dispatch reports that 1,000 emigrants embarked at Genoa for the United States on Friday, and 1,200 on Sunday.

CHATTANOOGA reports the lynching of two negroes, Tom Jones and Bill Pearson, for the confessed murder of a grocer named Dick Wood.

THE moulting at Cincinnati, New Albany and Louisville are all strikes. The demand is 15 per cent. on present wages. The employees are resisting the strike.

IN the case of R. S. H. Taylor, at New Haven, Ct., charged with the murder of Mary Rogers, the defendant was acquitted on a technicality. The defendant had been a runaway.

A RAILROAD collision on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad of Wheeling a few days ago resulted in the killing of three persons, the engineer, fireman and a lad who was stealing a ride.

News from the frontier reports that Meritt's command has been in an engagement with the Indians on the Chicago and North Western Railroad. The Indians were severely defeated. The statement that the Union is a cowardly nation.

IT is stated that the Spanish Government will introduce a bill in the November session of the Cortes emancipating the slaves in Cuba immediately, with five years compulsory service to compensate the owners.

"COLE PEARCE," a more widely known beauty than Prince never lived, is dead. We may say that the most beautiful beauty of the world was a Venus with a heart of stone.

A SPECIAL from Kansas City reports the robbery of a passenger train on the Chicago and North Western Railroad, near that city, of $50,000 by twenty masked men. They kept up a continual firing while the work was being done. The conductor was knocked down, but not seriously hurt.

A LONDON cable says that Mr. Parnell and such of his colleagues among the advanced Home Rulers, as have a seat in Parliament, have forwarded an appeal to the American people in support of the whole cause.

THE Mollie Maguire murder, who killed Governor Weaver in 1874, a republic was granted John O'Neill to the 6th of November. Mr. Maguire, who was hanged, as his dying testament on the scaffold, expressed his regret and professed his love for the highest justice, and that he was a man who was willing to die for the cause of the people.

AN investigation into the Adrian disaster shows that the structure which fell with two hundred men on board, was a building of an unskilled workman, and that it had been weakened by mechanics that it would not hold a crowd. The exact figures of the injury are not yet known, but it is estimated that one hundred and thirty-three were killed.

THE excitement in Ireland over the question of high rents is growing more and more intense. An influential man, is exciting the people to the highest pitch of rebellion, and is receiving the endorsement of the clergy and authorities. England is in bad condition for an insurrection in Ireland just at the present moment. Yet it looks likely that such a thing may occur.

NEW Albany, Indiana, a man named Stringham, for a wage, found a savage half-breed. He got on his hands and knees, dog fashion, and when the savage broke across him, he caught his hands between his teeth and bit off. Then as the dog made the second attack, he caught the dog's tip in his mouth and finally crushed the dog's head. The dog was killed on a lick or something like that. The man who killed the dog is now in the hospital.

There is no diminution in the fatal weather of the West. The terrible weather, which has been so long prevailing, is now becoming more and more intense. The weather is now becoming more and more intense. The weather is now becoming more and more intense.

THE old but well-known proverb which the school-boys used to illustrate, that "what goes up must come down," is having a tragic emphasis added to it. Wise is evidently a victim to this doctrine, as were the two San Francisco balloonists, who, on Sunday, went aloft in a balloon, and on Monday, were found dead in the water.

Tossed about like a football from telegraph wires to chimney, they at last fell to the earth, a distance of 200 feet, and were killed. Some of the friends of the balloonists vainly begged them to wait until the wind had subsided.

THE Indiana State House, although just completed, has been seized by the Sheriff, taken apart and stowed away in a building in Indianapolis. This disaster, however, has not overthrown the real State House, which the city is so justly proud, but the miniature of the same, which has been on exhibition in Indianapolis for some time. There was a dispute about the ownership of the model of the State House and the little building, which is the only one of its kind in the world. The dispute was settled by the fact that the model of the State House was the property of the State, and the little building was the property of the city.

THE HORRIBLE RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

THE news comes from Detroit of a painful accident on the Michigan Central railroad near the place where the Chicago and North Western Railroad crosses it. The accident occurred at night, produced by a passenger train bound west, colliding with a freight train. Twenty-five persons or thereabouts were killed and many more were injured. The freight train was loaded with coal, and the passenger train was carrying a large number of passengers. The collision occurred at a point where the two roads crossed at an angle. The freight train was moving westward, and the passenger train was moving eastward. The collision was a head-on collision, and the result was a terrible one. The passenger train was completely wrecked, and the freight train was also badly damaged. The bodies of the dead were found scattered all over the scene of the accident. The injured were taken to the hospital, but many of them were too badly hurt to survive. The accident has caused a great deal of excitement in Detroit, and the people are wondering how it could have happened. The railroad companies are now investigating the cause of the accident, and are trying to find out what went wrong. It is hoped that the investigation will result in some changes being made to prevent such an accident from happening again.

THE news comes from Detroit of a painful accident on the Michigan Central railroad near the place where the Chicago and North Western Railroad crosses it. The accident occurred at night, produced by a passenger train bound west, colliding with a freight train. Twenty-five persons or thereabouts were killed and many more were injured. The freight train was loaded with coal, and the passenger train was carrying a large number of passengers. The collision occurred at a point where the two roads crossed at an angle. The freight train was moving westward, and the passenger train was moving eastward. The collision was a head-on collision, and the result was a terrible one. The passenger train was completely wrecked, and the freight train was also badly damaged. The bodies of the dead were found scattered all over the scene of the accident. The injured were taken to the hospital, but many of them were too badly hurt to survive. The accident has caused a great deal of excitement in Detroit, and the people are wondering how it could have happened. The railroad companies are now investigating the cause of the accident, and are trying to find out what went wrong. It is hoped that the investigation will result in some changes being made to prevent such an accident from happening again.

W. L. RIDDELL,
Editor and Proprietor.
BURLINGTON, KY., OCTOBER 16.

In accordance with the announcement made in our last issue, we appear before you to-day in our new and enlarged form. We hope to make our efforts to cater to the wants of our patrons not only conducive to their benefit, but also remunerative to ourselves; and in order to do this it is necessary that we should adhere to some fixed plan of operations. There is a mistaken idea held by a large number that an editor accepts communications and prints them merely because they fill up so much space; and we wish in the outset to correct this. It is not so much an effort with us to put in the paper as what to leave out. And right here we wish to say a few words to our correspondents. We want the news and nothing but the news, and that in the fewest possible words. Make mention of all strangers visiting in your midst, and also if any of your neighbors leave the country for a visit; but avoid noticing the little visits made by one neighbor to another. All deaths are proper subjects for notice; giving age, disease and name of deceased; but omit all eulogies. Resolutions, tributes of respect and obituary poetry will hereafter be charged for by the line, and must positively be paid for in advance; for such matter as this is not news, and serves only to please the few personally interested, to the detriment of the many who seek for news. Births and marriages we will also be glad to publish free of charge, and will be pleased to have any of our readers who may be possessed of such on-hand to send it to us. To shorten a long story, we propose to publish a newspaper, and such a one as will be a pride to the county. To do this we must have co-operation on the part of our readers. A hearty support makes a lively paper, and we look to our friends to do their part.

A word here and another there in our favor is like seed scattered by the winds, and will frequently bear fruit which will redound to our mutual good. With these few words, and a firm confidence in our friends, we take up the burden of the new volume with a cheerful heart; and, looking to the future with an eye on the past, we feel that our faith will not be misplaced. Thanking our patrons for their past favors, and endeavoring to deserve them in the future, we herewith present for your approval volume number 1.

This Tilden boom is being systematically organized in this State. The number of convicts in the State Penitentiary is being rapidly reduced by the kind-hearted old Governor.

It is the State Journal now instead of the Newport Local. A much more appropriate name for the enterprising sheet.

Toole, a man who recently went from Grant County, this State, to DeCATUR County, Indiana, was shot and mortally wounded last Friday week.

The Calloway News rejoices because tramps are not found in this county. That is an advantage of being located in the back woods, probably.

The political battle in Ohio is over, and the smoke is leaving the field; but who are the victors, and by how much we are not able to say at the present writing.

The Court of Appeals has decided that it can not entertain the appeal of Thomas Buford. The Governor will have to appoint special Judges to sit in the case.

There seems to be general dissatisfaction among the mechanics in this country, in regard to the wages they are receiving, and many of them have struck for an increase in wages.

MASSACHUSETTS sends 74 per cent. of her school population to school; New York sends 35 per cent.; New Jersey, 34; Connecticut and Rhode Island, 35; Oregon, 30 and Louisiana, 20.

The Lawrenceburg Press allows we know about the size of Tom Henderson. Whether we know his size or not, we consider him worth about one-tenth as much to his party as Voorhees is.

The Missouri river cut through at Kylesville Landing, Mo., dividing two or three farms, making a vast sheet, and shortening the distance between Brunswick and Glasgow some fifteen miles.

The Louisville Commercial says, in the match going on between the number of days Governor Blackburn has been in office and the number of pardons he has granted, the pardons keep a little ahead.

The new publisher of the Mayville Republican, is willing to publish the paper for a time at a low price for the good of the party. He will not conclude that party will not keep his head above water.

We may now expect good times for the people here commenced talking about business getting better. Confidence, it seems, has been restored, which is a great necessity for bringing about better and brisker times.

The Yeoman says the State Printer has drawn to money from the State since the appearance of the Auditor's circular declaring the Treasury exhausted. Other State officials have drawn their salaries all the same, though.

The press throughout the State condemns the liberal use Governor Blackburn is making of the pardoning power. This thing of having so many pardons is a matter of great concern to the people, when properly considered.

The Lexington Transcript says that the will of James Ford, of Woodford County, devises nearly the whole of his property to his colored housekeeper and her children. The estate is valued at $30,000. Here is a bonanza for the lawyers.

The Lexington Gazette says: "There is a greater demand for fine horse stock, both at saddle and harness, than we have noticed for a number of years. A large number of buyers from abroad are now in this section, and good, stylish horses command high prices."

The Board of Directors of the Southeastern Indiana Agricultural Society contemplates improving and enlarging the grounds located at Aurora. The success of the Fair, this fall, encourages this step, and, no doubt, the Aurora Fair is on the eve of a more prosperous career.

The dry weather has reduced the supply of coal which is generally on the market at this season. Should a severe winter set in without rain, the river sufficient to bring the coal out from above, the poor people in the cities relying on their fuel coming down the Ohio, will have a serious time this winter.

The Frankfort Yeoman has been informed by a prominent merchant of that city that there is a good reason to believe that the convicts in the Penitentiary are largely engaged in the manufacture of counterfeit coin. A number of counterfeit half dollars have made their appearance in that city and county, and some of them have been traced to the prison.

The Masonic Grand Lodge of this State convenes in Louisville on the 20th inst. During the session there will be considerable business, which materially affects the subordinate lodges, disposes of all the usual kindred, consented to transport the delegates to and from the meeting at reduced rates. A large attendance of delegates is anticipated.

SOME LAWRENCEBURGERS, sixteen in number, held half of the ticket that drew the capital prize in the late Commonwealth Distribution at Louisville. One of the lucky boys was our estimable friend, Geo. Palgraf, whose share was $1,250. The Register of last week advises the Lawrenceburg people to go slow in purchasing tickets for the drawing, inasmuch as the State has advised, but not likely to be heeded by many who are laboring under the excitement produced by the good fortune of their townsmen, and lottery tickets will sell like hot cakes for a while at least.

The Court of Appeals recently rendered a decision under the local option law which is of some interest to those trying to avoid the penalty of that law by selling whisky under a perpetual prescription, as it were. The case in which the opinion of the Court was rendered was taken up from Marion County. The appellant had been selling whisky under a prescription which was limited to one month, and when the party was indicted and tried in the lower court, it ruled that a prescription of the kind the defendant relied on was no defense, and imposed a fine, and the case coming up in the Court of Appeals, the judgment of the lower court was fully sustained. This settles the question as to whether or not it requires a prescription for each separate selling.

This Exposition, Cincinnati's big show, closed Saturday evening. It was visited by more people than were ever in that city on any previous occasion. All branches of the country were materially benefited and extensively advertised. The country cousins, without regard to color of previous condition, invaded the city from all directions, to gaze upon the wonderful achievements of man, collected from the four quarters of the globe. An immense amount of money was left in the city by the visitors, which in many instances would have found its way there through the country merchants, its natural channel, but it did not go to the Exposition. The country merchants have, to some extent, been injured by it, while the city merchants have enjoyed a feast.

It will be remembered that on the 10th of last September, Judge Hargis was summoned to appear before an Examiner of Nicholas County to testify and produce certain papers in the Green-Harris suit on behalf of the plaintiff, Thomas Green, and that he refused to do so, or to testify for which the Examiner fined him twenty-four hours. This matter was before Judge Stiles, last week, when the action of Hargis was sustained by the court, and the order made by the Examiner of Nicholas County vacated.

The Governor continues the even tenor of his way in pardoning the convicts, and, since his induction into office the first of last month, about thirty prisoners have been released from the Penitentiary under the pardon of Dr. Blackburn. One of the most aggravated cases is that of George Beard, sent from Pendleton County for six and one-half years upon two convictions—killing and robbery. This pardon was granted on the Governor's recommendation, and the proposition in Pendleton County petitioning for Executive clemency in Beard's case. The people of Pendleton were so out of humor about the matter that on last County Court day an indignation meeting was held at which the resolution was adopted, condemning the action of the Governor were passed.

We are informed that one day last week, a citizen of Delhi, Ohio, named Richardson, canvassed that part of the county lying along the river from Constance to Petersburg, in the interest of a narrow-gauge railroad which, he says, it is proposed to construct from Cincinnati through that section of the county. We did not learn the terms of the road, but understand that many of the citizens along the prospective route are very much pleased with the proposition in the interest of which Richardson was interviewing them. He represented to the land owners that so soon as the road is completed, there will be a demand for locations upon which to build residences for business men in the city, who want to reside at a reasonable distance in the country. For many years a railroad along the river from Louisville to Cincinnati has been under discussion, and who knows but what this may be one link of that road?

LAST Saturday, the committee appointed by the County Court to investigate the Poor-house property, and to take such steps in regard thereto as they think for the best interest of the county, met on the premises and viewed both the land and improvements, and adjourned to the Court-house where they considered various propositions, but failed to arrive any conclusions. The committee adjourned to meet again to-day. It was the unanimous opinion of the committee that the buildings are insufficient, and that something must be done. The Poor-house question has been before the Court of Justices annually for several years, and never before have the committees seemed willing to take hold of the matter and have anything done; but the committee this time apparently determined to take some definite disposition of it, either by repairing the property or by selling it and reinvesting the proceeds.

—The scab is making its appearance among the sheep in Shelby County.

—The Cincinnati Southern R. R. lacks but twenty-eight miles of being completed.

—The grasshoppers are said to be cutting down the wheat badly in some localities.

—The Madison grand jury reported 50 indictments for violating the local option law in Richmond County.

—A Crittenden County man gave a Louisville boot black a 50-cent piece mistaking it for a 25-cent piece.

—The Falmouth Independent and the Williamson Courier are discussing the acts of the Pendleton officials.

—The acreage of wheat and barley sown in Clark this fall is even greater than last year, but the quantity of rice sown is notably less.

—Ben. Deering is now pastor of the Methodist Church at Colorado Springs, Col., and has already instituted a revival since he took charge.

—Constitutionalist: Authenticated reports are reaching us from farmers in the county that the tobacco is rotting very fast on account of being cut too green.

—Courier-Journal: In Lewis County Bro. J. K. Plummer went to the court of the church to report some pious boys, and dropped dead just as he reached his seat again.

—Clark Democrat: New distilleries are being established all over the blue-grass region, and the amount of whisky manufactured this winter will be greater than for several years past.

—State Journal: If one sick man escapes from the Penitentiary via the wall, the State will spend $500 hunting him; but if forty sick men escape therefrom via the Governor, it won't spend a cent hunting them. Queer State!

—State Journal: Farmers are praying for an early start frost. The farmers appear to be the most influential.

—Glasgow Times: Mrs. Patsy Strader, aged ninety-nine years, and one of the first settlers in the new county of Monroe, retains all of her faculties unimpaired. Of nine children three still live, and the oldest is sixty-six.

—Trigg Democrat: Thomas Pollard living on Little River, a few miles west of Cadiz, has killed 480 squirrels since the 1st of July last, and sold them in town at $1 per dozen, being $40 realized from squirrels within three months.

—Falmouth Independent: A number of plum trees are in full bloom; others have plums on them nearly as large as partridge eggs. The early and rainy weather, and the old-fashioned homesteads are in full bloom. Two are in one year.

—Stanford Item: The Sheriff has made a levy on the property of the National Bank for taxes on capital stock. The question as to the bank's assets and liabilities is now before our next Circuit Court, which will begin the third Monday in October.

—Clark Democrat: Sorghum is yielding well this season and farmers report from 180 to 185 gallons per acre, which sells readily from the evaporators at 75 cents per gallon. It will be seen that it is one of the most profitable crops that can be raised on hill land or indeed on any soil.

—State Journal: The Kentucky Legislature convenes the last day of December. The year 1879 is fairly running over the fact that it will only give one day of its 365 to bear the heavy weight of the combined intelligence and wisdom which will then and there assemble.

—Speaking of the county's paupers the Trigg Democrat says: "The spectacle of a dozen or more of these unfortunate, white and black, being set up to the lowest bidder at each annual Court of Claims is as revolting to humanity and civilization as any scene ever witnessed in a slave mart."

Henderson News: The Court of Appeals of Kentucky is now 1,800 cases behind the docket, and some relief must be given. An Intermediate Court is suggested, with jurisdiction over all suits under $2,000, to be held at Lebanon, Bowling Green or some other place conveniently located.

—Mayville Enterprise: It is proposed to organize a joint stock company, secure permanent grounds near the city of Mayville, and hold an annual Fair and Exposition. As soon as a sufficient amount of stock is subscribed the company will be organized and a charter and other appropriate legislation secured this winter. —Cynthiana News: On September 26th, John Neal, aged seventy-five, Cynthiana, wrote to a married lady friend in Marshall, Ky., asking if she knew of a marriageable young lady in her community. Her reply was accompanied by a photograph of a Miss Parnell, just twenty, whereupon Neal made a formal proposal through the post, which was accepted, and October 2d carried to his home a blushing bride.

—Versailles Item: Monday the negro man, Tom Brown, who is in jail awaiting trial for highway robbery, was sent for by his wife, who was driving a milch cow and a quarter mare, and the court would allow her to see him and bid him a final farewell before she died. Her request was granted, and the Sheriff took him to see her. She is now, perhaps, a candidate for heaven and he for the Penitentiary—two very different routes.

The Wisconsin Journal says: A Barn in Oakland, Jefferson County, Wis., was recently burned by the spontaneous combustion of clover put in the barn in an unsecured condition and covered over with marsh hay, which prevented the gas formed by fermentation of clover from escaping, until an explosion took place that was heard a mile and a quarter away, and which let the air so suddenly upon the clover that it ignited.

HICKORY NUT CAKE.—One pound of sugar, one half pound of butter, four eggs, one cup of milk, one tablespoonful of soda and two of cream of tartar, the meats of two quarts of hickory nuts, flour to make a pound cake.

Poultry.—Beware of carbolic acid used as a disinfectant. It is a most common mistake to use it. It is a most common mistake to use it. It is a most common mistake to use it.

Preserving Sheep from Dogs.—Place on one sheep in every ten of the flock a bell of the usual size for sheep. The instinct of the dog prompts him to do all his acts in a sly, stealthy manner; his attacks upon sheep are most frequently made at night, when they are at rest, and the simultaneous jingling of all the bells strikes terror to the dogs; they turn their tails and leave the sheep, fearing the noise of the bells.

The Orchard.—To begin an orchard, get the ground ready now. Have it rich and well. Plant the trees in October or November, after the leaves fall, and before the ground becomes too hard. As do well in neighboring orchards. Get the trees mainly of a new nursery, or a man you have reason to believe trustworthy. Go to the nursery, and choose them with fibrous roots and plenty of them; be sure you know what varieties you want.

Keep Air from Stored Hay.—If this principle is true, it follows that the larger the mow and tighter our barns, the more perfectly is our hay preserved. For the purpose of putting on a load in one mow and the next in another, is a large bill each barrel separately and tread down the hay as it is stowed away. It is a good thing to be prevented by this kind of storing hay.

Smallow Seed for Poultry.—Many farmers look upon the smallow as a weed, and never dream of the value of this plant. For several years they have been used by the breeders of poultry as a seed for chickens, fowls; in small quantities they are mixed with the other food, and the peculiar properties of the seeds impart a beautiful gloss to the feathers, and a plumage of the adult birds. For those who raise fancy fowls for exhibition, it is essential to perfect success that the plumage should be perfect.

Keeping Apples in Plaster.—I have been experimenting the past few years with apples, and have found that plaster keeps them much longer than any other way I have tried. I use flour plaster, and find them preferable to apple plaster. I have found that plaster keeps them much longer than any other way I have tried.

Feeling in Oratory.—Some one asked Sheridan, a wit and orator, why he went to hear the eccentric Rowland Hill preach. "I go," he replied, "because the ideas come red-hot from his brain."

Country Soil Life.—Country folks are in general so fully occupied with affairs that they have no time to discover how they are being deceived. So far as this is concerned we think. We work too hard. We take few, or no holidays.

Explicit Enough.—The following are the words of a man in a store in town, and are certainly explicit enough for all practical purposes: "The proprietor is not in; don't know where he will be."

Baking Meats.—In baking meat in a boiler, and then the boiler is placed over a fire, and the meat is cooked. In baking meat in a boiler, and then the boiler is placed over a fire, and the meat is cooked.

Country Editor (to well-to-do merchant): "Wouldn't you like to take my paper, Mr. Blank?"

Below I give the result of an archeological search made during a two weeks' rambling through the hills and valleys of the country.

First. I found in the bend of what is called the "old river," a large number of pits, feet below the surface. In these pits were ashes, fire coals, arrow-heads, and other things.

To SWEETEN BUTTER.—When a French woman has butter that is not sweet, she adds to it a little salt, a little soda, and brings it to a boil, and then by allowing the settlings to remain at the bottom and pouring off all the cream, it becomes sweet and pure.

Cooking Pork on Tea.—Boil a chicken (or chicken) in as little water as possible, until the meat falls from the bones. Chop the meat fine and season with salt and pepper. Put the bottom of a crock with some slices of hard-boiled eggs, then a layer of chopped chicken, another of eggs, then chicken until the mold is reached.

BEAN AND OTHER SOUPS.—Soak one quart of dried beans in lukewarm water overnight. The next morning put in four quarts of cold water, and let them boil slowly for three hours. Then pour serving stir in a large spoonful of butter, beef drippings, or pork fat. Of course it will be much richer, and have a finer flavor if a small piece of salt pork is boiled with it.

Never throw away bones left from any kind of fresh meat. In winter they will keep good several days. In summer keep them as you have them, covered with water, and let them simmer for several hours. With the addition of a few vegetables you will be surprised how good a soup this will make.

For a pound of salt. For a pound of salt, take one quart of water, and let it boil for three hours. Then pour serving stir in a large spoonful of butter, beef drippings, or pork fat. Of course it will be much richer, and have a finer flavor if a small piece of salt pork is boiled with it.

At an inspection I was at last spring in the neighborhood of London, a large number of skeletons were found. The skeletons were found in a large number of pits, feet below the surface. In these pits were ashes, fire coals, arrow-heads, and other things.

Why the Pyramid Was Built. It was built to supply the Egyptian public with the means of sliding down into a country where snow never falls. The Egyptian who paid the requisite amount of money to ascend the pyramid by the staircase, and then to slide down the polished granite side, was a very common sight.

When his "best girl" leaves home for a boarding-school, she promises to write faithfully, to be true as steel, and all that sort of nonsense. The first letter is a nice long one, brimming with the very essence of affectionate tenderness, and is signed, "Exclusively your own darling."

The Heartiest, Tallest, and Oldest Men. The tallest man of whom record is made was a German named Hans Har and a Hungarian soldier, name not given, who lived several centuries ago, each of them being eleven feet high; their weight is not known.

Quartz in Montana. Montana has been discovered as a rich source of quartz. The quartz is found in the hills and valleys of the country. The quartz is found in the hills and valleys of the country.

Country Editor (to well-to-do merchant): "Wouldn't you like to take my paper, Mr. Blank?"

Below I give the result of an archeological search made during a two weeks' rambling through the hills and valleys of the country.

First. I found in the bend of what is called the "old river," a large number of pits, feet below the surface. In these pits were ashes, fire coals, arrow-heads, and other things.

To SWEETEN BUTTER.—When a French woman has butter that is not sweet, she adds to it a little salt, a little soda, and brings it to a boil, and then by allowing the settlings to remain at the bottom and pouring off all the cream, it becomes sweet and pure.

Cooking Pork on Tea.—Boil a chicken (or chicken) in as little water as possible, until the meat falls from the bones. Chop the meat fine and season with salt and pepper. Put the bottom of a crock with some slices of hard-boiled eggs, then a layer of chopped chicken, another of eggs, then chicken until the mold is reached.

BEAN AND OTHER SOUPS.—Soak one quart of dried beans in lukewarm water overnight. The next morning put in four quarts of cold water, and let them boil slowly for three hours. Then pour serving stir in a large spoonful of butter, beef drippings, or pork fat. Of course it will be much richer, and have a finer flavor if a small piece of salt pork is boiled with it.

Never throw away bones left from any kind of fresh meat. In winter they will keep good several days. In summer keep them as you have them, covered with water, and let them simmer for several hours. With the addition of a few vegetables you will be surprised how good a soup this will make.

For a pound of salt. For a pound of salt, take one quart of water, and let it boil for three hours. Then pour serving stir in a large spoonful of butter, beef drippings, or pork fat. Of course it will be much richer, and have a finer flavor if a small piece of salt pork is boiled with it.

At an inspection I was at last spring in the neighborhood of London, a large number of skeletons were found. The skeletons were found in a large number of pits, feet below the surface. In these pits were ashes, fire coals, arrow-heads, and other things.

Why the Pyramid Was Built. It was built to supply the Egyptian public with the means of sliding down into a country where snow never falls. The Egyptian who paid the requisite amount of money to ascend the pyramid by the staircase, and then to slide down the polished granite side, was a very common sight.

When his "best girl" leaves home for a boarding-school, she promises to write faithfully, to be true as steel, and all that sort of nonsense. The first letter is a nice long one, brimming with the very essence of affectionate tenderness, and is signed, "Exclusively your own darling."

The Heartiest, Tallest, and Oldest Men. The tallest man of whom record is made was a German named Hans Har and a Hungarian soldier, name not given, who lived several centuries ago, each of them being eleven feet high; their weight is not known.

Quartz in Montana. Montana has been discovered as a rich source of quartz. The quartz is found in the hills and valleys of the country. The quartz is found in the hills and valleys of the country.

THE BURLINGTON FREE PRESS AND OPINION

VOLUME V.

BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1879.

NUMBER 2.

TOPICS OF THE DAY.

WARM WORKMEN STRIKE. The blow falls on their wives and children.

UPON HIMSELF AND HIS WIFE. The Sultan of Turkey spends $10,000,000 annually.

COMPLAINTS OF A SCARCITY OF SMALL BILLS. are still heard in banking and commercial circles.

SHOOTING AND ATTEMPT AT SLAUGHTER. have suddenly become the leading features of reports upon crime.

RECENT OVERSIGHTS OF AMERICAN HAWKS. have overstocked the London market, and heavy losses have resulted as a natural consequence.

THIRTY OF THE PENNSYLVANIA "MOLIES." have been hanged, and there are as many more in prison. Henry has proved an effective remedy, for the organization has died out entirely.

THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD is being built west of Burlington at the rate of a mile a day. Better time has been made in railroad building, but this will do.

THE ORDER OF ST. GEORGE is the most important in Russia, the grand cordon being given to those only who have commanded 100,000 men in a successful campaign.

A PROCLAMATION recently issued by the King of Siam declares that, hereafter, every man shall be allowed to worship God unmolested, and according to the dictates of his own conscience.

THE RUSS were supplied a month ago with repeating rifles and the best of Russian ammunition, and that by traders holding permits from the Government.

HERE is another complaint to Indianapolis. Henry Ward Beecher says: "When I die I would rather be buried at Indianapolis, the scene of my early labors, than anywhere else on earth."

ENGLISH nobility has gone down before the will ways of Victoria Woodhull and T. C. Clifton. Two aristocratic hearts have succumbed to the charms of these two daughters of America.

THE ESTIMATED yield in the nine principal pork-producing States this year is fifteen and a half millions. But what the average citizen wants to know is, how much pork he is likely to get for a shilling.

THE CALIFORNIA courts have forbidden the weekly publication of marriage licenses in the papers, on the ground that such matters are neither certain nor matters of public news until the knot has been securely tied.

BALLOONS sailing all around the skies are getting remarkably frequent in the West. It is curious, too, that they are always seen in the middle of the night—and by persons evidently in the condition of the sailor men who always see the seer serpent.

AFTER the trouble is over the Utes will be driven out of a reservation to furnish them, and the country will have to pay the bills for another costly Indian war. Both sides will lose in money, life and civilization. Nobody will gain a feather.

THE PATROLMEN of New York and Philadelphia receive $1,200 a year; Brooklyn, $1,100; Boston, $1,050; Washington, $1,080; Baltimore, $930; St. Louis, $900; Chicago, $850; Cincinnati, $800; New Orleans, $600; while San Francisco pays her police officers $1,500 a year.

A NEW temperance movement has been organized in Great Britain. It takes the form of a social company, with a capital of $5,000,000, in shares of $5 each. It proposes to open temperance houses all over the Kingdom. The Archbishop of Canterbury heads the list in the prospectus of the enterprise.

THE RECEIPTS at the Cincinnati Exposition amounted to $98,000, the largest sum ever obtained. Of this amount the managers expect to reap a profit of $20,000 or four times the amount ever before made. This increase is largely ascribed to the substantial and magnificent buildings erected for the enterprise.

IN ORDER to prevent as much as possible strikes and total want of work, the short-time system has been resorted to in England. But the movement has been very largely unsuccessful. A dispatch from Oldham states that the short-time policy has become so general that it is estimated that 6,500,000 spindles are now affected.

MEASURES of precaution continue to be taken by the English Government towards Ireland, merely on account of the fiery denunciations made at anti-rent meetings. After having captured cavalry in several districts of Ireland, the British authorities are about to station infantry in every available part of County Mayo.

SWITZERLAND has been visited this year by 1,400,000 strangers, a number which exceeds by several thousands the average of the last four years. Of this total, one-fifth are said to be English, German, and Austrian; five-tenths the Russians, one-tenth French and Danes, three-twentieths Americans, and other nationalities one-tenth.

A TRAMP got a new suit of clothes out of the Sydney, Ohio, authorities in a very original way. He committed some slight offense, for which he was put into jail. As soon as he was behind the bars he deliberately took off his clothes and cut them into shreds, including his boots. Of course a new suit had to be purchased, so that he could appear for trial.

RUSSIA is in a bad way, with a dull future before her. She is overwhelmed in debt; her taxes are high; her subjects are discontented and threaten revolution; her crops have failed; and now a famine is threatened through her Siberian possessions. Verily Russia has her trials! If the great empire comes safely through her present trials, and escapes domestic revolution and financial wreck it will be more than seems probable now.

THE BOSTON ADVERTISER says that the result of the Prussian elections is a substantial victory for Prince Bismarck's new allies and an eclipse of the Liberal party. The Conservatives have but forty-nine of an absolute majority of the members known to have been elected, and the Ultramarines, who will act with them, number close upon one hundred. The combination is strong enough to carry easily all of Prince Bismarck's measures.

WE BELIEVE that there are but two policies from which the Government can choose for the settlement of this troublesome Indian problem: One is the protection of the personal rights of the Indians, the other extermination. The sooner one of these policies is accepted and carried out, the sooner will the frequent and horrible border outrages be stopped, and the country rid of the constantly recurring and vexatious question.

MRS. ROSE MEKKER, daughter of the Indian agent and journalist whom the Utes have murdered, writes a pathetic letter, in which she rebukes the dilatoriness of Governor Pitkin in sending relief to the White River post, and in different parts of the territory of the Utes. It does seem to the ordinary human mind that the handful of savages of the Western plains might be dealt with better than our Government has dealt with them these fifty years.

LAND MEETINGS at which thousands assemble, are being held or projected in different parts of Ireland. These, patriots, politicians, enthusiasts, soreheads and agitators of all kinds loudly lament the woman's manifold grievances and savagely denounce the heartlessness of their landlords. A considerable reduction of rent is the immediate object of their demands; but an entire change in the land laws, and the total abolition of absentee landlordism are the ultimate aims of the agitation.

RELIABLE authorities say Congress has been successful in securing a reduction of the internal revenue tax on manufactured tobacco from twenty-six to sixteen cents per pound, an endeavor now being made to effect a proportionate reduction of the tax on whiskey. A delegation of whiskey distillers will visit Washington in a few days to urge upon the Government the propriety of reducing the property of the reduction, and to endeavor to persuade them to favor the measure in his annual report.

DAZZA, the dictator of Bolivia, it is said, is one of the worst specimens of a despotic tyrant that has ever appeared in South America. The people of Bolivia, who are far from being enthusiastic for him, are driven into the army like sheep, and kept in the ranks by the most atrocious terrorism. During a recent march across a desert, Dazza ordered that any soldier complaining of fatigue or pain should be shot, and eight men, unable to keep up with their comrades on account of swollen feet, were put to death in obedience to this barbarous mandate.

CONCERNING the last and fatal balloon trip taken by Prof. Wise and his companion, Mr. Burr, the St. Louis Times-Journal, draws the following conclusion as the cause of the sad result: "It is safe to conclude that Prof. Wise and Mr. Burr were only determined when they started on their trip to make it a memorable one. The professor, being a very old man could not expect to be so successful as he was."

MEASURES of precaution continue to be taken by the English Government towards Ireland, merely on account of the fiery denunciations made at anti-rent meetings. After having captured cavalry in several districts of Ireland, the British authorities are about to station infantry in every available part of County Mayo.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

THE COAL MINERS at Belleville, Ill., threaten a strike at an early day. The Pennsylvania coal region is experiencing a severe drought. The Southern States have built a canal, and now proclaim their unanimous desire for peace. Two of the Nebraska railroads belonging to the Dox Middleton gang, Nolan and Johnston, have been captured by the military.

THE LATE Oliver H. P. Perry, an ex-convict, has been taken into custody at his home in the city of New York. Navigation at some points is almost impossible. The reports from the yellow fever district are so encouraging, owing to this cooler weather, that that terrible disease for this year may be considered practically over.

The Election in Iowa.

IOWA is extremely Republican by a majority of 15,000 to 20,000. It is probable that the Republicans have lost a few Senators and Representatives, but not enough to affect their majority in the Legislature. Beyond the Greenback vote, and perhaps also the Prohibition vote, which was expected to draw largely from the Republican party, the Greenback vote, which was expected to draw largely from the Republican party, the Greenback vote, which was expected to draw largely from the Republican party.

An Extraordinary Railway Project.

ONE of the extraordinary projects, with which the brains of modern French engineers appear to be teeming, is that of constructing a railway from the frontiers of Algeria across the desert of Sahara to Timbuktu, the great mart of the Sudan in Central Africa. It was first proposed in 1866, that Mungo Park, the once celebrated traveler, was killed on his second African journey, and that he was in the same region that Clapperton died during his explorations in 1827. Denham, Clapperton, Barth, Vogel, Rolin and Lander have since traced the Southern limit of their travels from various points, but it has never been thoroughly explored. What is known of it is that it is very populous, that it contains magnificent rivers, large lakes, and that except in its southern portion, where marshes abound, it is extremely fertile. But the land is oppressive, and the climate very unhealthy for Europeans. The total population is roughly estimated at fifty millions. Its trade with Europe is carried on by caravans from Morocco and Algeria across the great desert. The exports consist of slaves, gum, gold, gunnys, indigo, ivory, etc. So ends my tale, as he said to the boy at the same time giving him a practical illustration of how he conducted business.

THE railway project is a very ambitious one. It is estimated that the cost of the project would be $100,000,000. The project is a very ambitious one. A POOR young man fell in love with a girl who was poor and heires, and the passion he had for her, it only wanted the parents' consent to make him happy. A father, hearing the father-in-law, said to his daughter's hand, "How much do you command?" exclaimed the young man, "I want much, very much. What are your terms?" "Well," said the father, "I want the truth, I want you to give your consent, to marry my daughter, and marry her as she is." "I refuse," said the young man.

Smith, the Republican candidate for Govt.

nor, has been elected over Jenkins, the Democratic candidate for that office, by a majority of 28,000, or thereabouts. In 1877, Smith was elected Governor of the State by only about 4,000. It should be remarked that this year's Republican majority in the State was the estimate made by the late Hon. Z. Chandler, although the returns are more favorable to the Republicans than they expected. A dispatch to a Democratic journal says: 'The cause of the overwhelming defeat of the Democrats is attributed to the bad policy in defeating Hon.

Alex Mitchell, who was in Europe at the time of the Convention, and on his return refused to accept the nomination, thereby rendering a second nomination necessary, which was delayed so long that the Republicans got in their deadly work in the meantime."

NEBRASKA—REPUBLICAN.
Election returns come in slowly. The indications are that Cobb, Republican candidate for Supreme Judge, is elected over Wakely, Democrat, by 12,900 majority. Goussett and Carson, Republican Regents of University, are elected. Total vote of State will reach 60,000. Republican county tickets are generally successful.

MICHIGAN—REPUBLICAN.
The result of the municipal election at Detroit shows a Republican gain of 3,000, the Republicans electing their candidate, W. G. Thompson, by a majority of 1,300, and the entire city ticket, with the exception of

The returns—very meager—indicate a reduced Republican majority in the Legislature. The Senate will probably stand: 17 Republicans and 4 Democrats; the House will be about 153 to 98, or a majority of between 60 and 70 on joint ballot.

VIROGINIA. The contest in Virginia has been almost wholly engrossed in the question of repudiation. Indications are that the debt-payers will have forty-five in the House of Delegates, composed of one hundred members. In the Senate the manager returns indicate a minority for the debt-payers of four or five. It is probable that the Republicanists are beaten, but

History of Hats.

How few of us ever trace the history of the hat. The felt hat is as old as Homer. The Greeks made them in skin-cases, which transported, because, as An ancient figure of Liberty in the times of Antoninus Livy, A. D. 115, holds the cap in the right hand. The Persians wore soft hats; plumed hats were the head-dress of the Syrian caps of Xerxes; the broad-brim was worn by the Macedonians.

Charles VI in 1469, wore a felt hat lined with red and plumed." The English men and women in 1510 wore close woollen or knitted caps; two centuries ago hats were worn in the house. And Lord Clarendon, in his essay, speaking of the decay of respect due the aged, says, "that in his younger days he never kept his hat on before those older than himself except at dinner." In the third teenth century Pope Innocent IV allowed the cardinals the use of the scarlet cloth hat. The hats now in use are the cloth hat, leather hat, silk hat, opera hat, spring-brim hat, and straw hat.

Sympathy of the Nerves.
[Ridge on Health and Disease.]

When the nerves from long habit have been accustomed to transmit their messages from distinct parts, and are suddenly cut off from them, they still retain along their tracts the sympathetic actions. Thus a man who has had a leg amputated will feel distinctly, along the course of the trunk of the nerve, sensations which no longer exist. The mind also is influenced by this; and frequently this peculiar direct nervous action can only be allayed by that which is negative and reflex. A curious incident occurred within my own experience: An old sailor suffered much from this; he retained his diseased foot too long, but at last consented to amputation. When he had his nervous pains, he always called for hot water, into which he put his wooden stump. If told of his folly in supposing that such a proceeding could do any good, he would become enraged; and his paroxysm of pain would increase; but if gratified he took things easy, and the process actually appeared to do him good, though all must know there could be no real benefit. Still here is the effect of mind over matter.

THIS Commissioner of Agriculture says: "A good deal of corn was cut too green for fear of frost, and with the view to wheat sowing. The exceptionally warm weather of the last few weeks has caused it in many instances to mould in the shock to some extent; much of it, too, was blown down during the last wet spell, and some damage accrued from this cause also; but notwithstanding, the crop throughout the State may be set down as a good one. In some districts in Western Kentucky it is quite above an average; so also in Missouri and in some of the adjacent States. That the crop has been fair one in Central Kentucky, the magnificent specimens that are beginning to adorn our office attest, and we are expecting cumulative evidence from other parts of the State that the crop, taken by and large, ought to be satisfactory."

are brightening, and that haggard, despondent look—a sure indication of "alamantine" times—is seldom seen on the face of an energetic man.

The result of the election is sincerely deplored by Democrats of this county. Could the ticket have been voted on by the "Galatians," Calico Clashes would have received so strong a defeat as would have blighted his prospects, now so brilliant, forever and eternally.

Prof. Rogging of this place, has charge of the school in this county, known as the Brick School house.
On Friday last, Mr. Laban Ellis saw and gist-mill was burned to the ground. The cause is not attributed to incendiarism, but was the result of carelessness on the part of the laborers, or defective machinery. This is the second misfortune our community has sustained in the last two or three years, and it reveals the necessity of erecting a mill in this place imperative. Mr. Sol. Ellis, of Sparta, is talking of locating a steam flouring-mill here; but, in case he does not, it will be to the advantage of our community for a man to invest his capital in the milling business in Glencoe.

Small grain is being seriously damaged by the extreme drought.
Many farmers are compelled to sow their wheat the second time.
In general, tobacco is coming up dark; few, if any, crops being of sufficient fineness to command the best prices.
It becomes our very painful duty to announce the presence, in this county, of a malignant type of dis-easement, but with equal vigour, attacks and causes dreadful havoc with all who expose themselves to the "arch destroyer." Fully developed mauling is not infrequently the unconscious victim, while, ever and anon, it will reach forth its relentless hand and snatch, with infinite satisfaction, a bachelor who had hitherto rejoiced in his security.

It possesses a peculiarity unknown to any other disease, viz.: It seems to subdue a single foe, but with the ardor of an inhabitant of the infernal regions, it grasps simultaneously, into its death-like embrace, an individual of each sex. The latest victims are Mr. Black, Volney, and Miss Beckie Ellis. They have the earnest sympathy of all who witness a conflict, your correspondent is cluded. Violent symptoms are in-ferable, and, ere long, we are right in our prognostications, it will become our duty to record more deaths of a social character.

Miss Jennie Castleman and Bettie
Williams have returned to school, having been at home for a short vacation.

VIRGINIA LETTER.

CHARLESTON, W. Va. Oct. 29, 1879.
To the Editor of the Recorder:

It certainly is a source of unfeigned gratitude to know that, in what ever relation or condition of life we are placed (if we have the money), we can have the Recorder.

Charleston, the place of our present location, is the business center of a large extent of country and containing over 8,000 inhabitants, has in operation three saw-mills, two flouring-mills, one woolen-mill, all run by steam; two foundries one carriage and furniture factory, and a great many minor, but important enterprises, profitable to the city.

Eleven churches, three public schools and a Catholic Seminary representing the religious and educational advantages of the city. It is surrounded by immense beds of iron and coal, and promises to become one of the most important manufacturing points in the State.

The great Kanawha Valley of which this city is the metropolis, with its almost endless resources of salt, iron, lumber and coal; and with its superior facilities for transporting both water and rail, offers inducements to capitalists second to none in West Virginia.

In the way of news, we have nothing of importance to write. General Samuel Cary will visit Charleston during the month of Nov. for the purpose of delivering several lectures.
His subject will be "The mistakes of Moses or Angelism, which?" "The Progress of the Age;" "Hard times
—the Cause and Remedy."

Deputy Sheriff B. F. Wyatt, while crossing the river at this place, last Sunday afternoon, met with a serious accident. He was driving a horse and buggy, and the horse, while the ferry boat drove down to the water edge to permit his horse to drink, the horse plunged into the water and went over an abutment which was under the water, and unseen.
The horse was drowned, and the buggy broken. Mr. Wyatt escaped without further injury than a complete drenching.

The Penitentiary problem will be brought before the next General Assembly early in the session, and it is clearly demonstrated that something will have to be done; and the members may as well make up their minds to take hold of the subject at the outset. One of three things will have to be done, either enlarge, build a branch Penitentiary, or allow the convicts worked on public works. A careful investigation will show which of these three will be to the best interest of the State. The one determined upon should be put through without delay.

R. M. FOREMAN, a resident lawyer of this place, and well versed in police and an aspirant for "Sergeant-at-ed as to the political situation, and that gentleman made the following reply: "If the Republican party should induce into the Presidential chair one of their number, before the end of that Presidential term, the mighty fabric of the Republic will have been exorcised by northern usurpations, and this free and proud sovereignty will be dismembered, and the yoke of tyranny imposed upon the American people."—Tribune News.

It is strange that sensible people

THIRTY minutes per day is the extent of time the Solons at Washington devote to legislative business of the country. They are too much engaged in discussing Presidential possibilities to allow such trivial matters as law making to engage their time.

The Secretary of the War Department will not allow the Government ordinance, at Washington, to be used to raise a salute at the Grant reception in that city, on the 16th inst.
That is evidence that the Secretary is not much on the Grant boom.

"PUDGY and cautious politicians can not fail to admit that Republican victory in 1880 is probable only not sure." So says W. E. Chandler in a letter to the New York Tribune.
He also regrets that Senator Chandler is not here to assist in the next Presidential contest.

Just at this time the Democratic party seems possessed of an incalculable amount of material out of which to construct an occupant for the White House. Every man of any prominence has from three to six candidates for that position, either of which is sure of success.

MR. M. HAMILTON, candidate for Doorkeeper of the next State Senate, is rather sanguine of success. About the only thing that will endanger his election, he thinks, is the election of some man in this part of the State for Clerk of the Senate. Such a conjuncture may work to his disadvantage.

HAYES and Secretary Sherman have found it necessary to back down from the financial policy enunciated in the President's message. For a time it was thought it would produce dissensions in the party, but now all is peace and harmony, the President having concluded that he was off on the money question.

THE Cincinnati Price Current published an elaborate report of the supply of hogs, based on returns from 800 points through the West. The report indicates a considerable deficiency in the number of hogs in Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana, but Illinois and Iowa are expected to fill the gap, if, below last year's supply, and Missouri, Kansas, and Nebraska are expected to make up the deficiency this side of the Mississippi. Therefore the Price Current sees no reason for supposing there will be a less number for winter packing than was reached last year. Packing to date is about 100,000 more than at the same time last year.

The Roadmaster have a decided majority in the Virginia Legislature, and the State debt is deemed to be repudiated. The Governor of the Commonwealth is opposed to such a move and says that such an inability can justify or excuse the non-payment of the State debt.

THE big receptions the large cities in this country are giving General Grant have very much the appearance of a money-making scheme with them. Chicago boasts of the large amount realized there by the Grant show, and Louisville signifies an expectation of being liberally rewarded by the entertainment given him. Thus the Grant show now making the tour of the country is taking advantage of both the scheming politicians and those who utilize it for financial benefits.

LAST week, our Richmond correspondent gave us Representative Conner's plan for disposing of the Penitentiary question; but his plan is nothing more than a letting go of one horn of the dilemma and grasping another. Of the large number of convicts confined in the State prison, there is comparatively few there for hirceny of the amount of fifteen dollars or less. Therefore, they relieve themselves of such a law as is reported that Mr. Conner proposes would amount to very little, while it would increase the expense of the country, to none extent, wherein those persons would have to be confined. Now, as an amendment, we will suggest to Mr. Conner that he substitute the whipping-post for the imprisonment clause, and by so doing, the punishment can be quickly administered and at very little expense, and the expense is what the people want to get rid of.

The "Sealy Brothers."
[Paris True Kentuckian.]
These monstrosities were on exhibition in this city, and were visited by a large number of our citizens, including the medical fraternity. The children are aged from 8 to 12, and 12 years, and are the sons of a Mr.
Elam, of Morgan county, in this State. Their skin is like that of a snake or alligator, and covered with scales from the crown of the head to the feet. They are perfectly developed, healthy, and quite intelligent, considering their limited intercourse in their mountain home, this being the first time they ever left it.
These children are very fond of fish in water, and nothing seems to give them so much pleasure as to get into a stream where they can disport for hours, diving under the water where the eldest says he can stay for 15 minutes without the least inconvenience. They cannot swim, but crawl on the bottom of the stream, and tell us they can see when the element is clear. They are very fond of playing with snakes, and the reptiles seem equally as fond of the boys, for they allow the Aquatic children to handle as they choose, Mr. Rice, who has the children in charge, says their father is a poor blacksmith, and has six children besides the two mentioned,
one other, a girl, probably three years,
being covered by a tough, scaly envelope like her brothers, the other children having clear, smooth skins.
To show us how callous was the skin of these boys, Mr. Rice poured a skin-let of ice-cold water on the shoulder of one of them, the boy never flinched, but laughing as if the sensation was agreeable, and placing our hand upon the wet surface we found it to be three or four degrees warmer than the dry parts of the body. A physician who made a critical examination informs us this is a skin disease, but not contagious in the least.

Another victim of the Noble Phiits fruit, and not by the perfume of its flowers of sentimentality.

—Mt. Sterling Sentinel: Governor Blackburn has pardoned W. F.
Kennedy, who shot a man named Johnson, in Garrard county, 16 years ago. He was never indicted until last January, when he left the State and remained out of it until he received word that he had been pardoned by the Governor. It was published in several papers that Governor Blackburn said he would not pardon any person before trial, or for carrying concealed weapons, but the pardon of Kennedy, and the various ones in different parts of the State, including some in this county, for carrying concealed weapons, show that some one was perpetrating a joke on the tender-hearted Governor, or that he is too sickle to occupy that position. To speak more seriously, Governor Blackburn's course in pardoning so many men and turning them loose upon society, has had a tendency to encourage bad men and cause an increase of crime.
The nomination of Dr. Blackburn, upon the ground that he was a philanthrop over men, pre-eminently qualified for the position, was a mistake that we think the Democratic party throughout the State are beginning to realize.

J. C. ABBOTT, the indefatigable clerk in Galen's drugstore, upon at Gainesville, was in town Sunday. Cave reports business unprecedentedly good at this point, and says he has sold a net-gain of 1,000 head of cattle. He has inaugurated an immense boom there this fall.

To this issue we announce Dr. S. S. Scott, of Florence, as a candidate to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Hon. E. C. Norton. Dr. Scott is a man too well known in this county and senatorial district to need any introduction. His political record will sustain his Democracy under the severest tests.

WHILE in Florence one afternoon last week, a young lady friend who is considerably interested in the dinner and supper party to be given at that place for the benefit of the Methodist Church, gave us a very pressing invitation to attend, promising us the finest dish of oyster-soup provided for the occasion. We don't see how we can refuse to go, and so we are going.

A few days since, a young couple of this vicinity, who had agreed to be united by the silken bands of wedlock despite those objections of relatives, had their plans very unexpectedly disrupted by the young lady's sister accompanying her on the trip of which she expected to take the advantage and elope. Consequently the wedding was postponed till a more opportune time.

We are requested by W. M. Conner to say that Point Pleasant Grange will have a Christmas tree at its hall, on Saturday the 27th inst., at 1 o'clock sharp. The many friends of the Rev. H. T. Daniel, formerly of this place, now of Owen County, were greatly shocked by the death of the very young son of the Rev. H. T. Daniel, who occurred one day last week. Mr. Daniel is a young and very popular minister of the Baptist Church, and has been married only about two years, and he certainly has the hearty sympathy of this community in his great loss.

Mr. D. was formerly Miss Alice Reel, of this place. She was taken sick about eight o'clock one morning and died before noon that day.

Smith's Wild Cherry Cough Balsam, only 25 cents.

He Don't Want an Old Stager.

To the Editor of the Recorder.

The young and debilitated man, and the multitude is astonished, as such a thing rarely happens, unless better pay and higher honors are given. They don't want an old stager. They can't see how Boone can be more highly honored than he is in having one of her sons so faithfully and fully fill the office of Sheriff from this district. Boone never reaches the highest prices in governmental positions, and now, by her son, she is to be made a political case in this county. People about Bullsville have a chance to get on the track, even if crowded out later by the county, and they are not to be five Democrats in the county, who are qualified for the office, and who would, if not afraid to enter against the opposition, be a good deal better than the present incumbent. Mr. Editor, can you announce the candidates at once without hearing from any of them. If you can, you will be doing a good service to this community. Let the election on the 20th of next month be a fair one, and let the people choose the man they want. Let the people choose the man they want. Let the people choose the man they want.

Personal Mention.

Mr. Geo. T. Gaines, of Walton, will spend the winter in Arkansas.

Mrs. Anderson, of Covington, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reed, of this place.

RACHEL HUNT, of Cave-in-Rock, Illinois, was in town Monday and Tuesday.

Mrs. MATILDA BROWN, of Columbus, Kentucky, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. O. Hunt.

Tuesday, Laham Hamilton left for his Christmas expedition to be absent several days.

Last Sunday, Miss Sule Rich, who has been visiting her sister at this place for the past few weeks, returned home.

BAUCE CHAMP, the Kentucky Man of the Cincinnati Daily Times, was in town Sunday, and says he has sold a net-gain of 1,000 head of cattle. He has inaugurated an immense boom there this fall.

SMITH'S Wild Cherry Cough Balsam, only 25 cents.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Pleasant Ridge.

The health of this community is good. Since the cold weather the equal of the hog is heard in the land.

On the 12th inst., Mr. O. T. Turner, sold his turkeys at 12 cents per pound dressed.

Charles Garrett and Jack Brown paid us a flying visit last week.

Corn gathering and stripping tobacco are the order of the day.

The young and debilitated man, and the multitude is astonished, as such a thing rarely happens, unless better pay and higher honors are given. They don't want an old stager. They can't see how Boone can be more highly honored than he is in having one of her sons so faithfully and fully fill the office of Sheriff from this district. Let the election on the 20th of next month be a fair one, and let the people choose the man they want. Let the people choose the man they want. Let the people choose the man they want.

On Wednesday, the 10th, a general procession passed here, the funeral of the remains of an infant child of Milton Kirby of Covington. It was placed in the vault at Bullsville.

On Wednesday, the 17th inst., at early dawn, a lightning bolt struck a contracted house in the Lutheran Church at a place. A number of ministers from a distance, and a large number of people, were present for a service and prayer list of 18 names. For a description and price list of 18 names, improved farms, business and dwelling houses, also a small estate. I presume on Bullsville, and said to be, call on W. P. Lodge, Hebron, Ky.

One day's work, or its equivalent, from each district of town would pave the street, or build a sidewalk from Hebron to the church, a distance of about 200 yards. The property of the town would be the property of the town. The property of the town would be the property of the town.

Professor Tanner went to the city, one day last week, and purchased eight pigs of the name of "Duke." The pigs were sold at $100, and gave as a present to the widow lady that he boards with. Mrs. Jacob Tanner, of Hebron, Ky., is the owner of the pigs.

Our stock sale on Saturday was quite limited. Not much stock offered on account of the scarcity of buyers. What was offered was mostly to the local trade at fair prices. Our catalogue for next Saturday, the 20th, reaches a much larger number of all grades, and which is more likely to attract the attention of foreign buyers.

that does not live very far from here, too; so come along!"

So on they traveled till at last they came to a corn stack, and stopped before an opening in it.

"Here is the place," said the frog, "up here, first turning to the right, and knock, that is what she told me. So now I will bid you good day," and the frog left them.

Brownie pushed on in front and soon

"This must be the place," thought she, and with a beating heart she knocked.

"Come in," answered a hearty voice, and Browne went forward into a comfortable room, in which sat a fat, merry-looking man, who, as soon as she saw her, gleamed up, exclaiming:

"Well, Browne, how, how did you get here? Where are Nimble and Squacake?" and catching her in her arms, began to kiss her only to let her go again," crying, "Plaw! how wet the child is! Have you been rolling yourself in a puddle, or what have you been doing?"

Erasmus was so bewildered that she could not speak; until the mouse, asking her if she had forgotten her Aunt Sleekskin, who had left their home when they were quite young to go and live in the country, she remembered herself, and told her aunt that Nimble and Suaveable were outside: on hearing

"Hum!" said she, "a pretty scrape you have got into—that comes of not doing what you are bid; but it is no business of mine to give you a lecture about that; you will doubtless have plenty of it when you get home, where about that; you will doubtless have plenty of it when you get home, where

It is my business to take you as soon as it is dark enough to cross over the stable wall in safety. I dare say you know now as well as any of us that the best way to play when the cat's away is to have some one keeping a sharp look out that while the play is going on the cat may not come and join in the game."

When evening set in, the little mice at home with Aunt Sleekskin, who on bringing them in to their father and mother, said:

"Here are three small culprits, who have been learning lessons in disobedience and playing with cats, which will do them more good than all the talking you could give them in a week, and in my opinion the best thing you can do is to send them to bed to think over it, and I can tell you all about where they have been."

This plan was adopted; the three children gladdly crept off to bed, whilst Aunt Steeklin sat down and had a chat with their parents, during which she must have explained matters satisfactorily, for in the morning they escaped with a slight scolding; and their father evidently thought he had no need to explain to them the way to understand it. When the cat's away the mice will play," for he never did so.

The Old-Fashioned Girl.
A writer in the Examiner and Chronicle

say, that the blessing of heaven may fall upon any "old-fashioned girl." He once knew such girls, and sketches a portrait of one of them as follows:

She flourished thirty or forty years ago. She was a little girl until she was fifteen.

She used to help her mother wash the dishes, and keep the kitchen tidy, and she had an ambition to make pies so nicely that papa could not tell the difference between them and mam-ma's.

She could fry griddle cakes at ten years of age, and darn her own stockings before she was twelve, to say nothing of knitting them herself.

She had her hours of play, and enjoyed herself to the fullest extent.

She had no very costly toys, to be sure, but her rag doll and little bureau and chair that Uncle Tom made, were just as valuable to her as the twenty-dollar wax doll and elegantly doll furniture the children have now.

She never said, "I can't." "I don't want to," to her mother, when asked to leave her play, and run up stairs or down on an errand, because she had not been brought up in that way.

Obedience was a cardinal virtue in the old-fashioned little girl.

We do not suppose she had her hair in curl-papers or crimping pins, or had it "banged" over her forehead, and her flunnie were no trouble to her.

She learned to sew, be working patch-

The old-fashioned little girl did not grow into a young lady and talk about beauty before she was in her teens, and she did not read dime-novels, and was fancying a hero in every play-boy she met.

She learned the solid accomplish-

She was not learned in French verbs or Latin declensions, and her near neighbors were spared the agony of hearing her pound out "The Maiden's Prayer" and "Silver Threads Among the Gold" twenty times a day on the piano.

family quite as comfortable as the modern young lady does hers.

It may be a vulgar assertion, but we honestly believe that when it comes to keeping a family happy, a good cook and housekeeper is to be greatly preferred above an accomplished scholar.

When both sets of qualities are found together, as they sometimes are, then is the household over which such a woman has control blessed.

The old-fashioned little girl was

She did not laugh at old people or make fun of cripples, as we saw some modern little girls doing the other day. She had respect for elders, and was not above listening to words of counsel from those older than herself.

She did not think she knew as much as her mother, and that her judgment was as good as her grandmother's.

She did not go to parties by the time
